LOVE AND DIAMONDS.

The Case of "Polk" Perry, the Newark Gambler—He is Admitted to Bail in $2,000—His Side of the Case.

The arrest last Friday of James K. Polk Perry, a member of the Newark gambling fraternity, in that city, on a requisition granted by Governor Geary, of Pennsylvania, was duly noted in the HERALD, together with the main facts, as alleged, of the case. Yesterday Perry returned to Newark, having procured the necessary $2,000 bail for his liberation from prison in the City of Brotherly Love pending his trial next September. He tells his side of the story which, while it does not relieve him of the disgrace of being a professional gambler, nor the odium of being an associate of sharpers, certainly does put a less criminal light on his exploits, and invests his story with a dash of romance of a certain character. He is really quite a good looking young man, with an honest, open face, and gets up a toilet regardless of expense. During the war he served with credit. Here, on the tented field he acquired an extraordinary passion for "poker," "seven up" and such like games. Some year or so ago in Trenton he contracted an acquaintance with a beautiful daughter of Pennsylvania named Lottie Willis. Lottie was the Cora Pearl of Trenton and was notorious for her dashing style and affaires du cœur.

By and by Lottie removed to the congenial air of Chicago, and while an inmate of a gilded palace of sin became acquainted with W. H. Strader, a well-to-do merchant of Cincinnati, Ohio. Him she fascinated and dazzled to such a degree by her varied accomplishments that nothing would satisfy him but matrimony. Prior, however, to this auspicious event, he loaned her a magnificent diamond ring, valued at $950, studded with nine brilliants, and while the fair Lottie was in Pennsylvania on a visit to her mother at Morrisville, "Poke" Perry turned up, and in order to raise some funds she gave him the ring to pawn. He did so, got $450 on it, and, as he alleges, spent it all with her, part of the money being used to build a fence around her mother's house. Meanwhile Strader and Lottie united their fortunes in the bonds of holy wedlock, but it seems she could not tear from her heart of hearts the image of young Perry. Indeed, it is averred by Perry's friends she was equally infatuated about "Poke" as Strader was about her. Poke had meanwhile made a determined effort at reform and made the acquaintance of an excellent young lady of the Ninth ward of Newark, the daughter of a member of the New Jersey Legislature, and before long anticipated being married to her. Lottie dogged him night and day, however, and finally Strader fairly fumed with jealousy and as a dernier resort, Perry's friends declare, trumped up the charge of larceny against him and hence his arrest. Several leading citizens of Newark have now come forward in behalf of the accused and announce their intention to fight his cause to the bitter end.

AN EX-CONFEDERATE GENERAL ON THE WAR.

General Joseph E. Johnston Interviewed on the Current War Topic.

General Joseph E. Johnston is sojourning at the Sweet Chalybeate Springs. A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch reports an interview with him on the subject of the war in Europe.

One of us said:—"General, they seem to be very slow about getting to business over the water." "Oh no," he replied, "two powerful nations, such as France and Prussia, require time to prepare for a war. Each side must concentrate its forces before attempting to cross into the other's country. It would be a fatal mistake to cross without efficient force and material to sustain an invasion. I suppose the leader who first finds himself with the larger force will be the one to cross."

When asked about the relative merits of the troops he said that the French had generally been successful in their combats with the Prussians, but this was as much due to their excellent generalship and the confidence of the men in their generals as to any other cause.

It was a mistake to suppose that the Prussians were not soldiers. Military knowledge was more widely diffused among the people of Prussia than of France, because the Prussian conscript was enlisted for three years only, while the French were enlisted for seven years. Thus the Prussians were more constantly changing, and military knowledge was diffused among a greater number of men.

As to the generalship of the two armies, the General expressed the opinion that France had the advantage in point of experience. The French generals had been tried in the Algerian and Crimean and Italian wars, and their merits proven. The merits of the Prussian generals could not be discussed, as they have never had opportunity as yet to display them. The short campaign of 1866 was devoid of military actions and movements sufficient to prove the military ability of their generals.

"Yes; but General, there is Von Moltke; is not he a great general?"

"He has that reputation, but not deservedly, I think. He had the luck to defeat an old and inefficient general at Sadowa; whereas if he had had a general of any tact or ability opposed to him he would have received a terrible whipping. From the only historical version of the battle in English that I have seen it appears that he started two columns from two different points to advance on Benedek. These two columns were not in communication with each other. Benedek calmly awaited the attack, and while engaged with one column the other took him in the rear of his right. But what good leader would have waited for these two columns to come up on him? Napoleon the First or our own Jackson would have advanced rapidly upon one of the columns with his entire army, defeated it, and then have returned to take the other one in its turn."

"His reputation, then, General, was as deserved as that of Grant, and he deserved about the same credit for his strategy?"

"Oh, no," rejoined the General, evidently mistaking the drift of the remark, "Grant would never have stayed there like Benedek. He would have advanced upon one of the advance colums and engaged them separately."

Touching the subject of American symathy with the opposing nations he expressed the idea, with a slight indication of disgust, that politicians would doubtless play upon their sympathies for Prussia in the approaching elections in order to influence the German vote. He could not understand it why the press of the South was so unanimous in its sympathy with Prussia. In Savannah, where he lived, there was hardly a day upon which the papers did not make an attack upon Napoleon. The impression seemed to be that Napoleon was a despot and King Frederick was not. He considered this a great mistake. Napoleon was a wise and sagacious ruler, and France was one of the freest countries in the world, and nowhere could a man find better protection for his life and property. The Prussian government was one of the most despotic of Europe. The Germans were great red republicans, and in this country had almost as a mass fought and voted against the South. As to the interests of Europe in the struggle, he thought that they should be with France, for if France were defeated Napoleon would be dethroned. Such an event as this would convulse France, and there could be no peace in Europe for a long time.

A bystander playfully remarked:—"General, you and General Lee ought to be over there to settle this."

Laughing, he said:—"The General and myself would not make much headway with their soldiers with our limited knowledge of the German language. No leader should command an army without knowing his men. Here, I think, is where the mistake lies in appointing so many American officers to the Egyptian army. It is very nice for the officers, who are well paid, but it will not prove so well for the Egyptians."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?—The Emperor Napoleon has broadly hinted at a long war. The question has thus been raised, what does he mean by a long war? Is it his purpose to play war on the Prussian frontier till England and Russia intervene for peace? or does he count upon such a struggle with Prussia as will make it a long war? As it looks to us the door of peace is still left ajar.

THE LONG BRANCH RACES.—They had another great day yesterday for the sporting and gay circles of Long Branch at Monmouth Park. The first season at that course may be safely pronounced the most brilliant and successful of any in the history of the turf on this Continent. The new steamboat and railway facilities to this Long Branch course, and the surf and the gay summer season, and the great gathering of the fashionable world, including General Grant's and Collector Murphy's and Mr. Tweed's headquarters down there, have contributed mainly to the great success of these races as a popular attraction. See our report of yesterday's sports. There will be no race to-day; but to-morrow, the last, will be the greatest day of all, with its four mile heats and the splendid horses entered for the contest.

THE REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE is in session at Saratoga and has called the State Convention for September 7, to meet at the same fashionable point. The most important work before the committee is to harmonize different factions which have been threatening such disaster to the party of late. The Fenton defection is not a very serious one, and Fenton himself appears willing to come back and be a good boy, but there is a sense of disappointment among the yeomanry of the party in this State at some of the unlucky proceedings of Congress, which the committee will find it knotty work to allay. The refusal to abolish the income tax and the neglect to admit foreign vessels to American register are mistakes that will impress themselves upon the result of the elections next fall, unless a very clear platform is adopted and some very honest names are put forward on the ticket.

THE NATHAN MURDER.—The Coroner's investigation of the circumstances of the death of Mr. Nathan began yesterday at the Civil Justice's Court, in Twenty-second street. The testimony of officer Mangan and of the two workmen, Le Maistre and Smith, throws no additional light on the dreadful mystery. After this testimony had been rendered the investigation was abruptly closed and was adjourned until Monday next. The public has been at a loss to know why the Coroner's investigation was postponed until yesterday, five days after the first inquest on the body. It is still more surprised that it should now be postponed for four days more. A case of such terribly momentous importance to all citizens assuredly demands the most immediate, incessant and impartial investigation. We may rest satisfied, however, that during the painful interval which must elapse before the Coroner's jury shall reassemble our able and indefatigable Superintendent of Police, Mr. Jourdan, will leave no stone unturned to compass the perfect ends of justice.

The News from the Seat of War—Severe Fighting and Prussian Victory.

The special cable telegrams from Europe which we publish to-day reveal the fact very plainly that the two great armies of France and Prussia which stand opposed to each other on the Rhine are almost afraid to make a first grand move. The military power which has been evoked by each nation is so vast, and the field and other strategic considerations have been so maturely considered and so nicely balanced that it may be said that the very development of the science of war almost paralyzes its most ardent votaries. Failure in the first general action may bring utter ruin to the vanquished. The monarch who will be discomfited in the fight, Bonaparte or the Hohenzollern, may be almost set down as the il perduto among the crowns of Europe. If the tri-color of France waves in triumph over the field it will illuminate the way from the point of victory towards Berlin. Should the black eagle of Prussia "spread its wings on the blast" of triumph Paris may fear for a repetition of scenes similar to those which her people experienced during the period of the occupation of the French capital by the allies. The statue of Napoleon the First was then hauled down by a rope thrown round it by Prussian hands. The representative of his name and glory may well dread their return toward the Tuileries flushed with victory, animated perhaps by the promptings of a modern Holy Alliance.

Waiting thus for the grand event the troops are employed pretty actively. Some sharp actions have just occurred. Marshal MacMahon made a personal survey of the line of the Rhine river from Kehl bridge yesterday. It was known pretty exactly that he was marking out certain points for an advance of his forces to be made on Saturday or Sunday. The Prussians observed it and anticipated him. They first advanced on the French line at one place and drove in their outposts with some loss. Next the Prussians assaulted the French position at Weissemburg. They were led on by the Crown Prince of Prussia and were in force. They stormed the French position and carried it at the point of the bayonet after a desperate struggle on the part of the French. Napoleon's troops had a general with two staff officers killed. They lost also one gun, their camp and five hundred prisoners, including many of their Algerian turcos. The Prussian regiment of Grenadier Guards suffered severely also. They had a general wounded.

Our special cable telegrams, which describe the above actions, convey an idea of the news which we may expect to hear when the perhaps final clash of arms takes place between these vast contending hosts, the one fighting for an imperial crown, a dynasty and a rebaptized name, the other for divine right, territorial consolidation and unity, fatherland, citizen franchise, military reputation and Teutonic propagandism. It will be a dread issue.

Our Shipping Interests—The Question of an Extra Session of Congress.

The wide awake little kingdom of Belgium, it appears, has stepped in to take the place of Germany in the matter of those important lines of German Atlantic merchant steamers, the place made vacant by this Franco-Prussian war. Had the Congress of the United States seconded the timely message of the President upon this subject the transfer of those German lines of steamers might have made a very simple business transaction. As it is the opportunity appears to be lost.

It is given out, however, that to-day or to-morrow, General Grant at Washington will hold a Cabinet council to consider the question of calling an extra session of Congress, and in view of the very strong probabilities of England's early participation in this Continental war, and in view of the necessity which will follow this event for some special legislation by Congress in reference to American neutrality, belligerent rights, commercial interests and the Monroe doctrine, we think the best course that the President can take is to make sure provision against all probable contingencies by a proclamation embracing say a notice of sixty days for the assembling of the two houses in extraordinary session. Fortunately, there will now be no difficulty in the matter of elections. The two houses of the present Congress, as now organized, will continue till March next, and in assembling on an extra call they will be at once ready for business; and as the compensation of the members is fixed the only costs of an extra session will be its contingent expenses. Hence, while there can be no serious objections to an extra session of Congress, the demands of the crisis for special legislation looking to American interests are unanswerable.

JOHN REAL.—The murder which John Real committed over two years ago will be finally expiated to-day. There is more of a solemn warning in this slow but determined justice than there was in the quick, retributive execution of Jack Reynolds. In the execution that will occur this morning there are none of the elements of popular vengeance, no evidence of acquiescence in a general demand for the life of some one, no hurried disproval of the vaunted theory of the murderer that "hanging was played out," which characterized the "taking off" of that poor devil of a philosopher. On the contrary Real has had two years of contest with the law for his life. He has had the benefit of appeals, writs of error, petitions for mercy and the Governor's decision. Every means of saving his life has failed, and therein we hold that the example of his execution will prove more salutary to would-be murderers than a hasty settlement of his case could have proven.

REMOVAL OF THE BROOKLYN NAVY YARD.—This subject seems at last to have assumed a practical shape by the publication of the report of Captain Ammen to the Navy Department. The objections to the present site are there given in a clear and convincing manner, so that Congress at its next session will be able to appreciate their importance and act accordingly. Now, as it seems to be pretty well settled that the Navy Yard is to be removed from its present location, the question arises—to what point shall it be transferred? From an investigation into the advantages and disadvantages of the sites thus far proposed it is clear that the weight of testimony is in favor of locating it upon some favorable point on the Hudson river, say from sixteen to twenty miles from New York city. The arguments in favor of this location have been partially presented to Congress; but now that the change is certain to be made those who favor the erection of the Navy Yard in convenient, but not too convenient, distance of the city, should begin the work of pressing their views before the next Congress in an energetic and proper manner.

Progress of the Improvements in the Public Parks.

The Board of the Department of Public Parks are now located in their new and elegant quarters on Broadway, adjoining the Chemical Bank. These quarters are central and permanent. The Department having at last settled on their own base are proceeding with the work of improving and ornamenting the public parks in a manner which, if fully carried out, will prove a lasting glory to the city and eventuate in their receiving the unanimous approval and applause of all good citizens. The march of improvement is already discernible in the Battery and the Bowling Green; and yet considerable remains to be done to make the former at all presentable after its long time most wretched and squalid condition. This is really a herculean labor, but the energetic manner in which the work has been thus far carried on betokens its speedy and satisfactory completion. The undertaking to dislodge the booth squatters around the entire semicircle of the Battery was deemed a most hazardous one for any party that should attempt it; but under the persuasive eloquence of the acting President of the Board, Judge Hilton, and the admirable tactics of his resolute lieutenant, Superintendent Wiley, the "object of the expedition" was accomplished without the loss of a single human soul, nor, possibly, the sacrifice of a single democratic vote in the First ward. The City Hall Park is gradually assuming a new and improved appearance, which is certainly creditable to the energy of the Department, considering the numbers of the seedy old "chain-gang" and the swarms of public loafers who have for years been allowed to congregate about the premises night and day, and consider that they had a pre-emption right to all "parts and appurtenances" thereof. Tompkins square is undergoing a wonderful transmogrification, so much so that it is expected when the estimable President of the Board, Mr. Peter B. Sweeny, returns from his European tour he will scarcely recognize the "right lung of the city" in its changed, purified and healthful condition. On Washington square the improvements may be delayed in consequence of contemplated operations of the Board of Public Works in opening or extending Fifth avenue; but so far as they have progressed neatness and taste have marked the change. Madison square is looming up in its beauty as if touched by a wand of magic. The grand Central Park was always in splendid condition, and, under the new management, many attractive features have been added to its manifold allurements, so that it is not only the Park par excellence of this Continent, but is fast becoming the queen park of the whole world. Our uptown friends are rejoicing in the improvements in Mount Morris square, which will eventually render that one of the most elegant and recherché of all the public pleasure grounds on the island.

Thus is the good work of ornamentation and improvement going on in all the public grounds of the city. The business is in good hands. A better board could not have been selected. All they ask is, don't let the people be too impatient. This is not the age of Arabian Nights' transformations. Rome was not built in a day. Nor were the grounds of a great city like New York relieved of the debris and dry rot and accumulated filth of some ten years in the twinkling of an eye or in the single swoop of a new broom. At the same time the people demand of the Department of Public Parks that their duties shall be exercised in a careful, judicious and economical manner, so that the taxes shall not be too heavily, if at all, increased, while, at the same time, the great improvements contemplated shall be carried out in no stingy or one-horse way.

The War in Europe and the Democracy.

The Franco-Prussian war is furnishing material for articles in favor of Napoleonism in the columns of the leading democratic organs throughout the country. Among the most prominent of these papers are those old dyed in the wool ultra-democratic sheets the Chicago Times, the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Boston Post, and others of less influence nearer home. The papers that support the cause of Prussia are denominated "Hessian sheets," and epigrams like the following are ground out:—

> That Hessian sheet, the Boston Times,
> Espouses Prussia's cause in rhymes;
> But in defending crime and treason,
> It gives us far more rhyme than reason.

The word "Hessian" is used in a sense of opprobrium, under the impression, probably, that those hireling Hessians who fought against American liberty during the Revolution came from German duchies over which Prussia held dominion. But such happens not to be the case. Prussia was then comparatively an insignificant Power, and instead of her monarch, Frederick the Great, the grand uncle of the present King of Prussia—and whose sagacity and valor as a military chieftain challenged then as they challenge now the admiration of the civilized world—being hostile to American independence, his sentiments were quite the reverse. Therefore the Prussians of our Revolutionary epoch should not be identified with the Prussia of the present day, a nation which, in the progress of destiny and amid the crumbling of dynasties, has absorbed some of those Hessian principalities whose very names are hateful to the memories of American patriotism. Our democratic organs should, therefore, be a little cautious, lest in their efforts to pander to a just American prejudice they go a little too far and alienate from their ranks a great many of their warmest friends—the true democratic republican Germans of the period.

"TRAIN UP A CHILD IN THE WAY HE SHOULD GO," &c.—Taking this trite old apothegm as a text, what will be the career of the Prince Imperial of France, who, according to imperial authority, has just received his "baptism of fire?"

The European Problem.

When, in 1847, the great bell of St. Peter's rang out the summons of Rome to defend the borders of her dominion in the Papal States against the invading Austrians, then advancing into Bologna, it sounded the first signal in these modern times of Italian nationality and independence. This was the work of Pius IX., and from city to city, throughout the Peninsula, the summons ran until a great nation, awakened from its slumbers of centuries, reappeared upon the scene at the word of its leader in arts as in arms, and began to revive the glories of the past. The whole world received this great movement with acclamation—the era of good feeling was revived, the old affection sprang up again in hearts that long had been estranged, and blessings were invoked upon the head of Pio Nono in lands hither and beyond the seas, where the title of the Popes and of their primacy had been opposed for hundreds of years.

And why was this? Shall we attempt to answer? Because—and we offer the idea with deference—the people discovered in the head of a great Christian Church one who, in championing his own nationality against a Power that then seemed overwhelming, also championed their cause. Is the cause of nationality involved in this fearful contest just opening between France and Germany? If so, whose nationality is assailed? Does any one avow a design or an endeavor to straiten France in any or in all things that she may do to consolidate her strength, to confirm her position as a great Power, and to spread abroad through all the world the influence of her arts and the amenities of her refined and beautiful civilization? If any there be we pause for a reply. We are told that the Prince of Hohenzollern's candidature was a menace and a danger to France. We have the right to ask in what? He is nearly allied in kindred blood to the house of the ruling French dynasty, and in religion he is entirely in harmony with the peculiar requirements of French policy. Is not the matter, then, narrowed down to dynastic and national jealousy? And if so what have the people, the great, struggling, suffering people of Europe and the world to do with the quarrel?

We greatly admire and respect the French people and French history, and we recognize in Napoleon III. a monarch who has done more for the prosperity and glory of his empire than any of his predecessors, not excepting even him who founded the dynasty and gave his name to it. But in this contest we must recall him and the gallant people who so enthusiastically follow his standard to the eternal principles of justice. France has revelled in glory; her standard has made the tour of the world; the nations look to her for liberty and not for enslavement; l'Empire c'est la paix was a pledge and a promise given; the idea goes back to the tenets which should guide the centre and the head of the Christian Church and its self-assumed or chosen champion. If this view be correct—and we offer it as a journalist comprehending the solemnity of our mission—it is for France, as the exponent of the Christian faith for the majority of its adherents, to arrest the tide of war and havoc and to hold out the olive branch of peace.

This is the delay and this is the situation. We care nothing for the rumors of war that have reached us thus far. The reluctance to engage on either side reveals the consciousness of an uncertain cause. What more splendid or glorious opportunity for a truly great nation that has stepped into the arena, thrown down the guantlet and exhibited the tremendous resources at her disposal, than to say, even in the eleventh hour, "Let us prove that we are truly great—let us have peace!"

PERTH AMBOY'S MEANNESS.—Perth Amboy still asserts her superiority as a port of entry to all the quarantine laws and health regulations of her ambitious rival, the port of New York. Recently a yellow fever vessel detained at our Quarantine was allowed to put to sea; but instead she put into Perth Amboy, where she was readily admitted, the officers of that port not having so much to do that they can afford to stand off on a little matter of yellow fever. From Perth Amboy the vessel came on to Brooklyn under new sailing orders, and holding evidently to the opinion that not coming from an infected port she was entitled to pass without question. It was not so, however, for the captain was arrested yesterday and is held in one thousand dollars bail for violating the quarantine laws. He will and ought to be severely punished; but there ought to be some punishment for the consignees of the vessel under whose orders he acted, and for the port authorities of Perth Amboy, who, in their hopeless attempt at commercial rivalry with New York, thus offer a premium on infection.

THE GERMAN VESSELS IN PORT.—There are nine large North German ocean steamers now lying in the port of New York, unable to sail for Hamburg or Bremen for fear of capture by French cruisers, unauthorized to discharge their crews in a foreign port and not allowed to register themselves under the flag of safety—the flag of the United States. There are also twenty-seven sailing vessels in the same predicament. If anything can exemplify the stupidity of Congress in refusing to admit foreign vessels to American register this startling exhibit does so. The expense to which these steamers and sailing vessels are subjected probably aggregates fourteen thousand dollars per day, and there is no relief for them except in the cessation of the war. It may be, too, that the French steamers will be tied up in just the same way when the Prussian navy gets more of its cruisers afloat. As it is now here is over two million dollars' worth of property which we need lying at our doors useless and unused through the culpable neglect of Congress.

ALL SQUARE IN THE SUB-TREASURY.—The officials who were sent to New York to count the money in the Assistant Treasurer's office have accomplished their task, and returning to Washington they report to the Acting Secretary that "they found everything correct." This is an additional satisfactory symptom of the healthy condition of our financial system.

The New Swedish Prima Donna.

The English papers have just got hold of the fact, which the HERALD published some time ago, that the American manager of the famous Swedish artiste, Christine Nilsson, had engaged to pay her a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars in gold for a six weeks' engagement in the United States. This is a handsome price, it is true; but then the liberality of the American public will cheerfully make it good to Manager Strakosch, and will pile up an equivalent profit on the back of it. Genuine talent never fails in this country. The manager who is wise enough to comprehend the taste of the people and to introduce here from Europe the leading stars of artistic genius is pretty sure to become the rich manager. The public will support merit, whether in opera or tragedy; but it must be merit of the first class. Jenny Lind's engagement was, as all remember of that sweetest bird of song, an ovation of gold. Ristori, in her magnificent interpretation of tragedy, delivered in a tongue almost unknown to her audience, had a grand success—such a success, perhaps, as she has never won in Europe, either before or since; which proves that nothing great in art fails in America.

The youthful rival of the Swedish Nightingale of twenty years ago will be among us in a few weeks, seeking for those favors at this side of the Atlantic which have been heaped upon her with so much love and affection in all the capitals of Europe. Mlle. Nilsson is announced to appear at the French theatre in Italian opera on the 19th of September. We anticipate with pleasure her grand impersonations of the two or three leading parts which have made her so famous—"La Traviata," "Marguerite," the gentle Norman peasant; Alice, in Meyerbeyer's superb composition, "Robert le Diable," in which she is said to excel all her predecessors, in that essential combination of beauty of person, a voice of exquisite sweetness and a strength of dramatic power which the character demands—marvellous, the critics say—in an artiste so tender in the finer delineations of human passion. Mlle. Nilsson's success in this most difficult character has been immense.

Then she has a full répertoire of Italian opera, comprising the works of Donizetti, Mozart, Meyerbeer, Verdi, Auber; all, in fact that are familiar to us in the rôles of great artistes. We are not disposed to regard the debût of Nilsson in this country as a possible success, but rather as a foregone triumph. If she is not greeted with the same wild enthusiasm which characterized the coming of her great prototype, Jenny Lind, it will be because our reason is a little more balanced now than it was at that time; because we are better educated in art and the ways of art; because we have had twenty years training, and that training is not lost upon us. But we anticipate that the welcome extended to the second Nightingale, Christine Nilsson, will be quite as appreciative as that which hailed Jenny Lind with tumultuous demonstrations. We are anxious and willing to accord to the young Scandinavian songstress who is about to come among us so soon a recognition of her splendid genius which will leave her no reason to regret the honors she is leaving behind her in Europe.

General Grant's Platform.

The platform of General Grant—peace, retrenchment of expenses, correction of abuses, reduction of taxes and redemption of the debt—is a very good platform for the republican party if they only knew it. There was no surplus, or next to no surplus, revenue under Johnson's administration; for Johnson was so absorbed in the work of defending "the constitution as it was" that he had no time to look after the interests of the Treasury. Hence the whiskey rings and various other rings for defrauding the revenue abstracted from the resources of the Treasury millions upon millions of money. Under General Grant most of these leakages, if not all of them, have been stopped, and such has been the effect of this policy of practical reform, connected with a general cutting out of needless expenses, that with a reduction of the national taxations to the extent, if we are not mistaken, of over a hundred millions, all told, since January, 1868, General Grant's administration is enabled to present the following exhibit as its reductions of the public debt:—

Public debt, decrease for July last	$17,034,123
Public debt, decrease since March, 1870	69,004,001
Public debt, decrease during Grant's administration	156,138,784
Average monthly decrease for 1869	7,261,231
Average monthly decrease for 1870	13,890,805

One hundred and fifty-six millions reduction of the debt, on a greatly diminished taxation list, and over one hundred millions as a reserved fund in the Treasury, is an excellent record for General Grant's administration; and such facts make the strongest platform of all platforms for the party in power. In short, the republican party, which was given a new lease of power in the election of General Grant, can only maintain its ascendancy upon the safe, sound, honest and solid platform of Grant's administration—peace, retrenchment, reform, the development of our resources, the reduction of our taxes and the redemption of the debt. While the ship of state is thus smoothly sailing before the wind the captain may be excused in a little rest and refreshment, which he has been enjoying in his cabin, or, as the poet has it—

> Looking out on the Atlantic,
> From his cottage by the sea.

STEAMBOAT RACING.—Of all kinds of racing steamboat racing is the most dangerous. Neither the peril nor the responsibility for possibly fatal consequences is lessened by the fact that the passengers on racing steamboats are often the most eager to encourage the rivalry of competing captains. The contest on Wednesday between the "State of Maine" and the "Rip Van Winkle," on their trip to the Fishing Banks—each boat being heavily laden with passengers, liable at any moment to be blown to pieces or drowned by an accidental explosion—may have been exceedingly interesting to the participators in it, but it was nevertheless an offence as worthy of punishment as any other crime.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND has again advanced the rate of discount, this time to six per cent. The gold market responded but faintly, the price barely touching 122, while our bonds in London continued firm and strong. Consols, however, were weak and yielded a fraction. The facts enumerated are certainly very significant.

The Bank of England Feeling the War Pressure.

We learn by telegram from London that the officers of the Bank of England have announced a further advance in the rate of discount of one per cent. The minimum rate is now six per cent. The barometer does not indicate more surely the sudden changes of weather or the coming storm than does the Bank of England the financial disturbance and apprehension of approaching disasters in Great Britain. The war between France and Prussia, and the complications growing out of it, have alarmed the Bank authorities. Looking, too, at the extraordinary preparations of England to place herself on a war footing, with the tone of public sentiment and the language of the leaders of all parties in Parliament, it is not unlikely that the Bank has received a hint from the government to be ready for a crisis. At such a time as this there is a tendency to draw away the specie of the Bank. The demand for it abroad, and the rush of timid people to get hold of it for the purpose of hoarding against an evil day, would soon bring the specie reserve down to a low ebb if the Bank were not to take precautionary measures to prevent that. Raising the rate of discount is always the first step—putting on the screws, as it is called—to prevent a drain of specie. Six per cent as the minimum is a high rate of discount in England, and it rarely goes up to that except in times of war or a great commercial crisis. It is evident, therefore, that there is serious apprehension in England that she cannot be kept out of the war. It is probable that the rate of discount will be raised still higher. We should not be surprised to hear within a week that it has gone up to seven per cent, unless something remarkable and unexpected should occur to indicate determined neutrality on the part of Great Britain or the prospect of the war not spreading. We do not apprehend that the action of the Bank of England will have any serious or lasting effect upon the financial affairs of this country. It might cause a temporary depression in our bonds and stocks abroad, but this would not continue long. While we remain at peace and go on in our wonderful career of prosperity there need be no fear that the credit of this country will remain depressed whatever events may happen in Europe.

JUDGE BEDFORD a few days ago, in sentencing a burglar, gave a momentous warning to the burglarious profession generally. He said that a person found in a house for burglarious purposes was liable to indictment and conviction for intent to do murder if necessary, and under that head could be made to suffer twenty years' imprisonment at hard labor. This warning is timely. Murder is, of course, the very last resort of the burglar, and he is not likely to resort to it except when he is detected and assailed; but he still counts it among the probabilities of every burglary, and is consequently ready to commit it if occasion requires. Every burglar, then, is a murderer in intent, and if he does not actually commit murder it is because some better and less dangerous mode of perfecting the crime of burglary presents itself.

WORKINGMEN'S GRATEFULNESS.

Interesting Meeting of the Workingmen of the Sixth Senatorial District.

At the corner of Twelfth street and Third avenue quite an interesting conference was held last evening of the workingmen of the Sixth Senatorial district. Mr. John R. Hennessey, late member of the Assembly for the Fourteenth district, was in the chair. Mr. H. E. Fitzsimmons acted as secretary. Mr. James R. Purdy made the first address, the pith of which was in opposition to coolie contract labor and forced Chinese emigration, his remarks evidently coinciding with the views of his hearers.

Mr. Nelson W. Young spoke next, and after touching upon the general questions of the labor movement he turned to Mr. Hennessey, stating that on entering the hall he had been requested to publicly tender him the thanks of the workingmen for the able manner in which he represented them last winter in the Assembly. Extolling the honesty, perseverance and zeal of Mr. Hennessey, he, in the name of the workingmen of the Sixth Senatorial district, presented him a gold watch and chain. It is a heavy hunting case, railway timekeeper, full jewelled, with an extraordinarily heavy chain, and bears the following inscription:—

> Presented by the workingmen of New York city to Hon. John R. Hennessey, for his noble exertions in battling for our rights in the Legislature of 1870. The Eight Hour law, abolishing the Conspiracy law and other measures, we will cherish with grateful remembrance.

The price of the gift is said to have been $450. Mr. Hennessey responded feelingly, announcing himself a candidate for re-election, which announcement was received with applause. Messrs. John Ennis, Patrick Welch, Theodore Banks and others of the Workingmen's Union made appropriate remarks, resolutions complimentary to the course of the workingmen's candidate were passed, and the meeting adjourned.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Two Persons Injured—Singular Freak of an Electric Spark.

During the brief but severe storm which prevailed yesterday afternoon the residence of Mr. James Stillman, in Washington avenue, Morrisania, Westchester county, was struck by lightning, which, after demolishing a chimney, darted into the basement, where it struck and partially paralyzed a lady member of the family, named Armstrong. At the same instant the electric current entered through a rear window of the printing office owned by Mr. Stillman, and distant about forty feet from his house, striking a compositor named William Duane, throwing him to the floor, inflicting a ghastly wound on his head and completely paralyzing the left side of his body. Four type cases were hurled from their places, two of them being almost completely destroyed, while the contents of all four were scattered over the office. The subtle fluid disappeared through a brick wall, leaving an aperture about an inch in diameter, through which daylight was plainly visible. Both of the sufferers had immediate medical aid, when their injuries, although serious, were found to be not necessarily of a fatal nature.

A Council of War at the Front—MacMahon Viewing the Rhine—A Forward Movement of the French Probably at Hand—How It Will be Conducted and Its Effect.

PARIS, August 4—7 P. M.

Telegrams from the army at Strasburg report that yesterday, after a French council of war had been held, Marshal MacMahon, attended by his Chief of Staff, General Coulson, surveyed (viewed) the Rhine river from Kehl bridge upwards.

The Marshal afterwards visited Brumath, twenty miles north, where a cavalry division, with a portion of the First division of French infantry, are encamped.

From these movements on the part of the French commander it is conjectured here, and by the army, that MacMahon, with the contingents from the Algerian army of Africans and French turcos, is about to cross the Rhine, dashing rapidly by way of Carlsruhe and Heidelberg to Frankfort, and that thence he will endeavor to cut off the railroad communication between Berlin and the Rhine, leaving Mayence on his left.

While this operation is being conducted by MacMahon the main army of France will, it is thought, push on through the lower Rhine provinces to Mayence and Coblentz.

These forward movements of the French are, it is rumored, fixed to take place on Saturday, 6th inst.

General de Ganjal commands the second division of this corps, rendered vacant by the death of General Douay, who dropped dead of apoplexy on the 1st inst.

Value of the Saarbrucken Victory—Prussian Prisoners and Wounded—Duke De Grammont Against Bismarck.

PARIS, August 4, 1870.

The heights taken by the French at Saarbruck form a key to the railway approaches to Treves—hence the importance of the conquest.

Fourteen Prussian soldiers captured at the attack on Saarbruck passed through Metz late yesterday afternoon. Part of them were on their way to Belfort and part to Thionville, where they will be imprisoned.

The Prussian wounded at Metz have been cared for the same as the French.

The Duke de Grammont has issued a circular, reaffirming that aggressive propositions originated in Berlin. "France made none; on the contrary she commenced her disarmament. Count Bismarck bases his proposals on his anxiety about the plans of Russia," giving the details, which the Duke de Grammont temporarily withholds. The Duke concludes that, "owing to the falsehoods Bismarck has already uttered through fear, he has lost all claim to be believed hereafter."

The Journal Officiel publishes the circular of the Duke de Grammont on the disarmament. The document, after refuting the statements of Count Bismarck, as above, terminates thus:—

If Europe remains armed, if a million of men are on the eve of the shock of battle, it cannot be denied that the responsibility is Prussia's, as she repulsed all idea of disarmament when we caused the proposal to be made and began by giving the example. Her conduct is explained by the fact that at that hour when France confidingly reduced her military contingent the Cabinet at Berlin was secretly organizing the candidature of a Prussian Prince for the throne of Spain, so provocative of mischief. Whatever calumnies the Federal Chancellor may invent we fear not; he has lost the right to be believed. The conscience of Europe and history will say Prussia sought this war by inflicting upon France, preoccupied with the development of her political institutions, an outrage no nation could accept without incurring contempt.

The Constitutionnel says that the agent of Prince Charles, of Roumania, in Paris, took an active part in procuring the renunciation of the throne of Spain by his brother Prince Leopold. The Berlin government, irritated at the conduct of the agent, have demanded his dismissal; but Prince Charles refuses to yield to the demand.

The Empress came to the Tuileries to-day and presided at a Council of Ministers.

The Gaulois says the Emperor will issue a decree making the "Marseillaise" henceforth the national air of France. During the fight at Saarbruck it was played by the bands.

The French hospital service have 24,000 beds ready for the wounded.

SPECIAL TELEGRAMS TO THE HERALD.

Prussian Advance on French Soil—Severe Fighting—French Outposts Driven In and a Railroad Destroyed—Marshal MacMahon Anticipated.

CARLSRUHE, August 4—6:30 P. M.

There has been severe fighting between the Prussians and French at Weissemburg both yesterday and to-day.

A large force of Prussian troops advanced between Weissemburg and Lauterburg into the territory of France, marching a distance of ten miles on French soil.

This force succeeded in driving in the advanced posts of the French ("enemy") and destroying the railroad between Strasburg and Lauterburg, along which it was supposed that Marshal MacMahon was preparing to advance on the Prussian army.

The French loss in this affair is heavy.

The Prussians took many prisoners.

Prussian Assault on a Division of MacMahon's Corps—The Crown Prince of Prussia in Action—A Bayonet Charge and Prussian Victory—A French General and Two Staff Officers Killed—A French Camp and Many Prisoners Taken.

CARLSRUHE, August 4—Night.

The latest despatches from the army state that the Prussian victory over the French in the engagement reported to-day was a very decisive one.

The Prussian troops which were engaged in it were regiments of the Fifth and Eleventh army corps, with the Second army corps of Bavaria, commanded by the Crown Prince of Prussia in person.

On the French side was General Douay's division of MacMahon's army corps, stationed at Weissemburg.

Geis Hill, in the rear of Weissemburg, was carried by storm at the point of the bayonet by the Prussians after an obstinate resistance.

The general in command of the French, in the absence of Douay by death, was killed, with two officers of his staff.

The French encampment was taken. One piece of artillery was captured. Five hundred wounded men, including many of the French turcos, fell into the hands of the Prussians.

On the German side General Kirchbach was wounded.

The Prussian Grenadier Guards, with the Fiftieth regiment of the (Prussian) line, suffered severely.

Prussian Army Guard of Berlin—The French Threat of Entry—Battle Details from Saarbruck.

BERLIN, August 4, 1870.

The officers of the Union Club, of this city, have accepted a large wager, offered by M. Thomas, of Paris, that the French will be in Berlin on the 15th of August.

A Prussian reserve of one hundred thousand men is encamped in front of Berlin.

Forage is scarce in the Rhine provinces, and the Prussian horse is suffering severely.

The Prussian government furnishes the following account, more in detail, of the affair at Saarbruck:—

A feeble garrison held Saarbruck until the French deployed and advanced in three columns. The Prussians then retired to a position north of the town to observe the enemy. In spite of the free use by the French of mitrailleuses, artillery and Chassepots, our losses were only two officers and seventy men. The loss of the French appeared to be more serious. Our troops were admirably cool.

Rumor of a Special Mission from France—Shelter to German Vessels—Financial Consequences—A French War Song by a German.

LONDON, August 4, 1870.

It is rumored that the Count de Caumont la Force has arrived in London as a special messenger from the Duke de Grammont to assure the government that France will respect the neutrality of Belgium, and it is added that he has met with a cool reception.

LONDON, August 4, 1870.

The ports of England are rapidly filling up with North German vessels anxious to escape the French cruisers.

A circular has been received from Señor Agasta, defending Spain as innocent of the cause of the trouble between France and Prussia. The document is well received.

The officers of the Bank of England have announced a still further advance in the rate of discount of one per cent. The minimum rate is now six per cent.

The official report of the Bank of England, made public to-day, shows that the amount of specie in vault has decreased £490,000 since the last report.

It is asserted that the bank rate was raised for political effect, not from financial necessity.

Offenbach, the Opéra Bouffe composer, though a German, has published a French war song, entitled "God Speed the Emperor."

THE DEATH OF GENERAL DOUAY.

A special telegram reports the sudden death by apoplexy of General Douay, of the French army. A similar report was telegraphed from London some days ago, but was subsequently denied. There are two generals of the name of Douay in the French army, one of whom has until recently been an aide-de-camp on the staff of the Emperor (F. Douay), while the other (C. Douay) has been in command of the Seventh Territorial division, with headquarters at Besançon. Neither of these officers has particularly distinguished himself in war.

THE NORTH GERMAN MARINE.

Effects of the Franco-Prussian War—Nine Steamships and Twenty-Seven Sailing Vessels Blockaded in Our Waters—$13,000 Expenses per Day—American Registers Desired—Mistake of Congress.

The war now being waged in Europe is having a disastrous effect on our commerce with North Germany, and as the Prussian navy, though yet in a state of infancy, is not to be despised, a suspension of ocean travel between the United States and France may take place any day, as it has already done between this port and Germany. There are at present in this port awaiting orders from Europe nine steamers and twenty-seven sailing vessels, who may neither pursue their homeward course nor go into the coasting trade. The following embraces the entire list:—

STEAMSHIPS.

Hammonia, Hamburg Co.	Hannover, Bremen Co.
Cimbria, Hamburg Co.	Weser, Bremen Co.
Westphalia, Hamburg Co.	Frankfort, Bremen Co.
Union, Bremen Co.	Hermann, Bremen Co.
America, Bremen Co.

SAILING VESSELS.

Musca, brig, Elsfurth.	Jenny, bark, Bremen.
Capella, bark, Bremen.	Herschel, ship, Hamburg.
Johann, ship, Bremen.	Grafin Knyphausen, bark, Prussia.
Johannes, bark, Bremen.	Sirene, bark, Prussia.
Louise, bark, Ancham.	Cedar, bark, Bremen.
Calsow Stesow, brig, Wismar.	Levine, brig, Blumenthal.
Marco Polo, bark, Bremen.	Arcturus, bark, Prussia.
Everhard Delius, bark, Bremen.	Neptune, ship, Bremen.
Everhard, bark, Bremen.	Kolga, bark, Hamburg.
Charlotte, ship, Bremen.	Betty, ship, Bremen.
Cecrops, bark, Prussia.	Harzberg, bark, Bremen.
Frederick Scalla, bark, Prussia.	Gutenberg, ship, Hamburg.
Shakspeare, ship, Hamburg,	Elwine Kreplin, bark, Prussia.
Brazileira, bark, Bremen.

These vessels and their crews are, of course, giving their owners much anxiety and involve a great expense. For instance, the six steamers of the Bremen Company, averaging 3,000 tons each, cost about $5,000 per day, and the three belonging to the Hamburg line about $2,500, while the twenty-seven sailing vessels may be aggregated at $6,000. The agents of the companies, according to marine international law, cannot dismiss the crews in this or any other foreign port. They, however, can send them back by other vessels and pay the expenses; but as it is expected that the war will not be of long duration some reluctance is felt in dismissing a body of able seamen, speaking German, whose places may not easily be supplied. There were some hopes during the hesitancy evinced to open hostilities that trade might be resumed, and both France and Prussia would mutually agree not to molest the merchantmen of their respective antagonists; but this hope has died away, as it is evidently the policy of the French Emperor to maintain a strict blockade of all the North German ports, and thus destroy a commerce which has hitherto been annually increasing at a most satisfactory rate.

NO INSTRUCTION.

have been received by the North German Consul General from the home government respecting the policy to be pursued, nor have any efforts been made to induce Congress to pass the bill to admit foreign ships to American register. The owners would now be only too anxious to dispose of a valuable property which is comparatively useless. A surreptitious coasting trade might be done by sending vessels to New Orleans via Havana and evading our laws by clearing for the latter port and from there taking out new papers for New Orleans. But this, however, is not the season for either the cotton or sugar trade, and the crews of these German vessels would object to go to ports infected with yellow fever; besides, the steamers are too expensive to run to make such a trade lucrative.

THE MISTAKE OF CONGRESS

in not passing the bill to admit foreign ships to American register is daily becoming more apparent to the community, and though trade with North German ports may be suspended a splendid opportunity presents itself for the admission of a very fine class of vessels. One large shipping house informs the writer that it would add a great deal to our wealth if Congress had been influenced to pass such a bill as will admit the ships, steamers and vessels of all nations that desire to avail themselves of our flag, under which, when once registered, they cannot change to another. Mr. Nathaniel McKay, the shipbuilder, says in a recent letter to the HERALD, referring to the foregoing:—

This clause would only cover the class that ply regularly between European and American ports. If an owner of one ship desires to sell his ship to a party to go under another flag he should be allowed; but I think a bill to admit those ships for the present emergency should not be allowed. They might want to transfer again immediately after the war closes in Europe. The shipbuilders may talk and importune Congress and do all they can; they will not build a ship, nor can they. I have abandoned the business, or, rather, the business has abandoned me. They all have to try something else for a living. I received a letter to-day from Quebec from a shipowner stating that if Congress passes the bill to admit foreign ships he will come immediately and transfer his ships under the American flag.

A number of the agents of German shipowners expressed the willingness of their principals to transfer their ships under the American flag as more protection will be given them and not so many difficulties experienced in obtaining crews, besides the facilities given to American vessels in all foreign ports are greater than those extended to an infant maritime Power such as that of Prussia. The $2,500,000 worth of shipping now lying idle in our harbor is a grievous eyesore to our German citizens, and the interruption in trade, especially of petroleum, of which Germany consumed immense quantities, will cause some heavy failures.

Miscellaneous Local Paragraphs of Interest.

There are 2,251 workmen now actively employed in fitting out ships-of-war at the Navy Yard.

Frank Sellet was arrested on suspicion of burglariously entering the grocery store of George Self, at Bay Ridge, L. I. He was committed.

An elderly female, Mary Brown, was arraigned before Justice Lynch yesterday, charged with having kidnapped the child of Charles McLaughlin, of Jamaica. She was committed for examination.

Three young fellows who were caught in the act of breaking into No. 100 Greene avenue were arraigned yesterday before Justice Riely. They will be examined on Wednesday next.

Ellen Thompson, an inebriated prisoner in one of the cells of the Eighth precinct, was cut down by the doorman yesterday from a hanging situation. She fastened a portion of her dress around her neck and made fast the other end to the grating of the cell door. Life was almost extinct when she was discovered.

At an early hour yesterday morning the barge Atlantic, Captain Henry Hand, lying at the dock near the Fulton ferry, was, during the temporary absence of the "skipper," boarded by river pirates. The latter broke into the cabin and burst open Captain Hand's trunk, from which they helped themselves and then made off.

The Inspector of Boilers, Thomas F. Powers, reports having examined 300 boilers during the past quarter. There were 235 applicants for permits to take charge of boilers, of which number 182 were found qualified. The certificates of two engineers have been revoked, and one proprietor was fined fifty dollars for employing an unlicensed engineer.

It is proposed by several of the depositors of the Central Bank to obtain a counter order from the Supreme Court removing Mr. John H. Spader as receiver and placing the matter in the hands of the Board of Directors. There appears, however, to be a confidence felt in the assertion that the depositors will all be paid in full; but it will be several days, perhaps weeks, before such a settlement can be made.

Mr. James Luckey was aroused from his slumbers on Wednesday night, at his residence, No. 409 Cumberland street, by the loud barking of a dog which he kept in the yard. Arming himself with a pistol, he proceeded to the lower part of the house to investigate the cause of the alarm. He was somewhat startled upon descending the basement stairway at beholding two men leisurely making their exit through the open door. He did not pursue them. It was subsequently ascertained that the housebreakers, for such the fellows were, had effected an entrance by sawing a piece out of the panel of the door, through which, by thrusting the hand, they were enabled to shove back the bolts and unlock the door, the key being in the lock upon the inside. There was nothing missed by Mr. Luckey.

George W. Baker, Jr., was arrested yesterday afternoon and locked up in the Sixth precinct station house to answer a charge of assault and battery preferred by his father, ex-Alderman Baker, of No. 229 Ewen street, E. D. The arrest of young Baker, who is known to be rather fast, gave rise to alarming reports, one of which was that he had attempted to murder his father while the latter was in the act of rebuking him for having stolen property in his possession. Nothing of the kind occurred, according to the statements of both son and father. The latter says that he caused the arrest of the young man because he abused his sister, and the young man retorts that his father does not know what he says, as he is nearly always under the influence of whiskey and chloroform.

A RAILROAD OUTRAGE.

About eight o'clock yesterday morning a German named Hermann Pietzner presented himself at the police station at Trenton, N. J., with his head and face terribly disfigured. Dr. Rogers was immediately sent for, and, on the wounds being properly cared for, the following sad story was elicited from the patient:—It appears that Pietzner left Omaha, Neb., some day last week, with a view of reaching New York, where he expected to receive a free passage to Europe as a recruit for the Prussian army. On reaching Philadelphia his money was all spent, and not being able to purchase a ticket he went aboard of the freight train, hiding himself between two cars. About three o'clock yesterday morning he was discovered by the conductor on nearing Trenton, N. J., and pitched overboard while the cars were moving at the rate of six or eight miles an hour. Fortunately he sustained no injury beyond a severe cut in the head, from which he is likely to recover.

THE SALESWOMEN.

The saleswomen's early closing movement made another step forward last evening. A meeting was held at Plimpton Hall. In the absence of the Plymouth church hero divine, Mr. Beecher, who has been honored by being elected as president, Mr. Houghton was chosen to preside. Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull, the female banker and prospective Presidential candidate for 1872, expressed her approval of the movement and promised her aid to insure its success. Miss "Netta" made a lengthy address to the twenty-five young ladies present, urging united action, and assuring them of the support of the press. Mrs. Batty spoke in a similar strain. A gentleman, member of the Dry Goods Clerks' Early Closing Association, promised them all needed help, and so did Mr. Houghton and another gentleman present. Miss "Netta" again "mounted the rostrum"—using a phrase of the old Romans—and called for subscriptions of funds in the shape of initiation fees, but was rather unsuccessful. A Mr. Drury, well known among workingmen as a "public speaker," then obtained the floor and made one of his usual harangues, after which the meeting adjourned.

Miscegenation in High Life—Marriage of a White State Senator to a Colored Woman.

JACKSON, August 4, 1870.

An unusual event occurred here last night in the marriage of Albert T. Morgan (white), a republican Senator in the Mississippi Legislature, to Miss Carrie Highgate (colored). The ceremony was performed by a colored minister. The couple left immediately for Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. Morgan's former home, via Louisville. The affair naturally creates a sensation in the community. Morgan is a lawyer of some ability, is of temperate habits and was colonel of a Michigan regiment of the federal army. The bride is of a decidedly dusky hue.

The Election Progressing Quietly—Colored Repeaters—A Congressional Candidate Floored.

RALEIGH, August 4, 1870.

With the exception of an attempt by radical negroes to intimidate a conservative negro named Williams, whose face was slapped, the election here progresses quietly, though excitement is great. A large number of negroes of the Second regiment of State troops are in a crowd at the polls wearing their side arms. It is charged that negroes vote the radical ticket here and then depart to vote under other names at other precincts in the county. Both parties are sanguine of success, but it is impossible to conjecture the result. Harris, colored candidate for Congress in this district, will probably be defeated. Governor Holden made his appearance at the polls this morning to intimidate conservatives.

An altercation took place this afternoon between an Englishman and Harris, the colored candidate for Congress, during which the latter was knocked down by the former for calling him a European convict. Considerable excitement ensued, but it was soon quieted by the Mayor.

Conservative Congressman Elected in the Raleigh District—The Legislature Claimed by the Conservatives.

RALEIGH, August 4, 1870.

Election returns are exceedingly meagre so far; only the precincts on the telegraph lines have been heard from, mostly indicating reduced republican majorities. The conservative candidate for the district claims his election by one thousand majority. In Alamance, one of the alleged insurrectionary districts, the election passed off quietly, and was conducted in the usual manner.

The prisoners, about forty in number, were removed to Yanceyville yesterday, where the others are thus depriving them of their vote in Alamance, which has gone republican by a reduced majority. Owing to the lack of telegraph communication with the western portion of the State it will be several days before the result of the election is ascertained; but so far as heard from the conservatives claim three of the Congressmen, an increase of two, and a majority in both branches of the Legislature. There are increased majorities in all the former conservative counties, with a corresponding reduction in the republican counties. The Congressional vote in the district where the insurrectionary counties are is closer and the result doubtful.

It is stated that $265,000 of the accumulated special tax fund levied to pay the interest on the repudiated railroad bonds has been paid out of the treasury for the equipment, subsistence and pay of the two regiments of State troops now operating in Caswell and Alamance counties.

MARYLAND.

Overissue of Stock of the Northwestern Virginia Railroad Company.

BALTIMORE, August 4, 1870.

There were rumors yesterday of an over issue of the stock of the Northwestern Virginia Railroad Company, commonly known as the Parkersburg Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which is leased and worked by the latter company. The overissue is stated in the morning papers to amount to $300,000, made by the secretary of the company, John L. Crawford, who has resigned his office. The amount at which the overissue is fixed is a supposition merely, as no statement has been made by Mr. Crawford, and the directors of the road have not concluded their examination. The overissue is all hypothecated in Baltimore at about fifteen dollars on the share, the par value of which is fifty dollars. Crawford, the secretary of the company, was the confidential clerk of the banking house of Alexander Brown & Sons for many years. Ex-Senator Van Winkle, of West Virginia, president of the company, it is stated, entrusted to the secretary blank certificates of stock bearing his signature.

WESTERN RAILWAYS.

Election of Directors of the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad—Rock Island and St. Louis Railroad Bonds.

CHICAGO, August 4, 1870.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Company was held at Cedar Rapids yesterday and the following gentlemen were elected directors:—J. I. Blair and D. C. Blair, New Jersey; W. F. Glidden, Oakes Ames and F. Nickerson, of Boston; W. W. Walker, Charles E. Walker and George Douglass, of Cedar Rapids, and H. S. Cremton, of Pennsylvania. The report of the earnings of the road for the year ending June 30 foots up $3,342,108.

Judge Porter to-day, at Monmouth, Ill., granted a preliminary injunction restraining the issue of Warren county bonds to the Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis Railroad to the amount of $20,000. This causes much excitement among the friends of the road.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Congressional Nominations—Declinations and Speculations.

ILLINOIS.

The Republican Congressional Convention of the Eighth Illinois district nominated Colonel Jonathan Merriam, of Tazewell county, on the 180th ballot. The district is republican and is now represented by John Beatty, republican.

The Democratic Congressional Convention of the Tenth Illinois district met at Corbinville on the 3d, and on the seventh ballot nominated Judge E. F. Rice, of Montgomery county. The district is democratic and is now represented by Truman H. Hoag, democrat.

OHIO.

The Republican Congressional Convention at Monroeville, Ohio, on the 3d inst., nominated Charles Foster, of Seneca county, from the Ninth Ohio district. The district is democratic, and is now represented by Edward F. Dickinson, democrat.

NEW YORK.

Hon. A. H. Laflin (rep.), representative from the New York Twentieth district, declines a renomination in a letter, in which he says:—

My service in Congress has compelled me to forego all pursuits of profit, and those acquainted, as you are, with my personal affairs need not be told of the necessity which forbids longer neglect of obligations to those dependent upon me. Without my going further, you will see that party duty and personal interest coincide in suggesting my withdrawal from the canvass.

VIRGINIA.

At a republican convention held on the 3d inst. in Portsmouth, Va., James H. Pratt, Jr., present member of Congress from the Second district, was nominated by nearly a unanimous vote for re-election.

Judge Alexander Rives is proposed as the radical candidate for Congress from the Lynchburg district.

General William Terry, of Wythe county, is the conservative candidate for Congress from the Virginia Eighth district. He succeeded Stonewall Jackson in the command of his famous brigade, and is universally esteemed as a high toned and honorable gentleman and a strong friend of the Union.

WYOMING TERRITORY.

The republicans held a meeting Monday, 1st inst., at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, to select delegates to a territorial convention to be held at Laramie City soon for the purpose of nominating a delegate to Congress. The session was stormy and the result was unsatisfactory to many republicans, who declare their intention of voting the democratic ticket. The Territory is now represented by S. F. Nuckolls, democrat.

Politics in California.

The Sacramento Record thinks that Romualdo Pacheco, native Californian or Mexican, and Eugene L. Sullivan, who does no credit to a good Irish name, are the two most prominent radical candidates for Governor. Pacheco can throw a riata, ride a bucking horse and pick a guitar. He is mentioned in order to catch the Greaser vote in the lower counties. Sullivan has money, and he might possibly catch a few of those enemies to themselves and foes to their adopted country, radical Irishmen. But luckily the breed is scarce.

THE MORMON HARVEST.

It would seem that Mormonism has not yet lost its influence on the credulous. Converts are still to be found in Christendom; but it is proper to say the harvest is gathered among the most ignorant classes in Europe. Happening to visit Castle Garden yesterday a HERALD reporter was kindly shown over that large establishment, and received at the hands of Superintendent Casserly and the officers under his direction every attention. It so occurred that a large number of Mormons who arrived on the Minnesota Monday last were just on the eve of leaving for their promised land. They were principally composed of Scandinavians; but there was also a considerable number of English and Welsh. There were about 350 of Latter Day Saints. The total number of immigrants on board was 740. These people left yesterday by the Pennsylvania Railroad for Salt Lake. They presented no different appearance than ordinary immigrants, and as they passed through Castle Garden, under the direction of leaders, evidently natives of the United States, they seemed anxious to proceed, with as little delay as possible, to their journey's end. The proportion of females did not differ from what is generally to be observed on passenger vessels arriving from Europe.

While fighting in New Chambers street yesterday morning Henry F. Johnson, of some place not stated, was severely cut, it is supposed, by Michael Griffin.

The Department of Public Parks announce that, if the weather be fine, there will be music by the Central Park Band at the Battery this evening, from six to eight o'clock.

The Coroner was notified yesterday of the following sudden deaths:—George Conklin, at 129 Norfolk street; Peter Baxter, at 147th street, near Eighth avenue; Hugh Dugan, at 825 Second avenue; Hannah Jackson, at 1,507 Broadway; Louisa Berschon, at 449 West Forty-fifth street.

A fire occurred in the foundry and frame buildings Nos. 522, 524 and 526 West Thirty-third street yesterday morning. The foundry, where the fire originated, is owned and occupied by Van Tassle & Co. Loss $4,000; insured in the Columbia Insurance Company for $3,700. The other buildings were saved.

In the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, Justice Shandley presiding, Henry Hettrick was sentenced to two months in the Penitentiary for obtaining $1 in money and several drinks from Henry Kutzberger, keeper of a lager beer saloon at 571 Second avenue, under the pretence that he (Hettrick) was a policeman.

In the Tombs Police Court yesterday, before Justice Shandley, Michael Britt, a porter in the employ of Thomas M. Paton, of 341 Broadway, was held for trial on a charge of stealing from his employers $132 worth of "Donna Marias." Britt sold the property to Julius Metzer, a pawnbroker in East Houston street, who has been arrested.

Last evening, as a Third avenue car was passing through the Bowery and when near Grand street, a row occurred between two gentlemen, one of whom accidentally ran against the other. The party run against, instead of accepting the apology offered by the other, commenced cursing him in a good round style, whereat the party of the first part knocked the party of the second part down, and, but for the interference of some of the passengers and the conductor, would have, as he remarked, "kicked his head off."

At half-past two o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in a shed in Eighty-first street, near Third avenue, which is used by William Fischer as a storage for lumber. It was entirely destroyed, together with its contents, valued at $2,000. The fire communicated to the two story and attic building adjoining, occupied by Christian Kerns as a boarding house. This, too, was completely consumed. Kerns' loss is $2,000, fully covered, as also is Fischer's, in the Germania Insurance Company. The building, owned by Thomas H. Ferris, was worth $5,000.

The Executive Committee appointed at the mass meeting held at Delmonico's on the last Monday of July for collecting funds to relieve the sufferings of the French soldiers who shall be wounded in the Franco-Prussian war, held a regular weekly meeting last night at No. 23 West Houston street. Mr. P. A. Gerdy presided. Mr. Leon Mennier acted as secretary. The object of the meeting was to receive the money which had been collected during the week by the officers of the Aid Society appointed for that purpose. Mr. Verable, the treasurer, announced at the opening of the meeting that the funds now raised were not far short of $8,000, and that if they were as successful in their mission in the future as they had been the past three weeks they would be in a position to carry out the intentions of the society.

The Michael Norton Association held their second annual excursion yesterday at Excelsior Park, opposite Yonkers. They started from this city with a steamer and three large barges, filled with a jolly company, and enjoyed themselves hugely. The rain in the afternoon somewhat dampened the affair, but did not materially interfere with the fun. Mr. John Kelly acted as floor manager, and seemed to impart to the company his chronic smile, and thus gave a cheerful phase to the affair. The Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. George H. Mitchell, Peter Mitchell, James Fay, Judge John Cox and Thomas Nelligan conducted all these matters admirably, and Grafulla's Seventh Regiment Band kept the light hearts and heels tripping to fine melodies.

The applause which a courteous action almost invariably wins from the popular heart and tongue greeted Captain Holton, of the steamer Stanford, on Wednesday, when he put the vessel out of her course to land a young girl at Whitestone who had mistaken the vessel and was being carried to Greenwich, Conn. She was travelling alone, and but for the kindness of the captain would have been compelled to return from Greenwich to New York, at which point she would arrive in the night. Her first tears and distress changed to smiles and joy at being landed at home, and the passengers signified their approbation of Captain Holton's course by three hearty cheers. Other conductors and captains would do well to imitate Captain Holton's example.

At twenty-five minutes after three o'clock yesterday afternoon, William Jacobs, a boy of nine years, of 183 Wooster street, while riding on a Hudson River freight train, was thrown or fell from the car to the track, the train passing over him. A finger on his right hand was broken, the left arm was badly cut and he received several scalp wounds. Officer Trainer, of the Twenty-eighth precinct, on post corner of West and Clarkson streets, where the accident occurred, took the boy to Bellevue Hospital. This should be a warning to the numerous boys, large and small, and men, who make it a point to purloin a ride from the railroad company in this way. Scarcely a train passes up or down without being crowded from front to rear with male humanity, mostly working people going to their homes, and the wonder is that more accidents do not occur. The company are blameless, as they have made every effort to prevent people, especially youngsters, from riding on their cars.

Died.

MCQUADE.—On Thursday evening, August 4, of consumption, MARY, the beloved wife of James McQuade, aged 57 years, a native of Killaduntick, county Tyrone, Ireland.

The relatives and friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend the funeral, from St. Columbia's church, West Twenty-fifth street, on Saturday morning, at ten o'clock, when a solemn requiem mass will be held. Her remains will be interred in Calvary Cemetery.

THE NATHAN MURDER.

The Inquest Before Coroner Rollins.

Testimony of Officer Mangan, Officer Evans and the Two Carpenters.

Which of the Nathan Brothers Had On the Bloody Shirt?

A Little Light That May Grow Greater.

The inquest in the Twenty-third street murder case was commenced yesterday by Coroner Rollins. It was expected that there would be an immense crowd at the Thirtieth street police station in anticipation of the proceedings, but up to eleven o'clock there were not more than fifty persons present, every one of whom was more or less intimately acquainted with the deceased Mr. Nathan or his family. The officials, however, imagined that there would be a crush. It was deemed advisable, therefore, so as to obtain as much comfort under the circumstances as possible, not to hold the inquisition at the station house, where the accommodations were very limited, and shortly after the reporters had taken their seats at the only available table in the police sitting room it was announced that the Eighth District Civil Court room, corner of Twenty-second street and Seventh avenue, had been decided on as the best place to

OPEN THE PROCEEDINGS.

The members of the press and the few members of the jury who had come together, along with the small number of spectators already on hand, thereupon proceeded to the place designated.

THE NATHANS IN COURT.

Shortly after eleven o'clock Coroner Rollins put in an appearance and was followed by the remaining members of the jury, and very soon afterwards Washington Nathan, with his brother Frederick, accompanied by Emanuel B. Hart, entered the court room and took seats within the space enclosed by the iron railing which shuts out the common herd of spectators from the privileged few. Of course the Nathan brothers were the observed of all observers, and as they sat down those seated in the back part of the court room went so far as to stand upon the benches in their eagerness to get a good view of them. They were both attired in deep mourning, and bore evident traces of the great grief which has overwhelmed them during the past few days. Washington, to those who were acquainted with his general appearance before the sad calamity which deprived him of his kind-hearted father, looked in an especial manner changed, and certainly did not in anywise appear like one who could, even in the most indirect manner, have aided or abetted in a deed which certain heartless and inconsiderate persons have—by inuendo, if not openly—accused him of having committed.

A GOOD WITNESS.

The first witness called was officer Mangan, who was on the Twenty-third street post the morning of the murder. He seemed to be above the ordinary calibre of policemen in point of intelligence, and gave his answers to the questions put to him by District Attorney Fellows, who represented the people, and to the jurors, who examined him at great length, in a quiet, confident way, that gave general satisfaction. Police officers, as a general thing, when they are in any way officially connected with an important case, make desperate attempts to show their own wonderful smartness by making mountains out of mole hills of incidents that may to a certain degree, by the way they are stretched out, lend an influence for or against suspected parties. Mangan was not of this stamp, and the consequence was his testimony in all points remained unshaken by the severest cross-examination.

WHO OPENED THE DOOR FIRST BEFORE SIX O'CLOCK.

The only really valuable portions of his evidence were that relative to his hearing the alarm of murder, what he saw when he entered the house, and when he "tried" and saw the hall door shut last during his term of duty. The latter was probably the most important point of all, if a point of evidence in a case like this can be called important which throws the murder in deeper mystery than ever; for if the officer's statement be true, it were utterly impossible for any one to have left the house by the front way between the time he "tried" the door, or rather saw the door shut the last time, and the time when the Nathan sons appeared on the stoop to give the alarm. One very important fact elicited by his testimony showed how unsafe a thing it is for sensation newspapers to jump too suddenly at conclusions in a case where a man's life may be at stake before they have good foundation to spring from.

WHOSE NIGHT GOWN WAS STAINED WITH BLOOD?

It will be remembered by all who have made themselves familiar with the details of this terrible murder and every incident connected with it and its surroundings what a stress was put upon the fact that Washington Nathan's night gown was besmeared with blood when he came out on the stoop to give the alarm, yet Mangan testified that it was Frederick Nathan's night gown and socks which had the blood stains, and that no sign of blood was visible about the other son. These stains Frederick accounts for by his having knelt down and leaned over the dead body of his father when he found the corpse first, and by his having stood in the pool of blood which surrounded it. Thus it will be seen that General Blair did not see so blindly after all. In his statement as to what he saw on the morning of the murder from his window in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, which overlooked the Nathan mansion, it will be recollected that he persisted that the young man with the side whiskers he had seen sitting at the third story window at half-past five o'clock was the same one he saw a half hour afterwards on the stoop with his nightshirt stained with blood. This, to all the reporters, who had been informed that Washington Nathan, who does not wear side whiskers, was the one whose night gown had been found stained with blood, appeared very much like a contradiction; but it will be seen by Mangan's evidence that the General was correct in his statement as to the identity of the two brothers. How it was possible for nearly every newspaper in the city to get so muddled about this little incident of the case (for the result of the inquest will show that it is little in its bearing on the guilt or innocence of any person in the house) is a mystery. It may be that owing to the restrictions put upon the investigations of the reporters the detectives had a hand in the misinformation. It may have been accidental on their part, but for all that it was mischievous in the extreme, and might have been criminally so had any evil result flowed from it.

COULD A LOUD NOISE BE HEARD FROM ROOM TO ROOM?

The testimony of the carpenters did not amount to much as a whole, and although they were very rigidly examined by two of the jurors nothing but one fact that could tend to throw any great light on the case was elicited. This fact was simply this:—They stated that to the best of their belief it was impossible for a person sleeping on one of the floors above that occupied by old Mr. Nathan to hear any extraordinary noise below them in the house, but that they did believe a person sleeping on the same floor could be awakened by a loud noise in the room. This, taken in connection with the fact that they also swore that there was only one sliding door between old Mr. Nathan's room and that of the rear sleeping apartment, becomes a very important feature in the case.

AN OUTSIDE CONFEDERATE WITH THE MURDERER.

It will be seen, according to Mangan's testimony, as has already been mentioned, that no person could have left the house by the front door between the time when the officer saw it shut last and when the alarm was given without having been detected; and yet Washington Nathan states when he came down stairs he found it open. Now, the detectives have opened their eyes at this, and the result of the inquest will undoubtedly prove that they have opened them to the extraordinary part of the case with good purpose. Granting Mangan's statements about the door to be true, and Washington Nathan's also, says one of the detectives, they show just this:—Somebody in the house might have had a confederate who aided him in doing the murder. The inmate would have piloted him out by the back way after the deed was done, unlocked the stable door, passed through it to the Twenty-second street door and let him out of that. Then it was an easy matter for him to lock all the doors behind him and for appearance sake pull the front door open and leave the "dog" beside it. The whole thing would be but the

WORK OF A MINUTE,

and then, when Washington Nathan came down stairs after discovering the murder, why the case would seem plain to him that the murderer had left by the front way, and then, when the detectives examined the back doors and found them all secure on the inside, they would naturally come to the same conclusion. This theory could easily reconcile the apparent clash between the officer's and Washington Nathan's statement about the door being open. The detective who formed it thoroughly believes in it; but then comes the question, who is the inmate of the house who piloted the outside confederate in and out of the house? Time alone can tell.

The Testimony.

The following is the testimony given in the case:—

TESTIMONY OF OFFICER MANGAN.

Officer John Mangan was the first witness examined, and in response to Coroner Rollins testified as follows:—

Q. Where do you reside? A. At 121 West Twenty-ninth street.

Q. What is your employment? A. I am a police officer, attached to the Twenty-ninth precinct.

Q. Were you out on the morning of the 29th of July? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, from Fourth to Seventh avenues.

Q. Where were you on that morning when the alarm was given? A. About one hundred feet from the door.

Q. You immediately then proceeded to the house? A. Yes.

Q. Go on and state what you know about the case. A. My attention was drawn by the alarm given by two gentlemen standing on the stoop of the house in their night shirts; I made an alarm and ran towards the stoop; one of the gentlemen beckoned me, saying, "Officer, come in;" I asked what the trouble was, and, said he, "My father has been murdered;" "Where is he," said I, and he replied, "Up in the room, murdered;" I asked whereabouts, and he said "Up stairs;" we started up stairs together; I saw the man lying on the floor, apparently dead, in the room between the study and the other room; then I started up stairs; the two sons of the man went up stairs with me and we searched the house; we went through the house to the top; I came down and put my hand on the old gentleman; he appeared to be warm; I told the son to

SEND FOR A DOCTOR;

he then sent for a doctor, and while he was gone I put my hand on Mr. Nathan; the doctor came from the Fifth Avenue Hotel; the doctor's name I do not know; he said he thought Mr. Nathan had been dead about three or four hours; I went into the study; the window over the other study appeared to be hoisted from about twelve to fourteen inches; I went from there down stairs, and commenced the search down stairs; in the meantime I sent for another officer to Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street; by the time I got down stairs the other officer arrived, and I said, "There is a man murdered here;" I

STARTED DOWN STAIRS

down through the basement, I tried the front basement; the other officers tried the back door; I asked him if it was all secure; he said, "Some one has opened one of the back doors;" the officer's name was Rawley; I proceeded up stairs again and staid with the body and sent the other officer to report to the station house; when I went down to the other door I saw this (the "dog" handed to witness); I do not know where it was when I first came in; the young man said, pointing down to this

"IRON DOG;"

"What is that;" I picked it up and I saw that it had blood upon it.

Foreman of the Jury—Which young man?

Witness—The young man whose name is Fred, I think.

The Coroner—Do you recognize him?

Witness—Yes, sir; that young man there. (Witness here pointed to Mr. Frederick Nathan.)

Examination continued—When I went to the stoop I saw that one of the young men had blood upon his shirt; there was also blood on his stockings up over his toes.

A Juror—Which of the young men was that?

Witness—The same young man I pointed out before.

The Coroner—What part of the shirt was covered with blood?

Witness—The front part;

THE STOCKINGS HAD BLOOD

on the bottom just as if a person stepped into a pool of blood; I did not take notice whether or not they had drawers on, but I think not; I think they had only their nightshirts on and white stockings; only one gentleman had stockings.

Q. Which one was that? A. The same gentleman, Mr. Frederick Nathan.

Q. What else did you do? A. I stayed there until the captain came.

Q. What captain was that? A. Captain Burden, of the Twenty-ninth precinct; as I went along I took notice to the other door and I saw it was closed.

Q. Were you on post that evening? A. Yes, sir; from twelve P. M. to six A. M.

Q. During that time did you examine the doors of the houses on your beat? A. Yes, sir; once at half-past one and again at half-past four o'clock, and found them closed and secure.

Q. At what hour did you receive the alarm? A. At a quarter to six o'clock.

Q. What side of the street were you on when you heard the alarm? A. I was on the south side of the street.

Q. Did you hear any alarm that night before the time you saw this man? A. No, sir.

Q. No kind of whistle that would have attracted your attention? A. No, sir.

Q. You remember seeing the man Patrick Lorden, the porter of the Fifth Avenue Hotel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he make any alarm? A. When I was called he was beckoning to come, after I heard the alarm; the first alarm I heard was from the young men.

Q. Did you hear him whistle? A. No, sir.

Q. You recognize one of the men that was on the stoop as Mr. Frederick Nathan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the other? A. I recognize the other as the one they call Washington.

Q. What inmates of the house did you see that morning besides the two sons? A. I don't think I saw anybody except the woman in the basement; I don't think I saw anybody else.

Q. At what hour

PREVIOUS TO THIS ALARM

did you examine the house? A. At half-past four in the morning.

Q. Did you examine it by trying it? A. Yes, sir; I also examined it at a quarter to six o'clock, when I was going off my post; I always do so.

Q. Did you look at your watch? A. No, but I looked at the clock.

Q. What side of the street were you on? A. I was on the south side of the street; the same as that on which Mr. Nathan's residence was situated; it was within four or five minutes after I passed the house that I heard the alarm; I noticed every door on my way to Sixth avenue; I swear the

DOOR IN QUESTION WAS CLOSED;

at half-past four I took hold of the handle.

Q. At any time did you examine the windows and shutters of the second story—I speak of the apartment in which the murder was committed? A. I did not take notice; the two windows had screens up to them; the other window, where the writing desk was and other things, was up about twelve or fourteen inches; these windows had the regular wire screens.

Q. Did you notice whether any other windows were open? A. Yes, sir; one of the shutters was closed; there was only the screen between the room and the street.

Q. Were you the first person that entered the house, except the inmates? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In coming into the room in which the bed of Mr. Nathan was, did you notice whether there was any light burning? There was in the other room.

Q. Will you state the position of the light towards the window? A. It was turned in towards the wall near the window.

The witness was here directed by Assistant District Attorney Fellows to go to the window of the court room and show the jury how he found the light. He said it was turned in towards the wall.

Q. From the position of that light could it have been seen from the street? A. No, sir; no attention would be drawn to it.

Q. At any time during the night did you notice any light? A. No, sir.

Q. If a light had been burning against the window that was closed would you have been likely to see it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see it burning? A. No, sir; I did not take any notice of it.

Q. Did you notice when you entered the room what doors were open? A. Yes, sir; there was a door leading from the other room into the library open; Mr. Nathan's body was partly in this room and partly in the library.

Q. What other doors were open? A. I did not notice particularly; the door leading from Mr. Nathan's room was closed; I only the door in the back room was open; the room in which the housekeeper slept was open; the door of Mr. Nathan's room leading into the passage was closed.

OPENED ONE DOOR;

Q. You are confident that the door leading from Mr. Nathan's room into the passage was closed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time who were present in the room besides yourself? A. I think Mr. Nathan.

A juror—Which Mr. Nathan? A. The same gentleman, Mr. Frederick Nathan.

Q. Was he the only one? A. I think he was the only one; I think the other brother was out in the

Q. What portion of it was

STAINED WITH BLOOD?

A. The sharpend end of it.

Q. Was any portion of the round part of it

COVERED WITH BLOOD?

A. I did not take notice; there was blood upon it up to a certain distance.

Q. How long have you been on that post, officer? A. Well, I have been on that post for some time.

Q. How long? A. I cannot tell you how long; I have had it at different times; I have had it I think about two or three months; my regular post is Twenty-second street.

Q. Was this house unoccupied or usually occupied? A. Usually occupied.

Q. Who have been the occupants during the last month? A. I do not know; I have only seen these two gentlemen standing on the stoop at times.

Q. Had your attention been directed to the house or had any request been made of you to

WATCH THE HOUSE?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you not aware that Mr. Nathan was residing in the country? A. No sir, I did not know it.

Q. Had you any special orders to look after the house? A. No, sir; I only looked after it the same as any other on my post.

Q. It had been your custom to examine the fastenings of that house? A. It is my regular custom to look after the fastenings of every house,

Q. And you know you examined this door and took hold of the handle at half-past four o'clock? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not notice anything wrong? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you seen during the night, at any time after twelve o'clock, any

CARRIAGES STANDING IN THAT STREET?

A. I saw a carriage standing down near Sixth avenue, on the south side, at No. 103.

Q. During the time you were on post, between twelve o'clock and six o'clock, did you meet many persons? A. Very few.

Q. Did you meet any person without a coat? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you meet any person after twelve o'clock whose actions were so singular as to attract your attention? A. No, sir.

By a Juror—How long have you been an officer? A. Two years.

Q. Your beat had been on Twenty-second street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long? A. I have been on that beat some time.

Q. How long? A. About four months; I tried the doors twice; the first time at half-past one o'clock; I tried every door on my beat.

Q. The last time you tried it was at half-past four? A. Yes, sir; it would take me

THREE HOURS TO GO OVER MY BEAT.

The rule is to try the doors twice; while in the house I heard some one speak of the door having been opened; it was one of the two Nathan boys; he said the door was open when he gave the alarm; I said it could not be so; he then said he could not swear it was closed; I think I did say we calculated the door was closed when the night latch was up; am sure the door was shut; had been by on the other side of the street once between half-past four and a quarter to six; I did not take notice of the windows as I was going by.

WENT UP WITH BOTH THE NATHANS.

I do not remember anybody else going up; the body was lying on its back, the chair was turned over backwards, noticed blood each side of the chair, the safe was open, did not notice the key, the drawer was on the bed; saw, as I entered from the hall, a bed of mattresses; I saw the corpse the other side of the bed; I looked over the bed.

To Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Should think I was about five feet, nine or ten inches.

To the foreman—The blood on the end of the "dog" was dry; saw prints of bloody feet on the stairs; the steps were all descending; I observed none ascending or pointing up; saw them in the hallway and on the stairs; saw similar footprints in the hall pointing in direction of the front door; when I entered I went directly from the front door to the corpse; saw no papers; saw some coppers and the old gentleman's clothing.

Q. Did you see any

BLOOD ON THE DOOR?

A. No, sir: I went directly from the door to the corpse.

Q. Was there any blood on the bed? A. I did not see any; Mr. Nathan picked up the waistcoat; it was opposite the bed and next to the wall, about eight feet off; Mr. Frederick Nathan examined the pants, and had a pocketbook in his hand; don't know whether he got it out of the pantaloons; they were dark; the vest was white; he picked up the shirt; the pantaloons were lying in the middle of the room next the wall.

Q. How far from the bed? A. Opposite the bed next to the wall; the shirt was lying on the floor; Mr. Nathan

KICKED HIS FOOT AGAINST THE SLEEVE;

I took notice to the shirt afterwards.

Q. Were there any studs in it? A. There were not; there was a gold button in the neck of the shirt; there were sleeve buttons in the wrist.

Q. Did you observe whether they were fastened as if the sleeves had been drawn over the hands? A. I think they were fastened; there was blood on the sleeve; saw no blood anywhere except in the neighborhood of the corpse, but saw blood on the wall between the window and door; the blood was about four feet from the floor; looked as if something bloody had rubbed against it; did not notice the seat of the chair; noticed a bloody footmark south of the chair; saw only three tools—a saw, screwdriver and a hammer; they were lying in an orderly way; found the housekeeper in the kitchen; the alarm had awoke her; I said nothing to her; the other officer said a rear door had been opened; I think it was the rear hall door; I examined the basement doors and windows next day.

The Coroner—Was there any blood on the shirt of Mr. Washington Nathan? A. No, sir; I did not notice any; when I met Mr. Frederick Nathan there was blood on the front and skirt of his shirt; it looked as if he had been leaning over something bloody; was about 100 feet from the door when I heard the alarm.

To Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Housekeeper told me afterward the excitement had roused her; she said that young Mr. Nathan came halloaing; they spoke very loud on the steps, and appeared very much excited; they said, "Come in, officer; come in, my father's been murdered;" had my meals down stairs, and then conversed with Mrs. Kelly; did not see her till a day or two afterward; am sure I only opened one door between Mr. Nathan's and Mrs. Kelly's room.

To a Juror—I did not notice the door, I opened it so quickly; I think it was

A SLIDING DOOR.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Before you entered the house did you make any alarm. A. I rapped once.

Q. When you went up stairs there was nobody with you but the Messrs. Nathan? A. No, sir.

Q. And you recognize both of those gentlemen now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you quite sure Mr. Washington Nathan had no stockings? A. I did not take any notice; I cannot swear whether he had or not.

Q. You say the

on the marble tiles were made by Mr. Fred. Nathan's bloody stockings? A. That was my impression; the blood looked as if it might be fresh, and as if the marks had just been placed there; there were no bloody traces going back.

To a Juror—I saw what looked to be finger marks up on the wall; they might have been finger marks.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows—There was no difficulty in seeing the body over the bed from the place where I stood after entering the room.

The Coroner—How much of the body could you see? A. I saw the hip part of the body first, and afterwards went over and saw it all.

A Juror—The first time you entered the house, who went up stairs first, you or Mr. Nathan? A. I think one of them went ahead; I think Mr. Fred. Nathan went ahead or alongside of me.

Q. Was it after that that you made the observation in relation to the bloody footprints? A. I saw them as I was going in.

Q. Did you look afterwards to see if there were any? A. Yes, sir; but they were made as if descending; if there had been bloody footprints up stairs they might have escaped me.

Q. You have spoken of a conversation with Mrs. Kelly? A. I saw her in the basement; she was dressed.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Kelly's son? A. I did not see him then.

Q. When did you first see Mrs. Kelly's son? A. I saw him two days afterwards; but I did not take any notice of him on the day of the murder.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Those footprints you saw on the marble tiles—were they so far apart that they looked like those of a man running or walking? A. They were not so far apart that they looked like the footprints of a man who had been running; I remained in the house until Captain Kelso and Superintendent Jourdan arrived; I saw them in the room with other gentlemen sitting there; they came before I left.

Q. How long were you there before other officers or other persons came? A. I was there about fifteen minutes.

Q. Whom did you take up to the room, if anybody? A. When the officer came he came up.

Q. Did the porter of the hotel go up with you? A. I do not recollect; I saw several persons come into the hall, but I did not take notice how far they came in.

Q. When you first entered the house you did not see this instrument known as a "dog?" A. My attention was called to the "dog" by Mr. Frederick Nathan, who picked it up. (The witness here identified the instrument spoken of.) Witness was asked to tell all he knew in connection with the case.

The witness—In the small study or room the safe was open; I saw the chair back down; I saw two bundles of papers; a box was between the window and the chair; the lid was up; papers were lying on the table.

Q. Where was

THE KEY OF THE SAFE?

A. I did not take any notice of it; I did not see it.

Q. After you entered the room did you see any box lying on the bed? A. There was a wooden box on the bed containing three coppers; I did not see any spots of blood upon it.

TESTIMONY OF OFFICER EVANS.

Detective officer Evans was the next witness examined by Assistant District Attorney Fellows. He testified that on the morning of the 29th of July he was at the station house, and at five minutes past two o'clock went down Sixth avenue and through Seventeenth street to Broadway. He looked up Twenty-third street as he passed it going down on Sixth avenue and again on coming up Broadway to Twenty-third street, looked down the latter thoroughfare and noted nothing unusual. I said, "No, it's a carpenter;" she said, "Why, that young man has been waiting all the morning for you:" she asked me to fix the fastenings in Mr. Nathan's room; we fastened the windows before we went to dinner; got Mr. Nathan's room done by eleven. LE MAISTRE RECALLED.

Le Maistre was recalled—He said that he went from Philip Nathan's house on Thursday evening to the shop and then home; walked out, and exchanged words with a Mr. Murray, who keeps a tea store, and others; said nothing to any one regarding Mr. Nathan's house; spent the evening with a Mr. and Mrs. Wright, and went home at half-past ten; sat up there with a Mr. Gardner during the thunder storm.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Coroner, at this stage of the proceedings, observed that a commencement had been made, and he would leave it to the jury to determine an early day for adjournment.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows said he would be obliged to consult District Attorney Garvin, who was now ill at Saratoga Springs, and he asked that the inquest be adjourned till Monday.

The investigation was accordingly adjourned till ten o'clock on Monday morning.

The Little Light That Breaks.

At a little past five o'clock yesterday evening a HERALD reporter inquired at the residence of the late Mr. Nathan, in Fifth avenue, for "a Mr. Isaac." A little explanation ensued, after which he left for the residence of Mr. Lyon, in Nineteenth street. Here he met the two brothers Lyon, nephews of Mr. Nathan, and explained his business—viz., that he had met a Mr. Isaac, a relative of the murdered man, on Sunday evening, with whom he had conversed, and that he wished to ascertain if Mr. Nathan when living had in his employ a clerk or secretary who would be apt to know anything in regard to deceased's business papers. The reporter was invited into the drawing room, when the following conversation ensued:—

REPORTER—Did Mr. Nathan have a clerk or secretary in his employ?

Mr. JULIUS J. LYON—No, sir.

REPORTER—Is there any one living who knows the character of the papers in his safe; whether he had in his possession any bonds, mortgages or other security for moneys loaned, that would cover, perhaps, the entire estate of the mortgagor or debtor?

Mr. J. J. LYON—I am acquainted with the character of the papers, and Mr. Nathan had no such ones.

REPORTER—You are positive, then, that no man, young or old, was sufficiently indebted to Mr. Nathan to make such debts an incentive for such action as ended in the murder?

Mr. J. J. LYON—I am quite so.

REPORTER—Can you give me any additional

FACTS IN RELATION TO THE MURDER?

Mr. J. J. LYON—Oh! yes, sir. The sensational reports are all incorrect in their statements treating of facts, and a large share of their matter is imaginative and theoretical. For instance, in regard to the statement that Washington went down to his father's safe, and, opening it, procured the will and other papers, showing a suspicious knowledge of the combination. Washington never went there, and knew nothing about it, nor does he know it now. I went with Harmon Nathan, the eldest son of deceased, to Mr. Nathan's safe at the office of the Board of Brokers, and we took with us that when they came home at night the first one in should place the key on the hall table; the second finding it there knew that one brother was in and one out, and would place the key in the lock, so that the third, coming home, finding it in the lock, knew both the others were in and locked and bolted the door. Some of the papers suggested that Washington might have entered his father's room to ascertain the character of the papers in the chest—to search for a will, &c. Now "Wash" knew all about the papers in the chest, and if he had wanted to examine or carry away any of them he might have done so during the six months past, when he has had access to them daily, his father being in the country and he in sole immediate charge of the house.

MR. NATHAN'S NOTE BOOK

sent down for the purpose from Morristown by a railway conductor, which contained a memorandum of the combination. By aid of this memorandum, but partly by guess work, we opened the safe and brought the will to the house. Our only object in getting the will was to learn any directions which Mr. Nathan might have made in the instrument in regard to his burial, &c. Statements have also been made about the key and certain signals between the boys, which it seems are not made understandingly. It was a house

ARRANGEMENT WITH THE BOYS

THE WOMAN AT THE HOFFMAN HOUSE

would make one laugh but for the sad thoughts of the terrible murder. The story only originated in the fact that one night last week "Wash." was locked out and went to the Hoffman House, where he had a room alone, as the hotel register will show. Wash. never had anything to do with a diamond robbery or any woman alluded to in the malicious paragraph concerning it, as the records of Jefferson Market Police Court will also bear evidence. And so far from being very extravagant, though his father was worth perhaps

TWO OR THREE MILLIONS,

"Wash." never spent more than $2,500 a year, and he was in a respectably paying business, though a young house, in which he was a partner. The marks of blood which have been alluded to as upon the staircase and staining the marble tiles were spoken of at the inquest to-day as all pointing in one direction—viz., downward and towards the door, with no traces of returning. The fact was overlooked that a narrow strip of carpet extended the entire length of the hall, through the centre, some seventy-five or eighty feet, and that with which Frederick Nathan's socks were drabbled was wiped by this in passing back over it while Washington Nathan, who wore slippers, and had no traces of blood upon his person could leave no marks.

The family express the greatest indebtedness to Mr. Emanuel B. Hart for his kindness and attention to them under their trying circumstances. They also state that of condolence and regret are received by them daily, some coming from distant parts of the country. One which was received yesterday was from a distinguished lawyer of Washington, who tendered to them his counsel and advice. All speak in terms of the greatest indignation of the reports published in the Sunday sensational paper, and certain ill-advised and unthinking ones offer their services to heat a certain newspaper office in this city "red hot."

THE POLICE INVESTIGATIONS.

In the investigations by the police there seems to have been no progress made worthy of especial note. To queries propounded to Superintendent Jourdan and Captain Kelso the answer is still the same.

"We have no clue upon which to ground a suspicion or make an arrest. Still we will not relax our efforts in the least."

Persons were yesterday at the headquarters in Mulberry street with information that, on being sifted, amounted to nothing. The detectives are still as active as ever, and, indeed, yesterday and Wednesday were more so. A number of ward specials have been also detailed to assist in clearing up the mystery. With thirty or forty men scouring the city and sifting every report, it is devoutly to be hoped some tangible result will follow their labors. The Coroner's inquest will largely aid them in the work and getting at the circumstances surrounding the tragedy.

A VISIT FROM H. NATHAN.

About two o'clock Mr. Herman Nathan, accompanied by his brother-in-law, drove up to 300 Mulberry street, and was closeted with the Superintendent a few minutes. It is believed that he conveyed to him some important information, as the Superintendent, with one of his detectives, left hurriedly and was absent some hours. The members of the family, it is said, are doing all in their power to aid the police in clearing up the mystery in which the murder is shrouded.

DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS.

Report of the Superintendent on Needed Repairs—Financial Exhibit of the Board—A Grand Plan for Uniting Brooklyn and New York Submitted to the Board.

The Commissioners of the Department of Docks assembled yesterday afternoon in stated session, with the president, Mr. John T. Agnew, in the chair. After the usual preliminaries had been disposed of

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

reported that the Long Island Steamboat Company had replied to the note sent in relation to pier 27, stating that the Harlem Navigation Company used and encumbered the pier more than the Long Island folks did, yet that the latter was willing to aid in placing the dock in proper repair. The committee reported in relation to the Forty-ninth and Fifty-seventh streets piers that it was deemed inadvisable to rebuild those piers, and suggested that the superintendent be required to inform the Board what should be done to the outer portions, so as to provide for the safety of vessels passing up and down. The committee reported unfavorably on the application of the Washington Ice Company in relation to being released from the expense of the pier, now partly used by the free bath at the foot of Charles street, and reported favorably on the application of Andrew Johnson for permission to erect a platform at the foot of Forty-eighth street, and to pay therefor $100 per annum. The recommendation of the Commissioners were concurred in by unanimous vote. The report of

THE AUDITING COMMITTEE

Mr. AGNEW thought that the larger repairs should be let out at contract; but it was finally decided to have the work done under the direction of the Superintendent.

A NEW PLAN

for docks and wharves was submitted by Mr. G. W. Don, of the Chamber of Commerce. This plan contemplates joining New York and Brooklyn by means of three grand causeways, with gates or dykes, thus forming two enclosed basins, and on those causeways to have built the warehouses.

THE ADVANTAGES CLAIMED

for this plan are many—among others that it need not cost the city anything—while it would increase the value of taxable property some $50,000,000, would lessen the taxes by making one city with but one government. Mr. Don gave as the reason the want of easy and free transit between New York and Long Island and want of necessary wharves and docks. The ferries are attended by fears, and suspension bridges claim still less confidence; solid stone and earth should be used for lasting footings. He asserted that of the water which comes in from the ocean by way of Sandy Hook 22,600,000 cubic feet goes out by way of Hell Gate and Long Island Sound and that but little of the water and ice which come down the Hudson go out by the Narrows. He entered at length into the discussion of the subject and the explanation of experiments made by him on the waters of the East river as far up as Sand's Point and traced the flow from the North river up to that point.

WHY POPULATION AND SHIPPING SEEK NEW JERSEY

His communication was received and filed, after which the Board adjourned.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Opening of Proposals.

Commissioner Tweed and Comptroller Connolly yesterday, opened a large number of contracts for sewers, regulating, grading and paving in various parts of the city. Owing to the extensive computations necessary to be made, the final awards of contracts could not be announced until to-day. The proposals for sewer in Fortieth street, and for regulating and grading New Worth street, Seventy-second street, from Third avenue to East river, and Tenth avenue, from Manhattan street to 155th street, were withdrawn. The first because a sewer in that street was deemed unnecessary; the second because of a proposed alteration in the grade; the third because the property could not stand the assessment, and the fourth because of interference with the Croton Aqueduct. The contract for

A STONE BRIDGE OVER SPUYTEN DUYVIL CREEK,

was awarded to John Hogan, for $29,000. The other bidders for this work were J. J. Mooney, $30,000, and J. L. Brown, Jr., $57,100.

WHO IS KING OF THE PORT?

Arrest for Violation of the Quarantine Laws—A Flagrant Case—What the Law Says.

Captain John F. Scott, of the bark Contest, was arrested and taken to the Tombs yesterday morning under a warrant issued by Justice Shandley, for violation of the quarantine laws. The Contest, as was shown by the affidavit of the Deputy Health Officer, arrived from Rio Janeiro in the latter part of July and was detained at Lower Quarantine. Five of her crew had been in hospital at Rio with yellow fever, of whom one died. One man also died of yellow fever on the passage to this port, while the captain was attacked with the same disease, but was convalescent at the time of arrival. After remaining one day in the lower bay the vessel was removed from the quarantine anchorage, under pretense of going to sea, but was finally brought up to one of the Brooklyn docks by way of Perth Amboy. As an excuse for thus violating the law the captain alleged that he acted under orders from the consignees of the vessel, and that he ought not to be held responsible. In this respect, however, the quarantine law provides that every master of a vessel subject to visitation by the Health Officer who shall refuse or neglect to remain at Quarantine during the period assigned by the Health Officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $2,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. In this case the captain was held in $1,000 bail to appear for trial.

CRIME IN PATERSON.

A man named Philip Smith was yesterday arrested at Paterson, N. J., for committing an assault upon his wife. The latter alleges that he came home beastly drunk the night before and pulled her from the bed, after which he assaulted her so severely that she was forced to run out of the house en dishabille and seek the assistance of the neighbors.

Another Smith, named James, was arrested and committed to answer for stabbing Mrs. J. Robinson, of Morton street, in the wrist. It seems the man had no place to sleep and no money, and being from the same part of the "old country" Mrs. Robinson took compassion on him and tendered him the hospitalities of her house. The ungrateful wretch, however, became involved in a quarrel with the good lady, during which he stabbed her, as before stated. Smith asserts that he has a family in poor circumstances living in Hudson City.

LONG BRANCH RACES.

Fourth Day of the Inaugural Meeting.

RACING IN A DELUGING RAIN.

Enquirer the Winner of the Robins' Stakes, Two Mile Heats; McKinney the Three-quarters of a Mile for Two-year Olds, R. B. Connolly the Selling Race, and Rapture the Gentleman's Cup.

Yesterday was the fourth day of the inaugural racing meeting at Monmouth Park, and had the weather been pleasant the same success that attended the previous days would have been the record of this, making it a day of genuine enjoyment, inasmuch as the several contests promised exceedingly well. Notwithstanding the weather, which was the meanest that could be imagined for the sport, there appeared an evident determination among the boarders of the hotels at the Branch, out among the Jerseyites in general, to be present, for they turned out in large numbers, male and female, young and old, and in a deluging rain went early to the track. There was a more promiscuous assemblage yesterday than at any of the previous days, for all classes of society had their representatives at the Park. There were the noted banker, the merchant, the professional man of high and low degree, the well-to-do farmer who has acquired a competency by raising garden truck for the markets of New York and Philadelphia, the gentleman of leisure, old sports and young sports, the staid and matronly farmer's wife with her daughters comely and beautiful, or plain and unpretending as the case may be, the young miss who is being fondly courted and the old one, who, forsooth to say has passed the age when courting is at all probable, and to whose faded charms men fail to pay their vows—all these were witnesses of the exciting sport of yesterday while the elements were in their worst humor. The courageous at Long Branch and the curious denizens of Jersey were supplemented in large numbers by Gothamites who came by boat and cars in the hours of the morning, men who "assist" at a racing meeting at all times and under all circumstances. Among these were the young and old, the gray and gaudy, politicians of influence and those of no note whatever, is all intent upon one purpose, the gratification of certain tastes in matters of speed and speculation. Of course the discussions on the way were all of one character, gravitating towards the contests of the day, and particularly towards the race of the day, the Robins' Stake, two mile heats. Concerning the races in the past and the races in the future, of the two important contestants in the race, bay colts Enquirer and Kinfisher, they ventured their opinions excitedly and bet their money. Thus, at one point the listener would have been informed that "Kingfisher was the best three year old in the world," and in another instance that "Enquirer had been tried and was a stayer." And in this strain they descanted until the arrival at the course.

DRENCHING SHOWERS.

The showers that had at times been threatening during the morning at last burst forth at noon, and the rain fell in torrents for half an hour or more. It deluged the track, filling the uneven places with an inch or two of water and on the backstretch forming little rivulets, making what turfmen term "a very heavy course." At one o'clock the little gods that sit aloft and hold the reins of the wind and weather in their hands checked the unwished-for storm, and the clouds partially breaking away, glimpses of sunshine appeared, and the hearts of the throng were gladdened. Soon thereafter the genial face of Jim Valentine, Clerk of the Course, appeared near the pool stand, and shouted, with extended arms—

"We run!"

"Who runs?" smilingly asked the auctioneer, Underwood.

"We do—to-day," persisted Valentine.

"Well, come up here and I'll sell a pool on you, old boy," shouted back the active little man when Valentine went to the stand and assured the assemblage that no postponement would occur by the inclemency of the weather.

The rifts of blue in the sky did not long remain a beacon of fair weather. Clouds soon again shot over the firmament, and again the rain descended, with but slight intermission, in copious showers, until the track when the third race was being run resembled a canal, the water being three and four inches deep. The lawn was like a river and everybody sought the stand. The riders of the horses were drenched before they started, and at the finish looked pitiable indeed. Accompanying the rain were frequent flashes of lightning, and the deep reverberations of thunder as it rolled over the mountains and settled in its intensity around the park, drowned the voice of the poolseller and frightened the ladies even more than it did the horses.

THE EXCITEMENT OVER THE ROBINS STAKES.

The first race on the programme of the day, the Robins Stakes, produced the greatest amount of speculation and excitement. It had been looked forward to with indescribable interest by turfmen, inasmuch as the contest would bring together those superior three year olds, Belmont's Kingfisher and General Buford's Enquirer. Here was the excitement, and seldom in the history of the turf during late years has it been so intense. Kingfisher, by recent performances at Saratoga, was the favorite at long odds, and many thousands of dollars were staked in this manner. Those who knew Enquirer, however, would not desert him, and took all the bets thus offered. They held that he had accomplished a good deal, and at this time expected him to sustain his reputation. When the first heat was run and Kingfisher came in the winner the excitement had not abated, but continued with renewed intensity. The friends of Enquirer stuck to the pool stand and took the large odds. Hundreds, thousands and tens of thousands were bet there and on the track. The rain again came down in a perfect deluge, clearing the timid to the Grand Stand from the lawn, but the betters cared not. Kingfisher's adherents sent him up to a high favorite, but old "Kentucky never tired," and the Enquirer "boys" stayed with them, and greenbacks in handfuls went into the "pool box." Side bets were made, friends with friends, brothers with brothers and ladies with their mothers and daughters. The excitement ran high, and the twenty-five minutes allowed between the heats did not allay it. The rain still came down vehemently. Some wished it would continue and the track would, by becoming softer, be better than its "lumpy" condition during the first heat. The bell in time brought the coursers to the track, Enquirer being the first led in, closely blanketed. "How is he?" "Has he got over it?" "Oh, I wish he has," came from a hundred tongues, and scores of lorgnettes were levelled to ascertain his condition. At last his clothes were removed, and the little charcoal darkey, his rider, mounted, when he galloped up the track. "He is dry as a stick," "Don't he look well?" "There is a chance yet," were heard in hurried whispers when the attention of the masses was called to Kingfisher, who then had made his appearance. "Hasn't got well over it by ——," shouted one more enthusiastic individual, and certainly that seemed to be the case, but Enquirer did not appear at all to mind the exertions he had made, and was in a condition to run for a kingdom. There was no delay. The judges were anxious, the ladies were enthusiastic and the betters wild with excitement. The word was given and the horses got away excellently, and it seemed that the tap of the drum was quicker and more excitedly given than ever before. Away they went, Enquirer to the front, one-quarter, one-half, the mile, they run, and the mud flew in great clouds covering horses and gayly jacketed jockeys so that neither were hardly recognizable. The mile and a half was reached and the excitement grew more intense, when "Kingfisher is gone!" went ringing over field and stand, and, sure enough, such was the case. The whip was plied by his driver, but the fire had been expended and Enquirer galloped home an easy winner, amid an excitement unparalleled on the turf. The condition of Kingfisher was enough to excite the sympathy of the more tender hearted, as he appeared to be greatly distressed and had the "thumps." Another heat was to be run; but the race was already thought to be virtually decided, and so the third heat proved, as Enquirer came home an easy victor, filling the pockets of his adherents and almost breaking the heart of Kingfisher's owner at the same time.

THE GENTLEMAN'S CUP.

The fourth race, the Gentleman's Cup, excited considerable interest, notwithstanding the frightful condition of the track and its unpleasant surroundings. The "gentlemen jocks" had many friends present, and each was more or less stimulated by the good wishes of those intimately connected with them to strive for the victory. This was not alone the only incentive. The prize, an elegant silver punch bowl, valued at $600, was placed upon a pedestal in front of the grand stand, in full view of the audience, and elicited many commendations for its exquisite design and finish. It was worth taking home. The riders were gentlemen well known in social circles. This race was won by the favorite, but the riders presented a ludicrous sight when it was finished, their handsome costumes being transformed into suits darker than the dirtiest coal heaver. When Lord Wodehouse returned to the stand he was greeted with repeated cheers, but it was evidently not appreciated, as he hurried to change his soiled costume and not await the applause of the multitude.

The Racing.

Before the horses were called for the first race a deluging shower had flooded the track, making it extremely heavy and slow. Some talk of postponement was prevalent. The secretary, however, soon put all doubts to rest by announcing that the racing would come off, and at the appointed time the horses for the first race were called. Four races came off during the day, the first being two mile heats for three year olds, with 100 pounds up; the second a dash of three-quarters of a mile by two year olds: the third a dash of a mile and a quarter—a selling race—and the fourth a gentleman's race for a silver punch bowl, one mile.

Three horses started in the first race—Enquirer, Kingfisher and Major—the latter being little thought of in company with the other clippers. Betting was very large on Kingfisher and Enquirer, the former being the favorite in most of the pools. He won the first heat, Enquirer never making an effort for it, never being touched with whip or spur. Kingfisher was then an immense favorite, but when Enquirer won the second heat with the greatest ease he had the call over the others at long odds. Enquirer won the third heat just as easily as he had the second, and those who stuck to him won large amounts of money.

The second race was between five two year olds, but the start for it was the most miserable one that has been given at this meeting. McKinney had such a commanding lead at the beginning that the others were all beaten before they made a movement. The third race was better. It was run in a deluging shower, the lightning flashing and the thunder rattling enough to frighten the jockeys out of their saddles. This was won by R. B. Connolly in good style. He laid up half the distance and then went on and won.

The last event of the day was a race for a silver punch bowl, one mile, gentlemen riders. Rapture and St. Patrick came to the post, the former ridden by Mr. John Carter and the latter by Lord Wodehouse. Rapture won an easy race in very good time. The rain was pouring down frightfully during the running. The following are the details of the day's racing:—

Enquirer	55	55	60	55	65	120	60
Major	10	15	20	15	20	30	20

THE RACE.

First Heat.—The start was a good one. Enquirer then took the lead, Kingfisher second, Major third. Going around the turn Kingfisher fell in behind. At the quarter pole Enquirer led half a length, Major second, three lengths in advance of Kingfisher. On the backstretch Enquirer and Major ran locked, with Kingfisher three lengths behind. They ran in this way through the mud and slush all the way around, and as they passed under the string at the end of the mile Enquirer led one length, Major second, two lengths in front of Kingfisher. Going into the second mile, Major ran up to Enquirer's head, and at the quarter pole showed in front. Kingfisher had not yet made a movement to overtake the others, nor did he till he passed the half-mile pole, at which point Enquirer led one length, Major second. Getting into the lower turn, however, Kingfisher made his run, and in a moment was in the lead, there being no stop or delay in going past the others. Enquirer made no effort to overtake him, but came moderately up the homestretch. Kingfisher ran home a winner of the heat by a length and a half. Major was beaten half a dozen lengths. Time of the heat, 3:56¼.

Second Heat.—A heavy rain fell between heats, rendering the track excessively heavy. Enquirer took the lead at the start, Major second, Kingfisher trailing. Going around the turn Enquirer led one length, Major second, two lengths in front of Kinfisher. Enquirer kept the lead down the backstretch, keeping from a length to a length and a half in front, and when he got into the lower turn opened a gap of three lengths, Major second, Kingfisher close up. As they approached the three-quarter pole Kingfisher passed the Major and took second place and lay there two lengths behind Enquirer. As they passed under the string at the end of the first mile Enquirer led two lengths, Kingfisher second, half a length in front of Major; but going around the upper turn Kingfisher again fell in the rear. The tall son of Leamington kept the gap open to the quarter pole, running well within himself, while Major was doing his best, and Kingfisher was not pulling so strong as he had done in the first heat at the same point. Going down the backstretch Kingfisher made his run, but Major would not resign his place to him. The two shut the gap up on Enquirer for a short time, and lay a little over a length behind, the latter running steadily and without the least urging. Kingfisher began to quit on the lower turn and as he came into the homestretch he was seen getting the whip, and Major then left him. Kingfisher was punished the greater part of the way up the stretch without a response, as he was hopelessly beaten by Major. Enquirer came on under a strong pull, clear of Major, and passed under the string four lengths in advance of him, the latter being three lengths in front of Kingfisher. The time of the heat was better than the first, being in 3:54½. At the finish Enquirer did not seem much distressed, while the others were badly off.

Third Heat.—The greatest excitement was then manifested between the heats by the backers of Kingfisher, and every effort was made to hedge. Enquirer was the favorite at very long odds. He jumped away with the lead, Kingfisher second, Major close up. Going around the turn Major took second place and ran up close to Enquirer, the latter leading past the quarter-pole one length, Kingfisher five lengths behind. Enquirer was under a strong pull down the backstretch, leading one length and a half, Major second, three lengths ahead of Kingfisher. They ran in this way around the lower turn and up the homestretch, passing under the string at the end of the first mile nose and tail, Enquirer first, Major second and Kingfisher third. Major was laboring hard at this time, and Kingfisher was very little better off. Going around the turn Enquirer dashed away and was five lengths ahead in a moment. He was, however, taken in hand again, and led past the quarter pole three lengths ahead of Kingfisher, who had given Major the go-by. On the backstretch Kingfisher was forced and he closed up nearly all the daylight, but this was allowed as a favor by the jockey of Enquirer. The latter was under a strong pull and running as if at exercising work. Major now began to give it up badly. He had shot his bolt. Enquirer galloped around the lower turn one length ahead of Kingfisher and came home at his ease a winner by a length. Major was fifty yards behind Kingfisher. Time of the heat, 4:00.

THE RACE.

McKinney got a commanding lead at the start, Richards' filly second, Jerome's filly third, Rattan fourth, with Nelly Ransom far behind. The start was the worst that has been given during the meeting. McKinney had it all his own way to the end, although Richards' filly closed up some of the daylight on the homestretch. Nelly Ransom also ran well, landing a good third. She was at least 100 yards behind when McKinney passed the half-mile pole. McKinney won the heat by six lengths, Richards' filly second, about the same distance ahead of Nelly Ransom, Rattan fourth and Jerome's filly fifth. Time, 1:23.

THIRD RACE.

The horses were started at the three-quarter pole in a torrent of rain, Pennock getting away best, the Doneraile second, Connolly third. They came slashing up the stretch, and as they passed the stand the Doneraile colt was leading half a length, Pennock's colt second, two lengths ahead of R. B. Connolly. Going around the upper turn the Doneraile colt led one length, the Pennock second, four lengths ahead of Connolly. At the quarter pole the Doneraile was about half a length ahead of Pennock, who was five lengths in front of Connolly. Going down the backstretch Connolly made good running and closed finely, and on the lower turn took second place, the Doneraile colt being beaten there by Pennock. The latter kept the lead, however, until thirty yards from the stand, when Connolly passed him and won the race by half a length. Time, 2:30½.

THE FOURTH RACE.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Gunning S. Bedford, Jr., City Judge.

A PROFESSIONAL PICKPOCKET IN RAGGED CLOTHES—THE CITY JUDGE DETECTS THE TRICK.

Assistant District Attorney Tweed appeared for the prosecution and disposed of the calendar with unusual despatch.

The first case tried by a jury yesterday was an indictment against George McDougal, charged with petty larceny from the person. It appeared that on the 22d of July John O'Sullivan, a resident of Newark, fell asleep on a pile of lumber and was awakened by the prisoner, whom he caught in the act of taking his hand out of his pocket. The complainant lost twenty dollars and a pipe. He was arrested a few moments afterwards by the officer, who upon searching him found O'Sullivan's pipe. After the rendition of the verdict of guilty Judge Bedford, in passing sentence, said that he had no doubt but that McDougal (whom Mr. Blunt denominated a "bummer" in his summing up) was a dangerous member of society. Any man who would deliberately pick a man's pocket when asleep, and then pretend to be drunk, would commit more serious offences. It was a well known fact that professional pickpockets dress well when they go in cars, and when brought to the bar were often clothed in rags. His Honor, believing the prisoner to be a professional pickpocket, sent him to the State Prison for five years.

Abraham Hartt, who was charged with robbing Abraham Bible, a pedlar, on the 15th of July, pleaded guilty to assault and battery. The testimony showing that the accused only struck the pedlar, this plea was accepted, and a fine of twenty dollars was imposed.

Robert Reilly pleaded guilty to attempting to steal from an express wagon, on the 29th of July, a trunk containing wearing apparel valued at $800, the property of Llewellyn S. Woodward. He was sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

A NOTORIOUS YOUNG BURGLAR SENT TO THE STATE PRISON.

James Murtha, alias James Kane, alias James McIntyre, pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree. On the 10th of July he effected an entrance to the premises of Joseph D. Powers, 746 Broadway, and stole $300 worth of cloth. Judge Bedford, in passing sentence, observed that although the prisoner was only twenty years of age he had been informed by a captain of police that Murtha was an associate of burglars and had already served a term in prison for burglary. He was sentenced to the State Prison for four years and six months.

LARCENY FROM THE PERSON.

John Sheridan, indicted for robbery, pleaded guilty to petty larceny from the person. He was charged with stealing fourteen dollars from Joseph Davis, on the 24th of July, while passing through the street. He was sent to the State Prison for three years.

Thomas McLaughlin pleaded guilty to burglariously entering the store of Joseph E. Powers, corner of Broadway and Fourteenth street, on the 10th of July, and stealing $300 worth of cloth. He was sent to the Penitentiary for three years.

LARCENY IN A FARO BANK—A NEW ORLEANS GAMBLER LOSES HIS COAT—MR. HOWE ON THE SOUTHERN MULE QUESTION.

Florence Dempsey was tried upon a charge of grand larceny. The complainant, Thomas H. Lennox, who said, when cross-examined by Mr. Howe, that he was a resident of New Orleans and a mule dealer by occupation, testified that he went into a gambling saloon in Vesey street, and, the day being very hot, he took off his coat and sat upon it; while he was in the act of throwing off the copper from the bet he rose from his seat, and, while in the act of removing the bet, some person ran out of the room with his coat, which contained $700; a man who was on the sidewalk saw the prisoner in his shirt sleeves and have a coat with him; about three weeks afterwards an officer arrested the prisoner and found two pawn tickets for a coat and vest upon him, which, however, did not represent Mr. Lennox's coat. Dempsey voluntarily stated in the station house that he had the coat, that other parties were concerned in the matter and he got only $120. The prisoner, in testifying on his own behalf, said that he did not steal the coat, but admitted that he was gambling there and won $120. Mr. Lennox was not so fortunate, for he owned up that he lost $2,500 in gambling saloons in this city. Mr. Howe made an amusing speech, dwelling racily upon Mr. Lennox's mule and horse proclivities. The City Judge, in his usual impartial and lucid manner, presented the facts to the jury, who, much to the astonishment of many of the lookers on, rendered a verdict of not guilty. They were evidently more influenced by Mr. Howe's speech than by the testimony.

The following is the calendar for to-day:—The People vs. Patrick Kearney, robbery; Same vs. John Anderson, robbery; Same vs. Frederick Segner, felonious assault and battery; Same vs. Thomas O'Brien, felonious assault and battery; Same vs. John Dugan, felonious assault and battery; Same vs. Edward Cooper, obtaining goods by false pretences; Same vs. Joseph Gregory, grand larceny; Same vs. John Burke, grand larceny; Same vs. Simon Bernard, grand larceny; Same vs. Daniel McGrath, Thomas McGrath, William Brown, robbery; Same vs. James Conway, Michael Ward and others, grand larceny; Same vs. William Harney, larceny from the person; Same vs. Louis Best, larceny from the person; Same vs. Paul Kelly, rape; Same vs. Adam Lang, rape.

COURT CALENDAR—THIS DAY.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.—Held by Judge Barnard. Calendar called at twelve M. Nos. 106, 133.

A BOY MURDERER IN NEW JERSEY.

The Greenville Affray—Verdict of the Coroner's Jury—A Lad Ten Years Old Committed on a Charge of Manslaughter.

The inquest on the body of the boy Augustus Thau, of Greenville, was held by Coroner Burns on Wednesday night. The facts adduced in evidence are briefly these:—The deceased and John Butler, the latter ten and the former twelve years of age, played ball on Monday and the ball happened to roll in the mud. A dispute ensued as to which of the two should lift it, and Thau struck Butler. Soon after Butler was walking with his mother, when they met Thau. Mrs. Butler reprimanded Thau for striking her boy, and the latter, while she was speaking, slyly crept from behind and raising his ball bat felled Thau to the ground with a blow which fractured the skull.

The injured boy was carried to his home, where he died the following day. The jury rendered a verdict that Thau came to his death from the effects of a blow from a ball bat in the hands of John Butler. On this verdict Coroner Burns committed him to the county jail for trial. Mrs. Butler, who has been in custody as an abettor, was discharged, no evidence having been adduced to show her complicity in the affair. She felt rather mortified at the unfortunate occurrence which culminated in a manner she least expected.

Thau belonged to one of the oldest families, not only in Greenville, but in Hudson county, and great sympathy is manifested for the family. At the same time it is conceded on all sides that the boy who is to answer for the crime had no intention whatever to inflict injuries which would endanger the life of his playmate. In this view of the case Coroner Burns will consider the question of bail within the within the ensuing three days.

DISGRACEFUL OCCURRENCE.

Attack on Town Officers by an Army of Women—The Former Beaten and Driven Off the Field.

Last Wednesday afternoon a novel and fierce mêlée, which might have terminated in bloodshed, occurred at Washingtonville, in the town of East Chester, Westchester county. The pound master of Mount Vernon, it appears, had empounded some cattle and geese belonging to several residents in the neighborhood, and it being alleged that he had shown partiality to other violators of the pound laws, a large force of German and Irish women, armed with various kinds of weapons, determined to attack the obnoxious poundmaster when he next visited their neighborhood. This warlike preparation on the part of the women having been brought to the notice of Justice Meeks, that official, having called to his assistance some half dozen constables and special officers, including the poundmaster, repaired to the pound and attempted to remove a post which had been put down to prevent the pound gate from being opened. Before their work was completed, however, they were attacked by the infuriated women, who, by a vigorous application of their weapons, drove the Justice and his posse off the field, and then tore down the enclosure amid yells and other equally disgraceful demonstrations of their victory over the officers. It is understood that warrants have been issued for the arrest of many of the guilty parties.

FIRE AT JERSEY CITY.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in Somers' oil factory, at the corner of Warren and South Eighth streets, Jersey City, and 130 barrels of gasoline were destroyed. The liquid belonged to Mr. Wheeler, of New York, whose loss is about $4,000. The damage to the building is over half that amount, but it is covered by insurance.

MIDSUMMER RETREATS.

Visit of President Grant to the West End Hotel—What Was Talked About and What Was Not Talked About—Mr. Frelinghuysen on Sea Sickness—An Evening Concert—The President Goes to Spend a Day in Washington.

LONG BRANCH, August 4, 1870.

This forenoon President Grant very quietly dropped in at the West End Hotel, having been driven down from his cottage with General Porter, his private secretary, and two ladies. Alighting from the carriage, the rest of the party continued their drive up the beach and he stepped upon the hotel porch. Governor Bowie, of Maryland, was the first to address him, and after a few moments' conversation others crowded around, some who knew him to speak to him, and others stimulated by that idle curiosity so characteristic of our American people, which, while meaning to be neither obtrusive nor obsequious, is certainly akin to both. Gradually he worked his way into the hotel, the throng still crowding about him, and through a cordon of handshakings and introductions made his way into the ladies' parlor. Here cordially greeting such ladies as he knew he was introduced to a host of others, and with the ladies doing the most of the talking, the conversation, as readily may be imagined, became exceedingly brisk and animated. However, he did not linger here long, but threading his way back again through the crowded hallway into the office, lit a cigar and engaging in conversation with several gentlemen, they talked of the weather, the races, how he liked Long Branch, the bathing, the drives—everything but politics. Even the European war was not touched. A column or two might be filled with these conversations; but as they were only for the most part commonplace observations about commonplace topics, and nothing of public interest said on either side, it is not worth while. It is well enough, perhaps, though, to put on record what the President, as a smoker, says of himself, so that the public may no longer be led astray to the extent it has been on this subject.

"I thought you were never without a cigar," said a gentleman to him as he began smoking.

"I am not the great smoker the papers make me out to be," he said, smiling. "I smoke, in fact, quite moderately."

Re-entering his carriage as it again drove up, which was about an hour after his arrival, the President returned to his cottage, where he remained all the afternoon. Colonel Robert Campbell and Mr. Hugh Campbell, of St. Louis, and their families, who are at present at the Branch, dining with him.

DEPARTURE FOR WASHINGTON.

The President left to-day for Washington, as it was stated in my letter of yesterday he intended doing. He left in the twenty minutes past six P. M. train, however, instead of in the early morning train, as was his original purpose. He was accompanied by General Porter, Master Ulysses Grant and Miss Maggie Dent, his neice. His visit to the national capital will be very brief, continuing only through to-morrow, when, taking the night train, he will again return here, remaining over Sunday, and then starting on his trip for St. Louis, which he also designs to make as lively as possible, not being absent probably over a week. Of course his visit to Washington has given glow to speculation and excited a host of surmises on the subject. The prevailing assertion is that there is to be a Cabinet meeting; but the assertion certainly is grounded upon no reliable information on the subject.

MR. FRELINGHUYSEN AND THE ENGLISH MISSION.

The matter of the English mission and Mr. Frelinghuysen's acceptance or refusal of the same is still in abeyance. The reason of its continuing so was elicited, I am told, by a guest of the West End Hotel, where Mr. Frelinghuysen was recently stopping, through a brief conversation the other day with the latter gentleman. I give the conversation as it was related to me:—

"I see it published," said the guest in question to Mr. Frelinghuysen, "that it is doubtful whether you accept the Ambassadorship to the Court of St. James."

"I have not decided yet," answered Mr. Frelinghuysen.

"Not private business prevents your going?"

"No."

"No ambition for such high office?"

"Cannot say that."

"Are you willing to tell the reason?"

"I have a horror of crossing the ocean. I dread sea sickness."

I cannot vouch, of course, for the story, only that it is current at the West End Hotel.

CONCERT AT THE CONTINENTAL.

There was a very fine concert given last evening at the Continental Hotel by Harry Sanderson, of well known metropolitan musical memory. It was something more than a concert. In addition to Mr. Sanderson playing with his usual exquisite skill on the piano, and cornet, violin and trombone solos by other artists, there was the dramatic mixed in. Mr. Allerton and Miss Rawlinson gave something from "Romeo and Juliet" and a portion of "Hamlet." There was a numerous attendance and all were highly pleased.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Meeting of the Board of Aldermen—More Gas—The New Post Office Enclosure—Fire Extinguishing Job.

Pursuant to adjournment the Board of Aldermen met yesterday afternoon, with the President, Alderman Coman, in the chair. There was a full quorum of members present, including

ALDERMAN JEROME,

who made his first appearance as a municipal manager. He sat beside the indefatigable Irving and carried himself with becoming dignity. After the usual preliminaries had been disposed of a large number of resolutions were introduced relative to the laying of gas mains and the erection of gas lamps. Among these was one providing for the erection and lighting of extra lamps in front of St. Gabriel's church. Some time ago a resolution was adopted authorizing the erection of gas lamps in front of St. Gabriel's Academy. This extra light is not enough for the Rev. Mr. Clowrey's congregation, so extra lamps are needed to give the east side more light. The resolution in question was with others laid over in accordance with rule. A resolution was introduced directing that the temporary resolution granting more room for

THE NEW POST OFFICE

authorities to carry on their work be rescinded and repealed, and empowering the Department of Parks to take possession of the property belonging to the city and now enclosed by the Post Office fence. This resolution was also laid over. A petition was received from the Metropolitan Fire Extinguishing Company and accompanied by a resolution virtually to the above mentioned company by empowering the company to lay their mains and pipes in the streets and avenues and along the bulkheads of the city. On motion the matter was referred to a special committee appointed by the President, comprising Aldermen Woltman, Reilly and Irving.

A large number of papers were received from the Board of Assistant Aldermen, embracing the usual style of resolutions and ordinances, all of which were laid over.

Alderman WOLTMAN remarked that the Committee on the

REDISTRICTING OF THE CITY

would be ready and happy to receive any suggestions on the subject until the 10th inst. The usual eulogistic resolutions in relation to the demise of the late Assistant Alderman Henry Rogers were adopted, after which the Board adjourned.

A NEWARK SWINDLER CAPTURED.

Charles H. Seaton, of No. 17 Fair street, Newark, a young man twenty-three years of age, of excellent family and splendid opportunities, was arrested in Newark yesterday and committed to the Essex county jail to await trial on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. A few days ago he chiselled Dr. George S. Ward out of six dollars, two journalists out of five dollars each, Dr. Haight, the police surgeon, twenty dollars, and a host of others in like amounts. Some time ago, after disbursing some $20,000 on the young man's behalf for debts and other matters, his father, Mr. Horace Seaton, turned him adrift and now refuses to do anything for his dishonered son. For a considerable time past the latter has been the associate of gamblers and other disreputable persons. His young and charming wife is nigh broken hearted at the infamy thus heaped upon her young life.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WALL STREET, THURSDAY, August 4—6 P. M.

The directors of the Bank of England, at their usual weekly meeting this forenoon, further advanced the rate of discount, which is now six per cent. This action of a body of men who are credited with ever faithfully discerning the financial prospect, although generally anticipated in this country, has a significance and importance which point directly to the dread that England is about to be involved in the war of empires which seems to hang over the destiny of all Europe. A few weeks since the rate of discount was only three per cent. It was at first advanced but a half per cent, as much through an ignorance of the magnitude of the war then threatened as through a desire to prevent a financial panic and to bring the money rate gradually to a figure which should protect the interests of the Bank of England in the monetary movements to ensue upon a state of hostilities. The latest advance—the doubling of the original rate—and the prospect of a higher rate next week, which would not in the least surprise Wall street, are a tightening of the purse strings which denote an apprehension that the great "shopkeeper of nations" may be drawn into the war. To us in this country it is significant that in London to-day, despite this change in the discount rate, our five-twenties were firm and a shade higher while English consols were weak and lower. What is the inference? That the time has already passed when the first symptoms of war and the rush to sell depressed our securities below their intrinsic value, and that the reaction has set in which is to assign them their real place above every European national security dealt in at the London Stock Exchange. The speculative holders have lost their bonds and the capitalists and private investors now hold them. Had this intelligence reached us at any other season than the present, when Wall street is at the seaside and watering places, the dulness and inactivity of the hour would give place to buoyancy, activity and excitement.

MONEY EASY.

The money market showed a further relaxation, and the transactions on call at rates above five per cent were purely exceptional. The prevailing rates on all classes of collaterals were four and five per cent, the larger government dealers having balances left with them at three per cent.

Foreign exchange was lower, although nominally quoted 109½ a 109¾ for sixty days sterling and 110¼ a 110¾ for sight bills. The present demands of the market seem to be fully supplied by the bills drawn against the recent loan of the Baring Brothers.

GOVERNMENTS STRONG.

The government market was strong, but shared the general dulness of the day. Prices advanced on light transactions, and the undertone of the market was decidedly firm. The steadiness of our securities in the English market, the light offerings to-day at the Treasury purchase and the steadiness of gold, combined to occasion an advance of a quarter to three-eighths per cent in the more active issues. It should not be forgotten, however, that the foreign bankers, who were heavy purchasers at the recent low quotations, bought simply for a brief speculative turn and not for investment. Hence, if the present prices should bring out sales of the bonds so held it will not be at all surprising. Indeed, the street may be prepared to see these reactions; but if the telegrams concerning the London market state the truth it is extremely doubtful whether speculative sales at these prices will prove at all profitable. The government offer to purchase elicited proposals for the sale of only $1,793,200 bonds. The market was highest at the close, when the quotations on the street were as follows:—United States currency, sixes, 110⅜ a 111; do., 1881, registered, 113¼ a 113½; do. do., coupon, 113¼ a 113½; do. five-twenties, registered, May and November, 110¼ a 110½; do. do., 1862, coupon, do., 111 a 111¼; do. do., 1864, do. do., 110¼ a 110⅝; do. do., 1865, do. do., 110⅜ a 110⅝; do. do., 1865, coupon, January and July, 109⅜ a 109½; do. do., 1867, do. do., 109⅜ a 109½; do. do., 1868, do. do., 109¼ a 109½; do. ten-forties, registered, 104 a 104¼; do. do., coupon, 107⅛ a 107¼.

GOLD STEADY—121⅞ A 122.

The gold market opened on the street at 122, but declined to 121⅞ on the firm prices for our bonds in London. As soon as the advance in the rate of discount was made known the price recovered to 122, but again went off to 121⅞ when it was found that the higher rate for money in London had not depressed American securities. Furthermore, although the specie shipment to-day was over a million and a half dollars, it is doubtful whether the shipments for the immediate future will be in proportion to the amounts sent since the inauguration of hostilities in Europe. The condition of the foreign exchanges is against any other presumption. The course of the market is shown in the table:—

10 A. M.	121⅞	1:51 P. M.	121⅞
10:11 A. M.	122	2 P. M.	121⅞
11 A. M.	121⅞	2:27 P. M.	121⅞
12 M.	121⅞	3 P. M.	121⅞
12:54 P. M.	122	4 P. M.	121⅞
1 P. M.	121⅞	5:30 P. M.	121⅞ a 121⅞

In the gold loan market the rate ranged from four per cent for carrying to flat for borrowing. The Siberia, for Europe, took out $1,584,556 in specie, and the Morro Castle, for Havana, $31,105. The operations of the Gold Exchange Bank were as follows:—

Gold cleared	$34,645,000
Gold balances	972,028
Currency balances	1,198,905

STOCKS DULL AND STRONG.

The Stock Exchange was only thinly attended and dealings were barely sufficient to make prices. In the Long Room the transactions were also on a limited scale; but the tone of the market was more buoyant on the apparent reversal of speculative feeling concerning American securities in the English market. Should foreign capital thus come to our shores seeking a refuge from the dangers attending a grand financial revulsion in the Old World, instead of recalling what it has already invested with us, it would prove a godsend to the half stranded cliques who, loaded up with stocks, are now sailing in very shallow water. The only danger is that the near approach of the season for active, if not stringent, money may cheat them of a harbor wherein to market their stocks upon the community. A "short, sharp and decisive" bull movement at this hour might prove a brilliant victory, but woe to the stragglers whom the ides of September shall catch looking for still higher prices when all their companions have scrambled to get out at the top of the market.

The following were the closing prices at the last session of the Stock Exchange:—Canton Company, 62 a 67; Consolidation Coal, 30; Cumberland Iron, 40; Western Union, 34¼ a 34⅜; Quicksilver, 4¼ bid; Mariposa, 5 a 5½; do., preferred, 9¾ a 10; Boston Water Power, 15 a 18; Adams Express, 67½ a 67¾; Wells-Fargo Express, 13¾ a 14¼; do. scrip, 2¼ a 2½; American Express, 43 a 43¼; United States Express, 43½ a 44; Pacific Mail, 39⅛ a 39¼; New York Central consolidated, 91⅝ a 91¾; do. scrip, 87⅜ a 87¾; Erie, 20 bid; Harlem, 132 a 134; Reading, 95⅛ a 95¼; Michigan Central, 117½ bid; Lake Shore, 89⅝ a 89¾; Illinois Central, 131 bid; Cleveland and Pittsburg, 105 bid; Chicago and Northwestern, 80½ a 81; do. preferred, 83¾ a 83⅞; Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, 77 a 79; New Jersey Central, 100½ a 100⅞; Rock Island, 113¼ a 113½; Milwaukee and St. Paul, 58¼ a 58⅜; do. preferred, 75½ a 75⅝; Toledo, Wabash and Western, 48 a 48¼; do. preferred, 72 bid; Fort Wayne, 92¾ bid; Chicago and Alton, 116 bid; Ohio and Mississippi, 32⅜ a 32⅝; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 104½ a 105; Morris and Essex, 88½ a 90; Boston, Hartford and Erie, 3⅛ a 3¼; Hannibal and St. Joseph, 107; do. preferred, 108½ a 108¾; Cleveland, Columbus and Indiana Central, 17¼ a 17½.

WASHINGTON.

A First Class Sensation in the Capital—Caning Match Between Ex-Congressmen — Reports from Indian Agencies—Important Tribes Peaceably Disposed.

WASHINGTON, August 4, 1870.

Causes of the Suicide of the Late French Minister—New Facts Elicited—His Insanity Established.

Since the decease of Prévost-Paradol many little facts have come to light tending to show that the lamented Minister did not, as a responsible being, put an end to his own existence, as at first very generally supposed, but that, on the contrary, his was a tolerably well ascertained case of self-destruction during a fit of insanity. The Marquis de Chambrun, one of the most intimate friends of the deceased, is well satisfied of the soundness of this theory, which, moreover, is the only one reconcilable with all the facts in the case. A few days ago the Marquis received a letter from M. Thiers, in which the latter says, substantially, that "poor Paradol was for a long time troubled with apprehensions of softening of the brain, and contemplated with horror the probability or possibility of having to live the life of one bereft of reason." According to M. Thiers Paradol had received medical attendance for his threatened malady while in France, and this fact, taken in connection with other little circumstances, would seem to establish with reasonable certainty that he was not sane at the time he put the pistol to his breast and discharged the contents into his heart. His letter to M. de Jardin and that to M. Berthemy are both consistent with this theory, so are his declarations to the Marquis de Chambrun and others, and his requests of them, in case anything should ever happen him, to take care of his children. It is believed now that when he made those declarations and wrote those letters the calamity that he anticipated was not suicide, but a loss of reason, which would unfit him to be any longer guardian of his own children. The act of purchasing the pistols also becomes cleared up consistently with the theory of insanity with the new light thrown upon it. In France he always kept pistols about his house as a measure of self-defence and protection against robbers. In the hurry of leaving that country he discovered he had neglected to bring with him his old favorite pistols. After being in this city a few days, and while suffering from the extreme heat and general debility, his cook came to him one morning and said:—

"Ah, Monsieur! this house is haunted. There are ghosts here, I am sure, for I hear strange noises every night."

M. Paradol answered, "Ah, yes! Marie, the house is haunted; but not with dead spirits. I am not afraid of the dead, but of the living."

The next day he bought the pistols and naturally enough told M. de Jardin that the reason he wanted them was because he was living alone and required them for protection against the possible attack of robbers. His daughter, who left this country under the impression that her father had died from natural causes, explained that he had been for some time in dread of insanity from softening of the brain, and also stated that it was his habit to keep pistols in his bedroom. This morbid dread of insanity, and the fact that his wife had died insane, weighed on his mind heavily, and, no doubt, hastened the terrible climax to his malady. The night preceding his death he had ordered his valet to rouse him early in the morning, so that he might take some medicine which had been prepared under his own instructions. From this it is inferred that when he retired to bed that night he had no thoughts of self-destruction; but he was unwell, and suffering greatly from the heat, and it is supposed that he woke up suddenly during the night with his head feverish and that in an instant the idea filled him that he was insane. That moment he took the pistol and shot himself through the heart. This is only a theory, to be sure, but it tallies with all the antecedent circumstances.

There is another little fact tending to show the condition of his mind. When he arrived here M. de Jardin asked him if he brought with him a court suit. He answered yes, but that he would not use it, because he felt himself too young in the diplomatic service to do any act that would make him appear so conspicuous. "Besides," said he, smiling, "you see the court dress is the same as that of the Cabinet costume, and when I return home and get elevated I will have this suit all ready." It is said, moreover, that he wrote a letter, addressed to M. Halevy, expressing a fear of approaching insanity, and begging him in that event to look after his children. I give these new points about the matter in justice to the memory of M. Paradol, which has been assailed.

A Speck of War at the Capital—Caning Match Between ex-Congressmen—A New Yorker Severely Punished.

The dulness of Washington was relieved somewhat to-day by the occurrence of a sensation nearly first class. There was a personal encounter between two live republican ex-Congressmen, and neither was killed. Neither experienced broken bones, though one of them got some smart whacks over the head and arms. The belligerents were Joseph Segar, of Virginia, and William S. Lincoln, of New York. Segar was chosen by the Old Dominion as Congressman at large, but was ruled out by the Committee on Elections and received two thousand dollars to soothe his wounded feelings. He is a Virginia gentleman, well up in years and wears gold spectacles, but he is full of fire and vigor and has the old Southern spirit that brooks not insult tamely. Lincoln was a Representative from New York in the Fortieth Congress; a little, dark-complexioned old gentleman, who sports a wig, and who, since his retirement from Congress, has become a very influential member of the lobby. He was quite active during the last session of Congress in working for several steamship enterprises, and was also interested in a railroad bill before the Virginia Legislature. It was his connection with the last mentioned affair that led to the unpleasant encounter with Segar the terrible. But of that further on. This morning Lincoln arrived at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad depot in the regular train from New York. Little dreaming of the reception in store for him he jumped out of the car and was nimbly walking through the depot building when Segar, smoking all over with rage and indignation, suddenly appeared and interrupted his progress. Said Segar, "Now I've got you, you d—d scoundrel, at last!" Saying which Segar raised his cane and brought it down upon the wig of Lincoln with uncomfortable force. Segar followed up this hostile demonstration with sundry whacks upon the body of Lincoln, putting in one rather severe upon the forehead and another across the arm of the astounded little New Yorker. The latter promptly adopted the Fabian tactics, but it appears he retreated in very bad order, evidencing a high state of demoralization. As he ran he shouted out, "Hold him! hold him! secure him! He'll kill me if he's not stopped!" And thus he ran, followed closely by the irate Virginian, until some people, including a policeman, overtook the assailant and put an end to further demonstrations of a striking character. The policeman took Segar before a Justice of the Peace, and Lincoln was carried to his home, Ingle place, on Capitol Hill, and had his wounds dressed by Dr. Ford, who happened to be near by. The injuries of Lincoln prove to be not very serious.

Now, as to the cause of the affray. It is quite a long story, but may be told within a reasonably brief compass. Your correspondent endeavored to get statements from both the parties concerned, but though Segar very willingly gave his version, Lincoln declined to be interviewed at all, on the ground that he had got "hurt this morning." Only the side represented by Segar, therefore, can be given. According to Segar these are substantially the facts:—Some time last spring Segar was engaged by Colonel Joe Stewart to go to Richmond to secure the extension of the charter of the Fredericksburg and Alexandria Railroad Company, which had expired by limitation, and in which Stewart is said to have had a large, perhaps the controlling interest. Mr. Lincoln was also an agent or attorney of Mr. Stewart, and was found by Mr. Segar, on his arrival in Richmond, operating in the interest of Mr. Stewart and, seemingly of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company, which, in the event of the extension of the lapsed charter, was to build the road from Fredericksburg to the Potomac river. Stewart authorized Segar to unite with Lincoln to secure the desired legislation, and the two did for a time co-operate to that end. Segar stayed in Richmond some ten weeks explaining the merits of the proposed measure, and having been some twenty and more years a member of the Legislature and an ardent advocate of the internal improvements of his State, finally, by explanations to individual members and written and printed arguments, and by correspondence with Thomas A. Scott, President of the Pennsylvania Central Company, he succeeded in securing the passage of the bill. The general impression seems to be that his efforts chiefly secured the passage of the bill for the recharter. While Segar was operating for the success of the measure Lincoln accepted and acknowledged his efficient service in the premises. After it became apparent that the efforts of Segar had put the success of the measure beyond doubt, Lincoln became indifferent and set up on his own hook, along with a Mr. C. S. Bundy, of Richmond, for the purpose, it is said, of monopolizing to those two the whole of a fund which was in reserve to pay the fees of the agents and attorneys who might put the bill through. Segar thought he detected the purpose, and finding that a large amount of odium had gathered around the proposed measure on account of Lincoln and some of his associates, notified a leading member of the Senate that he had dissolved all connection with these parties, and regarded himself only in the light of a friend of his State in a matter of the utmost moment to her and her interests, so that his efforts in behalf of a great scheme of State interest might be separated from all sordid connection and be more likely to succeed. After Mr. Segar had given much time and earnest energy to the subject Mr. Lincoln addressed to Mr. Stewart many letters, not only depreciating his (Segar's) services, but grossly derogatory of his private character, styling him, in one of his letters, as "that villain Segar," and accusing him of drunkenness and falsehood. The affair has caused a good deal of excitement here, as both the parties are well known and have hosts of friends.

Indian Affairs—The Cheyennes Peaceably Disposed—Taking the Indian Census.

Acting Commissioner Cady has a report from agent Brenton Darlington, of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations, saying that thirty-two lodges of the Cheyennes are at the agency. They are there voluntarily for the protection of life and property from depredations, and manifest a disposition to remain firm. Information has been received that Big Horse, the Cheyenne chief, with over twenty lodges, will be at the agency in a few days. Also, that Big Jake will soon follow with all he may induce to accompany him. There is an abundance of Indian testimony that Big Jake has been unremitting in his exertions to restrain Indian hostilities. There have been repeated invitations sent to the Cheyennes who are yet out to come in. They have been encamped on the south fork of Red river, some 300 miles from the agency. Little Raven is at the agency keeping a sharp lookout lest he be taken by surprise by hostile Indians, who, he says, are very wise and need close watching. He requested the agent to inform the Commissioner that it was unreasonable that he and his tribe should be deprived of arms while those tribes at war were able to obtain them in abundance. He also claims that the faith and promise pledged by the government in regard to mules stolen from his people by white men have not been fulfilled.

The Indian Commission will start for the Indian country in a few days. Brunot and Campbell will go to the Ogallala Sioux country to establish an Indian agency and trading post. Dodge and Stuart will aid the Commission before starting for the West by purchasing annuity goods in New York. Farwell, Lane and Collyer will visit the Osages, Pottawattamies and Creeks, and will consider the propriety of removing the Kansas Indians to some more suitable position.

General Sheridan's Visit to Europe.

It is stated at the War Department to-day that when Lieutenant General Sheridan heard of the declaration of war he applied for and obtained an indefinite leave of absence to visit Europe merely as an observer of events. It was only an individual arrangement.

Ruling of the Internal Revenue Commissioner.

In the case of a distiller, whose bonded warehouse and contents was accidentally destroyed by fire, it is ruled that the destruction of the spirits is not such a removal as renders the tax due at its occurrence, but that in such cases the tax on the spirits destroyed is not due until one year from the date of the entry bond.

The Attorney General on Georgia Affairs.

Attorney General Akerman declines addressing the Southern Republican Club, because in doing so he would have to allude to the Georgia case, which may soon come before him for a legal opinion. It is understood that Mr. Akerman favors an election this fall in that State.

Dr. Grindle Again Accused of Abortion or Malpractice—He Shows Fight.

The Board of Health on Wednesday notified Coroner Flynn that Dr. Henry D. Grindle, of 120 West Twenty-sixth street, had reported a still birth in his establishment. As the Doctor is notorious as the proprietor of a private lying-in asylum and has frequently been under surveillance the Coroner directed Dr. Shine to proceed to the house and make a preliminary examination, when he was assaulted by Dr. Grindle, who was arrested at the instance of Dr. Shine and locked up over night. Yesterday Coroner Flynn examined the mother, Mrs. Mary Mann, and ascertained that she is the wife of a William H. Mann, a lawyer, having an office at 34½ Pine street, and that she resided with a Mrs. Brown, at 130 East Sixteenth street, prior to the 16th ult., on which date she entered Dr. Grindle's house to await confinement. She stated that labor continued for over a day and a half; and as there was suspicion of either criminal carelessness, negligence or ignorance Dr. Grindle was notified that he must find bail in the sum of $5,000 to answer.

ANOTHER STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE.

Is It Another Etzold Case?

Mr. Julius Weil, a well known dry goods dealer in Jersey City, disappeared on Tuesday evening and has not since been seen by his family or friends. When he was leaving the store he sent a note to his family stating in a rather indefinite manner that they would hear from him. Mr. Weil's partner, on learning of his disappearance, took possession of the goods in the store, and the business is suspended. Mr. Weil was a man of steady, temperate habits, of good standing in the business world until recently, when he became pecuniarily embarrassed. Many of his friends believe he will soon return.

A DASH AT THE SERGEANT.

Late on Wednesday night one Thomas Brady, a notorious rowdy and ex-policeman, perpetrated an outrageous assault on Sergeant Benedict, of the Newark police force, while being arrested for drunkenness. Springing at the Sergeant he tore open the wound inflicted by Martin McLaughlin, the blacksmith, with a red hot poker, some weeks ago. But for the opportune arrival of constabulary assistance the Sergeant must have been killed. Brady was locked up over night and yesterday morning admitted to bail.

DEATH'S DAWNING.

John Real, the Condemned—Last Hours Upon Earth—Final Attempt to Gain a Respite—Real's Last Appeal.

The last day of the unhappy Real in this world has passed, and within a few hours after these lines are perused by the readers of the HERALD he will be summoned to the presence of his Creator, a victim to the inexorable dictum of the law. Two years and twelve days have elapsed since that midsummer night on First avenue when police officer John Smedick died by his hand, and over a year ago the memorable trial which lasted but one day took place. Yesterday morning the ominous scaffold was erected in the Tombs, within a few feet of the cell in which for many a weary day and night the condemned prisoner waited in vain for the word which would remove from him the dread shadow of the tree of death and give him a chance to spend the remainder of his life in solitude and repentance. Every effort that could be made by his counsel, ex-Judge Stuart; by his other friends, by the clergymen who attended him and by those who thought that imprisonment for life was a sufficient expiation for his crime, was tried; but all in vain. The last attempt was a telegram sent by two Catholic clergymen to Governor Hoffman at Newport to grant the unhappy prisoner even a week's respite to enable him to be better prepared for his awful doom. The answer to Judge Stuart and Sheriff O'Brien was a dignified but firm denial to interfere with the course of the law. The sound of the hammers putting together the timbers beneath which he is to stand this morning, and over which will pass the rope that will encircle his neck, awoke him yesterday morning and roused him to a sense of the short span of life allowed him. He was visited at an early hour by two clergymen from St. Peter's church and by the good Sisters of Charity, who have striven long and earnestly to prepare his soul for the last dread tribunal before which he must stand. All through the day his demeanor was that of one who was fully prepared for the great trial and whose soul was resigned to an inevitable fate. In order not to disturb this calm serenity of mind the prison officials mercifully spared him the infliction of Bohemian interviewers, who congregated outside the prison like a flock of vultures on the scent of death. He received the news of the failure of the last attempt to save him with unwonted resignation and only displayed emotion in his expressions of gratitude towards those who worked so earnestly and perseveringly in his behalf. Last evening he bade farewell—a tearful, sad, affectionate one—with those he loves and whose love for him was unchanged—his poor father and sisters—and the door of his cell clanged on him to be opened again this morning for the last time. Outside the Tombs, on the steps and beneath the massive Egyptian columns, groups of men, women and children were huddled, talking in hurried whispers of the dread tragedy of the coming day. The tenement houses of the neighborhood were emptied of their cosmopolitan, ragged inmates, and the moonlight fell in flickering rays upon awe-stricken faces, merry children unconscious of their proximity to death, and reckless, brutalized features, as some of the choice spirits of the "dangerous classes" passed by trolling out some Bacchanalian ditty. One or two of the "guardians" of the night paced on their beat, past the iron railings and granite walls, within which a fellow being was counting the sands of life fast running out. Midnight at the Tombs, with the shadow of the scaffold falling athwart the bleak corridor, its victim in his barred cell striving to shut out from his mind the terrible reality of his position, the never ceasing hum of metropolitan life without mingling with the anguished sobs of a father and sister, is a subject to reduce to seriousness the veriest scoffer that ever lived.

Real's Last Appeal to the Public.

John Real last night issued his last appeal to the public, as follows:—

TO THE PUBLIC:—Governor Hoffman has refused to reprieve me. I must die an ignominious death. I know this. I feel it; but my poor suffering sisters and my faithful father feel it far more than I. It is on this account, as well as on my own, that I feel it my duty to give the public the following facts:—

I killed Smedick, but I did not murder him. He had repeatedly beaten me and had repeatedly threatened my life. I killed him in self-defence. I shot him after he had struck me twice and was following up his attack. I am able to prove this by the testimony of unimpeachable witnesses, but the opportunity has been denied me. Governor Hoffman would not listen to these witnesses, but I am sure that the people will. Governor Hoffman would not go behind the record of the trial, but I firmly believe that the public will. A few words regarding the trial.

I was tried, convicted and sentenced within twelve hours. The public were excited over the Rogers murder and I was offered as the sacrifice. Now, when the question of my reprieve comes up the public are again excited over the Nathan murder, and I am again to be offered as a public sacrifice. These are harsh words, but the facts will bear them out. My counsel vainly asked for time to produce witnesses. Their testimony would have convinced the jury of my innocence of the crime of murder. They would have been in the court room if they had known the trial would have been finished on that day. But the Judge was inexorable. He refused to delay the trial. The record was made up without the testimony of the eye-witnesses who could have cleared me of murder, and I was doomed to death.

Who were the witnesses against me? They were officers Lambrecht and Mee, and men named Carpenter and Hyland. Lambrecht is now accused of perjury before Justice Coulter; Hyland has been held to bail for drawing a revolver on a citizen, and Carpenter has been found guilty of robbery and sent to the Penitentiary. I appeal to the sober sense of the people. Should a man be sent to his grave on the testimony of such men as these?

Officer Mee was allowed to give only just testimony enough to weigh heavily against me. He gave words spoken by me in the excitement caused by my arrest. He was not allowed to give further conversation with me, which would have destroyed the effect of those words. In his sworn affidavit before Commissioner White he says "He had another conversation with Real next morning, in which Real stated the reason why he shot Smedick was that he met him on the street and commenced to beat him, as he had done before, and that he could not stand his clubbing any longer. He said he was on his way to his vessel which he was watching when Smedick assaulted him."

John Mahony, an honest teamster, in a similar affidavit, says:—"I saw an officer strike a man twice on the head with a club, and then saw the man turn and give two shots, and then saw the officer fall." Philip Comisky, a glassblower, without a stain on his reputation, make affidavit that he "saw the officer in the act of using his club against Real, and saw him strike him or at him one or more times, and immediately after deponent heard two pistol shots."

All this is evidence that Governor Hoffman refused to consider, preferring the testimony of men who have since been sent to the penitentiary or brought before the courts for perjury and other crimes. Could the Governor have reflected that he was bringing shame and sorrow upon the gray head of my fond father, and rending the hearts of my four affectionate sisters with anguish, when he resolutely shut his eyes to the testimony, and resolved to go by the record of Judge Barnard's court.

But the Governor does not even heed the record of the Court. The jury, after duly weighing the evidence, unanimously recommended me to mercy. And this is not all. Three of the jurors have made affidavit before the Governor that "We would not have assented to such a verdict, except that we were assured that a recommendation to mercy would be sure to effect a commutation of the penalty to imprisonment for life in State Prison. That recommendation was agreed upon in the jury room, with the understanding and belief by all the jurors, so far as we know, that the prisoner would not be hanged, but would finally be sent to State Prison."

With these facts ever burning upon my mind I have not been without hopes of a commutation of my sentence. It has seemed impossible to me that such evidence should not have had its effect upon the mind of the Governor. What man in my position could have thought otherwise. The Governor offers the Nathan murder, and Judge Barnard held up the Rogers murder as an excuse for my death.

But what had I to do with those murders? I did not murder either Mr. Nathan or Mr. Rogers. I should have had justice without any reference to those murders. Should I, an innocent man, be sent to the gallows because the police failed to discover the men who did those bloody deeds?

But these are but mere excuses. I am sent to my grave for far different reasons. All my political friends in the Twenty-first ward were opposed to Mr. Hoffman's nomination for Governor. They gave all their support to Mr. Henry C. Murphy, of Brooklyn, who was a rival candidate. So long as my friends sustained Mr. Hoffman and the other Tammany nominees, so long I was undisturbed. My case was never called to trial until my friends supported Mr. Murphy as a candidate for Governor months and months after I was arrested. These facts are not only known to Governor Hoffman, but to nearly every politician in the city. The Tammany politicians took advantage of the excitement caused by the Rogers murder to punish my friends for their refusal to support Hoffman by bringing me to trial. Oakey Hall sat upon the bench with Judge Barnard, and the trial was rushed through without allowing me time to defend myself. Had my friends continued to uphold Tammany, I might now have been at liberty. Men are now at large through the influence of Tammany who have committed, unlike me, unprovoked murders.

Take the case of Donohue. He is charged with the murder of Florence Scannell. He is now out on bail. Why? Is it not because he is a member of the Tammany Hall General Committee, and because he has been made a member of the Americus Club since the murder? I feel confident that I, like him, would have escaped if my friends had followed Tammany's leadership. Before the trial one of my friends met Peter B. Sweeny in the Park. Sweeny said, "Real must be hanged. He has got to be hanged. The interests of Tammany Hall demand it."

Was it for the interests of Tammany Hall that Governor Hoffman refused to commute my sentence? Was it for this that he refused to grant a respite when implored by some good priests who asked for a few days in which to prepare my soul for eternity?

But the will of God be done. I feel that the Governor has acted willfully, but from the bottom of my soul I forgive him, and I pray that God may forgive him too, for I feel in my last moments that he needs the forgiveness of God. I die warmly thanking my friends for all they have done for me and they have done much. To the Sheriff and the warden and all the keepers I am indebted for the kindest sympathy and attention. God, I am sure, will reward the faithful priests and the good Sisters of Mercy, who have been unremitting in their kindness to me. I die guiltless of the stain of murder. Of this I am conscious. And I die in the hope that this fact will soften the bitterness, the pain and the anguish of my poor father, sisters and relatives while weeping over my grave.

JOHN REAL.

BASE BALL NOTES.

For the game between the selected nines from New York and Brooklyn, to take place to-morrow on the Union Grounds hosts of volunteers have been found, and the committee have selected nines which, it is believed, will give a good exhibition of the beauties of the game. The principals in the late ocean yacht race have been invited and are expected to be present. At the conclusion of the base ball match the Knickerbocker La Crosse Club will give an exhibition of their skill, so that aside from the charitable object of the occasion there will be presented amusement enough to attract a large crowd. Should the weather be unfavorable the game will be postponed until the following Saturday.

The Forest City Club, of Rockford, Ill., on Wednesday defeated the Athletics, of Philadelphia, the score being—Forest City, 15; Athletics, 10.

NEW YORK STATE POLITICS.

Session of the Republican State Committee at Saratoga—A Convention Called for September 7—Contests Between New York City Factions—The Speeches Delivered Wednesday Night.

SARATOGA, August 4, 1870.

The Republican State Committee had a six hours' session at Congress Hall to-day. A State Convention is called to meet at Saratoga Springs on the 7th of September. Hamilton Harris was appointed to prepare an address to be published with the call, which is the same in terms as the one issued last year.

Regarding the contests between the Seventh, Ninth and Fifteenth districts in New York city, the committee heard arguments and decided to have a revision of the enrolment in the Seventh district. The Ninth district contestants compromised, and each side will have half of the committees. In the Fifteenth district no action is deemed necessary.

After hearing contestants the Fifteenth district committee voted. No action was needed on their part and the organization was recognized by the city committee as regular.

The following is the speech delivered by Senator Conkling at the serenade last night:—

I am assured that the motive of this visit is personal in part. I hope it is in the unceasing round of politics; nothing is so good as the kindness and regard of those whose esteem we value. In return for your presence I offer my thanks and well wishes to you all. You are republicans—I am a republican. We were never more earnest republicans than now. Your presence is gratifying, because it means more than personal regard to any man. It means readiness to carry the old flag, with the old dash and determination, and to win the old victories. The unity of the republican party, concord and harmony among republicans everywhere, is the meaning of us all. The work of the republican party is not finished, nor is there any other party able or willing to finish it. The republican party has done much, indeed more than any political organization in history. It has rescued a great government from conspirators and traitors; it has conducted successfully the greatest and most costly war of the human race; it has administered government and finance in a period of transactions and events more complex, vast and novel than any one in the annals of recorded time. Beyond all this, it has emancipated four million slaves and placed them on their feet, clothed with the garment of American citizenship. It has recreated half a continent, it has established liberty and right everywhere and made the name of America respected, if not terrible, among the nations of the earth. War has gone from us; its bloody shadow falls on France; its tramp rocks thrones, and kings are sea sick now. Perhaps war has gone with avenging hand to smite the sick man who dominates the land of Lafayette; perhaps war strikes the hour for the Emperor who plotted and schemed against us in the day of our trial. However this may be, God grant that no harm may come to Germany. Germany sympathized with us, the sons of Germany fought for us, and cheers of victory went up in the German tongue from the burning battle fields of our rebellion. Germany's constitution is like ours, Prussia believes as we do, in education for all, and republicans everywhere join me in the hope that no harm is in store for Germany. Returning to our own land, war, as I said, has gone. America, blessed with the opportunities, and charged with the responsibilities of a dear-bought peace, is either to be crushed by the weight of her magnificent destiny, or to rise to a height of civilization and grandeur which the nationalities never reached and the centuries never knew.

In the career before us, as in every free system, government is to be directed by political organizations. The republican party is now directing national affairs, and it has never failed in the presence of emergencies or events. It cannot be spared; the nation needs it yet. It has a Congress of which it does not become me here to speak. It has a President who has never disappointed a just expectation, and who, as a patriot, a soldier, a President and a man, has earned the confidence and admiration of his countrymen. Turning from the greatest military command and of military successes, he assumed the most complex and commanding of civil trusts, and he has so borne himself in his great office that every reasonable expectation has been realized. Were we ever stronger abroad than now? In what has the administration failed at home? The revenue has been honestly collected—so honestly that for fifteen months, with sources of revenue curtailed by Congress, the receipts have exceeded by sixty-six millions the receipts for the corresponding period under the preceding administration. The public debt has been rapidly diminished, the public credit lifted up at home and abroad, and yet taxes have been dismissed until but few remain. Eighty millions of taxes have just been dispensed with—fifty-seven millions of internal taxes and twenty-three of customs duties. Is there more that men had a right to expect? Such stewardship deserves and will receive the public approbation. New York's great seal should attest the general approval, and with concord among members of the same household of faith, New York's great seal will attest it. We have at last an act of Congress under which an election may once more be held in the city of New York—a law seeking to substitute a fair election for that scandalous farce which has so often been enacted on election days. The provisions I speak of will call into being inspectors to watch the registry, the vote, and, above all, the count, and the Marshal is empowered to preserve order and safety at the polls. With a fair election and votes fairly counted, we need only conciliation and unity among ourselves, and then action, earnest action, and New York will pronounce for the republican party and the administration of General Grant. To this end let us all work. But I do not mean to make a speech, and, renewing my acknowledgements, bid you all good night.

After Senator Conkling had concluded, he was followed by Horace Greeley, who dwelt upon the constitutional amendments as the great work of the party. Both speakers were enthusiastically applauded and confirmed the inauguration of harmonious feelings. Greeley is named to-day as the probable candidate for Governor.

THE CLAM GOURMANDS.

The Great Annual Connecticut Clam Gorge—The Shellfish Fat Men—Ponderosity on Its Dignity—The Sceptre Departs from Fisk.

GREGORY'S POINT, ON THE SOUND, Conn., August 4, 1870.

The third annual clambake of this society took place this afternoon at this place, near Norwalk. The day opened fine, and a large crowd of the "heavy weights" and citizens from the surrounding country were in attendance. Dinner was served under the Fairfield County Agricultural Society's tent at two o'clock. Mr. Sanford Sholes, proprietor of the Gregory Point House, had provided liberally, as he thought, for all the hungry mouths that might offer; but before dinner was one-half over he found that he had missed his mark. Owing to the extreme dry weather or some other cause appetites were more than usually sharp, and a few more bushels had to be supplied. The oldest inhabitant never saw 125 bushels of round clams, fifty bushels oysters, twenty barrels sweet corn, 500 pounds fish, &c., demolished in so short a time. The City Band of Bridgeport, Conn., under the leadership of Mr. H. Blish, furnished fine music. In the midst of the eating, drinking and music a terrible thunder storm passed over, drenching the hungry souls to the skin, and the force of the wind burst in the tent, somewhat marring the enjoyment of those inside, although the rain itself was quite acceptable. Previous to dinner the election of officers took place, as follows:—

Andrew S. Hull, of Danbury, Conn., President; L. H. Copeland, of Bridgeport, Conn., Vice President, and B. W. Maples, of Westport, Conn., Secretary.

The great "cane" of the society, held for the past year by J. A. P. Fisk, of New York, was transferred to the new President. The weighing of the monsters then took place:—

THREE MEN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

During the prevalence of the storm yesterday three laborers, standing in the porch of the new Methodist church in Hoboken, were struck with lightning and fell senseless to the ground. They were not fatally injured, however, as they were partially resuscitated, by Doctor Elder, and conveyed home. One of them, named Nicholas, resides in Twenty-fifth street, New York. Another, named Andrew Banners, lives with his family in Meadow street, Hoboken. Two immense rafters were shattered, causing heavy damage to the church. It was probably the "returning shock" which affected the men.

YACHTING.

The Race for the Queen's Cup.

The most extensive preparations are being made for the great race on Monday next for the Queen's Cup. Should the elements prove favorable the display will undoubtedly be the finest ever witnessed in the bay. American yachtmen are confident that the much talked of prize will not pass from their hands; but the history of yachting shows that in such contests the victor cannot, with any degree of certainty, be pointed out before the struggle. Mr. Ashbury will courageously enter the list of competitors with the famous Cambria, and should he carry the honors he will have achieved a triumph that must elicit universal admiration. A large number of steamers will convey spectators over the course, and the race will be watched with the deepest interest.

The following official letter has been forwarded to Mr. Ashbury by the Secretary of the New York Yacht Club:—

OFFICE SECRETARY OF THE NEW YORK YACHT CLUB, No. 41 WALL STREET, NEW YORK, August 3, 1870.

JAMES ASHBURY:—

DEAR SIR—I am instructed by the judges of the contest for the "America" Cup to express to you their desire that you elect any position in the line formed for the start that you may feel disposed to take.

The club steamer will be on the ground and aid you in assuming such position on the morning of the race.

Yours, &c., H. MORTON, Secretary New York Yacht Club.

The Newport (RI) News of 2d inst says:—

The masts having been cut away from the wreck of bark Trojan, sunk back of Fort Walcott, there is nothing to mark her whereabouts except at low water, and she is likely to become an obstruction to navigation. She was sunk there against the protests of U S Engineer Houston, some 4 years ago, to extinguish a fire burning in her hold, and it was only finally consented to with the promise that she would be raised. It is not likely now that that promise will ever be fulfilled.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A.—THE LIFE SUSTAINING PRINCIPLE.—THE VITAL and the muscular systems are entirely distinct from each other. A man may have the brawn of a Hercules, but if he is deficient in vital energy he will not wear as well or last as long, or be as healthy and happy while he does last, as the man of ordinary, or even slender build, who possesses a larger share of this animating principle. One of the greatest recommendations of that pure vegetable invigorant, HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, is that it increases the vital force of the system. No medicine can double the volume of a man's muscle, or thicken and vulcanize his thews and sinews; but Hostetter's Bitters has an effect much more important. Its use promotes constitutional vigor. It reinforces the life-power, of which bone and sinew and muscle are merely the instruments, holding the same relation to it that machinery does to steam. Let the slight and apparently fragile take heart, they may have more stamina, though far less physical strength, than the broad-shouldered athletes they regard with envy. To restore, to sustain, to increase this staminal principle which, when in full supply, is the source of health and the best guarantee of longevity, is a special property of the famous restorative. It is not only a specific for dyspepsia, biliousness, intermittent fevers, constipation, &c., and a preventive of all diseases of a malarious character, but the best of all medicines for strengthening the constitution and awakening the powers of nature, from whatever cause they may have become lethargic.

LOVE AND DIAMONDS.

The Case of "Polk" Perry, the Newark Gambler—He is Admitted to Bail in $2,000—His Side of the Case.

The arrest last Friday of James K. Polk Perry, a member of the Newark gambling fraternity, in that city, on a requisition granted by Governor Geary, of Pennsylvania, was duly noted in the HERALD, together with the main facts, as alleged, of the case. Yesterday Perry returned to Newark, having procured the necessary $2,600 bail for his liberation from prison in the City of Brotherly Love pending his trial next September. He tells his side of the story which, while it does not relieve him of the disgrace of being a professional gambler, nor the odium of being an associate of sharpers, certainly does put a less criminal light on his exploits, and invests his story with a dash of romance of a certain character. He is really quite a good looking young man, with an honest, open face, and gets up a toilet regardless of expense. During the war he served with credit. Here, on the tented field he acquired an extraordinary passion for "poker," "seven up" and such like games. Some year or so ago in Trenton he contracted an acquaintance with a beautiful daughter of Pennsylvania named Lottie Willis. Lottie was the Cora Pearl of Trenton and was notorious for her dashing style and affaires du cœur.

By and by Lottie removed to the congenial air of Chicago, and while an inmate of a gilded palace of sin became acquainted with W. H. Strader, a well-to-do merchant of Cincinnati, Ohio. Him she fascinated and dazzled to such a degree by her varied accomplishments that nothing would satisfy him but matrimony. Prior, however, to this auspicious event, he loaned her a magnificent diamond ring, valued at $950, studded with nine brilliants, and while the fair Lottie was in Pennsylvania on a visit to her mother at Morrisville, "Poke" Perry turned up, and in order to raise some funds she gave him the ring to pawn. He did so, got $450 on it, and, as he alleges, spent it all with her, part of the money being used to build a fence around her mother's house. Meanwhile Strader and Lottie united their fortunes in the bonds of holy wedlock, but it seems she could not tear from her heart of hearts the image of young Perry. Indeed, it is averred by Perry's friends she was equally infatuated about "Poke" as Strader was about her. Poke had meanwhile made a determined effort at reform and made the acquaintance of an excellent young lady of the Ninth ward of Newark, the daughter of a member of the New Jersey Legislature, and before long anticipated being married to her. Lottie dogged him night and day, however, and finally Strader fairly fumed with jealousy and as a dernier resort, Perry's friends declare, trumped up the charge of larceny against him and hence his arrest. Several leading citizens of Newark have now come forward in behalf of the accused and announce their intention to fight his cause to the bitter end.

AN EX-CONFEDERATE GENERAL ON THE WAR.

General Joseph E. Johnston Interviewed on the Current War Topic.

General Joseph E. Johnston is sojourning at the Sweet Chalybeate Springs. A correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch reports an interview with him on the subject of the war in Europe.

One of us said:—"General, they seem to be very slow about getting to business over the water." "Oh, no," he replied, "two powerful nations, such as France and Prussia, require time to prepare for a war. Each side must concentrate its forces before attempting to cross into the other's country. It would be a fatal mistake to cross without efficient force and material to sustain an invasion. I suppose the leader who first finds himself with the larger force will be the one to cross."

When asked about the relative merits of the troops he said that the French had generally been successful in their combats with the Prussians, but this was as much due to their excellent generalship and the confidence of the men in their generals as to any other cause.

It was a mistake to suppose that the Prussians were not soldiers. Military knowledge was more widely diffused among the people of Prussia than of France, because the Prussian conscript was enlisted for three years only, while the French were enlisted for seven years. Thus the Prussians were more constantly changing, and military knowledge was diffused among a greater number of men.

As to the generalship of the two armies, the General expressed the opinion that France had the advantage in point of experience. The French generals had been tried in the Algerian and Crimean and Italian wars, and their merits proven. The merits of the Prussian generals could not be discussed, as they have never had opportunity as yet to display them. The short campaign of 1866 was devoid of military actions and movements sufficient to prove the military ability of their generals.

"Yes; but General, there is Von Moltke; is not he a great general?"

"He has that reputation, but not deservedly, I think. He had the luck to defeat an old and inefficient general at Sadowa; whereas if he had had a general of any tact or ability opposed to him he would have received a terrible whipping. From the only historical version of the battle in English that I have seen it appears that he started two columns from two different points to advance on Benedek. These two columns were not in communication with each other. Benedek calmly awaited the attack, and while engaged with one column the other took him in the rear of his right. But what good leader would have waited for these two columns to come up on him? Napoleon the First or our own Jackson would have advanced rapidly upon one of the columns with his entire army, defeated it, and then have returned to take the other one in its turn."

"His reputation, then, General, was as deserved as that of Grant, and he deserved about the same credit for his strategy?"

"Oh, no," rejoined the General, evidently mistaking the drift of the remark, "Grant would never have stayed there like Benedek. He would have advanced upon one of the advance columns and engaged them separately."

Touching the subject of American symathy with the opposing nations he expressed the idea, with a slight indication of disgust, that politicians would doubtless play upon their sympathies for Prussia in the approaching elections in order to influence the German vote. He could not understand it why the press of the South was so unanimous in its sympathy with Prussia. In Savannah, where he lived, there was hardly a day upon which the papers did not make an attack upon Napoleon. The impression seemed to be that Napoleon was a despot and King Frederick was not. He considered this a great mistake. Napoleon was a wise and sagacious ruler, and France was one of the freest countries in the world, and nowhere could a man find better protection for his life and property. The Prussian government was one of the most despotic of Europe. The Germans were great red republicans, and in this country had almost as a mass fought and voted against the South. As to the interests of Europe in the struggle, he thought that they should be with France, for if France were defeated Napoleon would be dethroned. Such an event as this would convulse France, and there could be no peace in Europe for a long time.

A bystander playfully remarked:—"General, you and General Lee ought to be over there to settle this."

Laughing, he said:—"The General and myself would not make much headway with their soldiers with our limited knowledge of the German language. No leader should command an army without knowing his men. Here, I think, is where the mistake lies in appointing so many American officers to the Egyptian army. It is very nice for the officers, who are well paid, but it will not prove so well for the Egyptians."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?—The Emperor Napoleon has broadly hinted at a long war. The question has thus been raised, what does he mean by a long war? Is it his purpose to play war on the Prussian frontier till England and Russia intervene for peace? or does he count upon such a struggle with Prussia as will make it a long war? As it looks to us the door of peace is still left ajar.

THE LONG BRANCH RACES.—They had another great day yesterday for the sporting and gay circles of Long Branch at Monmouth Park. The first season at that course may be safely pronounced the most brilliant and successful of any in the history of the turf on this Continent. The new steamboat and railway facilities to this Long Branch course, and the surf and the gay summer season, and the great gathering of the fashionable world, including General Grant's and Collector Murphy's and Mr. Tweed's headquarters down there, have contributed mainly to the great success of these races as a popular attraction. See our report of yesterday's sports. There will be no race to-day; but to-morrow, the last, will be the greatest day of all, with its four mile heats and the splendid horses entered for the contest.

THE REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE is in session at Saratoga and has called the State Convention for September 7, to meet at the same fashionable point. The most important work before the committee is to harmonize different factions which have been threatening such disaster to the party of late. The Fenton defection is not a very serious one, and Fenton himself appears willing to come back and be a good boy, but there is a sense of disappointment among the yeomanry of the party in this State at some of the unlucky proceedings of Congress, which the committee will find it knotty work to allay. The refusal to abolish the income tax and the neglect to admit foreign vessels to American register are mistakes that will impress themselves upon the result of the elections next fall, unless a very clear platform is adopted and some very honest names are put forward on the ticket.

THE NATHAN MURDER.—The Coroner's investigation of the circumstances of the death of Mr. Nathan began yesterday at the Civil Justice's Court, in Twenty-second street. The testimony of officer Mangan and of the two workmen, Le Maistre and Smith, throws no additional light on the dreadful mystery. After this testimony had been rendered the investigation was abruptly closed and was adjourned until Monday next. The public has been at a loss to know why the Coroner's investigation was postponed until yesterday, five days after the first inquest on the body. It is still more surprised that it should now be postponed for four days more. A case of such terribly momentous importance to all citizens assuredly demands the most immediate, incessant and impartial investigation. We may rest satisfied, however, that during the painful interval which must elapse before the Coroner's jury shall reassemble our able and indefatigable Superintendent of Police, Mr. Jourdan, will leave no stone unturned to compass the perfect ends of justice.

The News from the Seat of War—Severe Fighting and Prussian Victory.

The special cable telegrams from Europe which we publish to-day reveal the fact very plainly that the two great armies of France and Prussia which stand opposed to each other on the Rhine are almost afraid to make a first grand move. The military power which has been evoked by each nation is so vast, and the field and other strategic considerations have been so maturely considered and so nicely balanced that it may be said that the very development of the science of war almost paralyzes its most ardent votaries. Failure in the first general action may bring utter ruin to the vanquished. The monarch who will be discomfited in the fight, Bonaparte or the Hohenzollern, may be almost set down as the il perduto among the crowns of Europe. If the tri-color of France waves in triumph over the field it will illuminate the way from the point of victory towards Berlin. Should the black eagle of Prussia "spread its wings on the blast" of triumph Paris may fear for a repetition of scenes similar to those which her people experienced during the period of the occupation of the French capital by the allies. The statue of Napoleon the First was then hauled down by a rope thrown round it by Prussian hands. The representative of his name and glory may well dread their return toward the Tuileries flushed with victory, animated perhaps by the promptings of a modern Holy Alliance.

Waiting thus for the grand event the troops are employed pretty actively. Some sharp actions have just occurred. Marshal MacMahon made a personal survey of the line of the Rhine river from Kehl bridge yesterday. It was known pretty exactly that he was marking out certain points for an advance of his forces to be made on Saturday or Sunday. The Prussians observed it and anticipated him. They first advanced on the French line at one place and drove in their outposts with some loss. Next the Prussians assaulted the French position at Weissemburg. They were led on by the Crown Prince of Prussia and were in force. They stormed the French position and carried it at the point of the bayonet after a desperate struggle on the part of the French. Napoleon's troops had a general with two staff officers killed. They lost also one gun, their camp and five hundred prisoners, including many of their Algerian turcos. The Prussian regiment of Grenadier Guards suffered severely also. They had a general wounded.

Our special cable telegrams, which describe the above actions, convey an idea of the news which we may expect to hear when the perhaps final clash of arms takes place between these vast contending hosts, the one fighting for an imperial crown, a dynasty and a rebaptized name, the other for divine right, territorial consolidation and unity, fatherland, citizen franchise, military reputation and Teutonic propagandism. It will be a dread issue.

Our Shipping Interests—The Question of an Extra Session of Congress.

The wide awake little kingdom of Belgium, it appears, has stepped in to take the place of Germany in the matter of those important lines of German Atlantic merchant steamers, the place made vacant by this Franco-Prussian war. Had the Congress of the United States seconded the timely message of the President upon this subject the transfer of those German lines of steamers might have made a very simple business transaction. As it is the opportunity appears to be lost.

It is given out, however, that to-day or to-morrow, General Grant at Washington will hold a Cabinet council to consider the question of calling an extra session of Congress, and in view of the very strong probabilities of England's early participation in this Continental war, and in view of the necessity which will follow this event for some special legislation by Congress in reference to American neutrality, belligerent rights, commercial interests and the Monroe doctrine, we think the best course that the President can take is to make sure provision against all probable contingencies by a proclamation embracing say a notice of sixty days for the assembling of the two houses in extraordinary session. Fortunately, there will now be no difficulty in the matter of elections. The two houses of the present Congress, as now organized, will continue till March next, and in assembling on an extra call they will be at once ready for business; and as the compensation of the members is fixed the only costs of an extra session will be its contingent expenses. Hence, while there can be no serious objections to an extra session of Congress, the demands of the crisis for special legislation looking to American interests are unanswerable.

JOHN REAL.—The murder which John Real committed over two years ago will be finally expiated to-day. There is more of a solemn warning in this slow but determined justice than there was in the quick, retributive execution of Jack Reynolds. In the execution that will occur this morning there are none of the elements of popular vengeance, no evidence of acquiescence in a general demand for the life of some one, no hurried disproval of the vaunted theory of the murderer that "hanging was played out," which characterized the "taking off" of that poor devil of a philosopher. On the contrary Real has had two years of contest with the law for his life. He has had the benefit of appeals, writs of error, petitions for mercy and the Governor's decision. Every means of saving his life has failed, and therein we hold that the example of his execution will prove more salutary to would-be murderers than a hasty settlement of his case could have proven.

REMOVAL OF THE BROOKLYN NAVY YARD.—This subject seems at last to have assumed a practical shape by the publication of the report of Captain Ammen to the Navy Department. The objections to the present site are there given in a clear and convincing manner, so that Congress at its next session will be able to appreciate their importance and act accordingly. Now, as it seems to be pretty well settled that the Navy Yard is to be removed from its present location, the question arises—to what point shall it be transferred? From an investigation into the advantages and disadvantages of the sites thus far proposed it is clear that the weight of testimony is in favor of locating it upon some favorable point on the Hudson river, say from sixteen to twenty miles from New York city. The arguments in favor of this location have been partially presented to Congress; but now that the change is certain to be made those who favor the erection of the Navy Yard in convenient, but not too convenient, distance of the city, should begin the work of pressing their views before the next Congress in an energetic and proper manner.

Progress of the Improvements in the Public Parks.

The Board of the Department of Public Parks are now located in their new and elegant quarters on Broadway, adjoining the Chemical Bank. These quarters are central and permanent. The Department having at last settled on their own base are proceeding with the work of improving and ornamenting the public parks in a manner which, if fully carried out, will prove a lasting glory to the city and eventuate in their receiving the unanimous approval and applause of all good citizens. The march of improvement is already discernible in the Battery and the Bowling Green; and yet considerable remains to be done to make the former at all presentable after its long time most wretched and squalid condition. This is really a herculean labor, but the energetic manner in which the work has been thus far carried on betokens its speedy and satisfactory completion. The undertaking to dislodge the booth squatters around the entire semicircle of the Battery was deemed a most hazardous one for any party that should attempt it; but under the persuasive eloquence of the acting President of the Board, Judge Hilton, and the admirable tactics of his resolute lieutenant, Superintendent Wiley, the "object of the expedition" was accomplished without the loss of a single human soul, nor, possibly, the sacrifice of a single democratic vote in the First ward. The City Hall Park is gradually assuming a new and improved appearance, which is certainly creditable to the energy of the Department, considering the numbers of the seedy old "chain-gang" and the swarms of public loafers who have for years been allowed to congregate about the premises night and day, and consider that they had a pre-emption right to all "parts and appurtenances" thereof. Tompkins square is undergoing a wonderful transmogrification, so much so that it is expected when the estimable President of the Board, Mr. Peter B. Sweeny, returns from his European tour he will scarcely recognize the "right lung of the city" in its changed, purified and healthful condition. On Washington square the improvements may be delayed in consequence of contemplated operations of the Board of Public Works in opening or extending Fifth avenue; but so far as they have progressed neatness and taste have marked the change. Madison square is looming up in its beauty as if touched by a wand of magic. The grand Central Park was always in splendid condition, and, under the new management, many attractive features have been added to its manifold allurements, so that it is not only the Park par excellence of this Continent, but is fast becoming the queen park of the whole world. Our uptown friends are rejoicing in the improvements in Mount Morris square, which will eventually render that one of the most elegant and recherché of all the public pleasure grounds on the island.

Thus is the good work of ornamentation and improvement going on in all the public grounds of the city. The business is in good hands. A better board could not have been selected. All they ask is, don't let the people be too impatient. This is not the age of Arabian Nights' transformations. Rome was not built in a day. Nor were the grounds of a great city like New York relieved of the debris and dry rot and accumulated filth of some ten years in the twinkling of an eye or in the single swoop of a new broom. At the same time the people demand of the Department of Public Parks that their duties shall be exercised in a careful, judicious and economical manner, so that the taxes shall not be too heavily, if at all, increased, while, at the same time, the great improvements contemplated shall be carried out in no stingy or one-horse way.

The War in Europe and the Democracy.

The Franco-Prussian war is furnishing material for articles in favor of Napoleonism in the columns of the leading democratic organs throughout the country. Among the most prominent of these papers are those old dyed in the wool ultra-democratic sheets the Chicago Times, the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Boston Post, and others of less influence nearer home. The papers that support the cause of Prussia are denominated "Hessian sheets," and epigrams like the following are ground out:—

> That Hessian sheet, the Boston Times,
> Espouses Prussia's cause in rhymes;
> But in defending crime and treason,
> It gives us far more rhyme than reason.

The word "Hessian" is used in a sense of opprobrium, under the impression, probably, that those hireling Hessians who fought against American liberty during the Revolution came from German duchies over which Prussia held dominion. But such happens not to be the case. Prussia was then comparatively an insignificant Power, and instead of her monarch, Frederick the Great, the grand uncle of the present King of Prussia—and whose sagacity and valor as a military chieftain challenged then as they challenge now the admiration of the civilized world—being hostile to American independence, his sentiments were quite the reverse. Therefore the Prussians of our Revolutionary epoch should not be identified with the Prussia of the present day, a nation which, in the progress of destiny and amid the crumbling of dynasties, has absorbed some of those Hessian principalities whose very names are hateful to the memories of American patriotism. Our democratic organs should, therefore, be a little cautious, lest in their efforts to pander to a just American prejudice they go a little too far and alienate from their ranks a great many of their warmest friends—the true democratic republican Germans of the period.

"TRAIN UP A CHILD IN THE WAY HE SHOULD GO," &c.—Taking this trite old apothegm as a text, what will be the career of the Prince Imperial of France, who, according to imperial authority, has just received his "baptism of fire?"

The European Problem.

When, in 1847, the great bell of St. Peter's rang out the summons of Rome to defend the borders of her dominion in the Papal States against the invading Austrians, then advancing into Bologna, it sounded the first signal in these modern times of Italian nationality and independence. This was the work of Pius IX., and from city to city, throughout the Peninsula, the summons ran until a great nation, awakened from its slumbers of centuries, reappeared upon the scene at the word of its leader in arts as in arms, and began to revive the glories of the past. The whole world received this great movement with acclamation—the era of good feeling was revived, the old affection sprang up again in hearts that long had been estranged, and blessings were invoked upon the head of Pio Nono in lands hither and beyond the seas, where the title of the Popes and of their primacy had been opposed for hundreds of years.

And why was this? Shall we attempt to answer? Because—and we offer the idea with deference—the people discovered in the head of a great Christian Church one who, in championing his own nationality against a Power that then seemed overwhelming, also championed their cause. Is the cause of nationality involved in this fearful contest just opening between France and Germany? If so, whose nationality is assailed? Does any one avow a design or an endeavor to straiten France in any or in all things that she may do to consolidate her strength, to confirm her position as a great Power, and to spread abroad through all the world the influence of her arts and the amenities of her refined and beautiful civilization? If any there be we pause for a reply. We are told that the Prince of Hohenzollern's candidature was a menace and a danger to France. We have the right to ask in what? He is nearly allied in kindred blood to the house of the ruling French dynasty, and in religion he is entirely in harmony with the peculiar requirements of French policy. Is not the matter, then, narrowed down to dynastic and national jealousy? And if so what have the people, the great, struggling, suffering people of Europe and the world to do with the quarrel?

We greatly admire and respect the French people and French history, and we recognize in Napoleon III. a monarch who has done more for the prosperity and glory of his empire than any of his predecessors, not excepting even him who founded the dynasty and gave his name to it. But in this contest we must recall him and the gallant people who so enthusiastically follow his standard to the eternal principles of justice. France has revelled in glory; her standard has made the tour of the world; the nations look to her for liberty and not for enslavement; l'Empire c'est la paix was a pledge and a promise given; the idea goes back to the tenets which should guide the centre and the head of the Christian Church and its self-assumed or chosen champion. If this view be correct—and we offer it as a journalist comprehending the solemnity of our mission—it is for France, as the exponent of the Christian faith for the majority of its adherents, to arrest the tide of war and havoc and to hold out the olive branch of peace.

This is the delay and this is the situation. We care nothing for the rumors of war that have reached us thus far. The reluctance to engage on either side reveals the consciousness of an uncertain cause. What more splendid or glorious opportunity for a truly great nation that has stepped into the arena, thrown down the gauntlet and exhibited the tremendous resources at her disposal, than to say, even in the eleventh hour, "Let us prove that we are truly great—let us have peace!"

PERTH AMBOY'S MEANNESS.—Perth Amboy still asserts her superiority as a port of entry to all the quarantine laws and health regulations of her ambitious rival, the port of New York. Recently a yellow fever vessel detained at our Quarantine was allowed to put to sea; but instead she put into Perth Amboy, where she was readily admitted, the officers of that port not having so much to do that they can afford to stand off on a little matter of yellow fever. From Perth Amboy the vessel came on to Brooklyn under new sailing orders, and holding evidently to the opinion that not coming from an infected port she was entitled to pass without question. It was not so, however, for the captain was arrested yesterday and is held in one thousand dollars bail for violating the quarantine laws. He will and ought to be severely punished; but there ought to be some punishment for the consignees of the vessel under whose orders he acted, and for the port authorities of Perth Amboy, who, in their hopeless attempt at commercial rivalry with New York, thus offer a premium on infection.

THE GERMAN VESSELS IN PORT.—There are nine large North German ocean steamers now lying in the port of New York, unable to sail for Hamburg or Bremen for fear of capture by French cruisers, unauthorized to discharge their crews in a foreign port and not allowed to register themselves under the flag of safety—the flag of the United States. There are also twenty-seven sailing vessels in the same predicament. If anything can exemplify the stupidity of Congress in refusing to admit foreign vessels to American register this startling exhibit does so. The expense to which these steamers and sailing vessels are subjected probably aggregates fourteen thousand dollars per day, and there is no relief for them except in the cessation of the war. It may be, too, that the French steamers will be tied up in just the same way when the Prussian navy gets more of its cruisers afloat. As it is now here is over two million dollars' worth of property which we need lying at our doors useless and unused through the culpable neglect of Congress.

ALL SQUARE IN THE SUB-TREASURY.—The officials who were sent to New York to count the money in the Assistant Treasurer's office have accomplished their task, and returning to Washington they report to the Acting Secretary that "they found everything correct." This is an additional satisfactory symptom of the healthy condition of our financial system.

The New Swedish Prima Donna.

The English papers have just got hold of the fact, which the HERALD published some time ago, that the American manager of the famous Swedish artiste, Christine Nilsson, had engaged to pay her a hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars in gold for a six weeks' engagement in the United States. This is a handsome price, it is true; but then the liberality of the American public will cheerfully make it good to Manager Strakosch, and will pile up an equivalent profit on the back of it. Genuine talent never fails in this country. The manager who is wise enough to comprehend the taste of the people and to introduce here from Europe the leading stars of artistic genius is pretty sure to become the rich manager. The public will support merit, whether in opera or tragedy; but it must be merit of the first class. Jenny Lind's engagement was, as all remember of that sweetest bird of song, an ovation of gold. Ristori, in her magnificent interpretation of tragedy, delivered in a tongue almost unknown to her audience, had a grand success—such a success, perhaps, as she has never won in Europe, either before or since; which proves that nothing great in art fails in America.

The youthful rival of the Swedish Nightingale of twenty years ago will be among us in a few weeks, seeking for those favors at this side of the Atlantic which have been heaped upon her with so much love and affection in all the capitals of Europe. Mlle. Nilsson is announced to appear at the French theatre in Italian opera on the 19th of September. We anticipate with pleasure her grand impersonations of the two or three leading parts which have made her so famous—"La Traviata," "Marguerite," the gentle Norman peasant; Alice, in Meyerbeyer's superb composition, "Robert le Diable," in which she is said to excel all her predecessors, in that essential combination of beauty of person, a voice of exquisite sweetness and a strength of dramatic power which the character demands—marvellous, the critics say—in an artiste so tender in the finer delineations of human passion. Mlle. Nilsson's success in this most difficult character has been immense.

Then she has a full répertoire of Italian opera, comprising the works of Donizetti, Mozart, Meyerbeer, Verdi, Auber; all, in fact that are familiar to us in the rôles of great artistes. We are not disposed to regard the debût of Nilsson in this country as a possible success, but rather as a foregone triumph. If she is not greeted with the same wild enthusiasm which characterized the coming of her great prototype, Jenny Lind, it will be because our reason is a little more balanced now than it was at that time; because we are better educated in art and the ways of art; because we have had twenty years training, and that training is not lost upon us. But we anticipate that the welcome extended to the second Nightingale, Christine Nilsson, will be quite as appreciative as that which hailed Jenny Lind with tumultuous demonstrations. We are anxious and willing to accord to the young Scandinavian songstress who is about to come among us so soon a recognition of her splendid genius which will leave her no reason to regret the honors she is leaving behind her in Europe.

General Grant's Platform.

The platform of General Grant—peace, retrenchment of expenses, correction of abuses, reduction of taxes and redemption of the debt—is a very good platform for the republican party if they only knew it. There was no surplus, or next to no surplus, revenue under Johnson's administration; for Johnson was so absorbed in the work of defending "the constitution as it was" that he had no time to look after the interests of the Treasury. Hence the whiskey rings and various other rings for defrauding the revenue abstracted from the resources of the Treasury millions upon millions of money. Under General Grant most of these leakages, if not all of them, have been stopped, and such has been the effect of this policy of practical reform, connected with a general cutting out of needless expenses, that with a reduction of the national taxations to the extent, if we are not mistaken, of over a hundred millions, all told, since January, 1868, General Grant's administration is enabled to present the following exhibit as its reductions of the public debt:—

Public debt, decrease for July last.....	$17,034,123
Public debt, decrease since March, 1870..	69,004,001
Public debt, decrease during Grant's administration.....	156,188,784
Average monthly decrease for 1869.....	7,261,231
Average monthly decrease for 1870.....	13,809,805

One hundred and fifty-six millions reduction of the debt, on a greatly diminished taxation list, and over one hundred millions as a reserved fund in the Treasury, is an excellent record for General Grant's administration; and such facts make the strongest platform of all platforms for the party in power. In short, the republican party, which was given a new lease of power in the election of General Grant, can only maintain its ascendancy upon the safe, sound, honest and solid platform of Grant's administration—peace, retrenchment, reform, the development of our resources, the reduction of our taxes and the redemption of the debt. While the ship of state is thus smoothly sailing before the wind the captain may be excused in a little rest and refreshment, which he has been enjoying in his cabin, or, as the poet has it—

> Looking out on the Atlantic,
> From his cottage by the sea.

STEAMBOAT RACING.—Of all kinds of racing steamboat racing is the most dangerous. Neither the peril nor the responsibility for possibly fatal consequences is lessened by the fact that the passengers on racing steamboats are often the most eager to encourage the rivalry of competing captains. The contest on Wednesday between the "State of Maine" and the "Rip Van Winkle," on their trip to the Fishing Banks—each boat being heavily laden with passengers, liable at any moment to be blown to pieces or drowned by an accidental explosion—may have been exceedingly interesting to the participators in it, but it was nevertheless an offence as worthy of punishment as any other crime.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND has again advanced the rate of discount, this time to six per cent. The gold market responded but faintly, the price barely touching 122, while our bonds in London continued firm and strong. Consols, however, were weak and yielded a fraction. The facts enumerated are certainly very significant.

The Bank of England Feeling the War Pressure.

We learn by telegram from London that the officers of the Bank of England have announced a further advance in the rate of discount of one per cent. The minimum rate is now six per cent. The barometer does not indicate more surely the sudden changes of weather or the coming storm than does the Bank of England the financial disturbance and apprehension of approaching disasters in Great Britain. The war between France and Prussia, and the complications growing out of it, have alarmed the Bank authorities. Looking, too, at the extraordinary preparations of England to place herself on a war footing, with the tone of public sentiment and the language of the leaders of all parties in Parliament, it is not unlikely that the Bank has received a hint from the government to be ready for a crisis. At such a time as this there is a tendency to draw away the specie of the Bank. The demand for it abroad, and the rush of timid people to get hold of it for the purpose of hoarding against an evil day, would soon bring the specie reserve down to a low ebb if the Bank were not to take precautionary measures to prevent that. Raising the rate of discount is always the first step—putting on the screws, as it is called—to prevent a drain of specie. Six per cent as the minimum is a high rate of discount in England, and it rarely goes up to that except in times of war or a great commercial crisis. It is evident, therefore, that there is serious apprehension in England that she cannot be kept out of the war. It is probable that the rate of discount will be raised still higher. We should not be surprised to hear within a week that it has gone up to seven per cent, unless something remarkable and unexpected should occur to indicate determined neutrality on the part of Great Britain or the prospect of the war not spreading. We do not apprehend that the action of the Bank of England will have any serious or lasting effect upon the financial affairs of this country. It might cause a temporary depression in our bonds and stocks abroad, but this would not continue long. While we remain at peace and go on in our wonderful career of prosperity there need be no fear that the credit of this country will remain depressed whatever events may happen in Europe.

JUDGE BEDFORD a few days ago, in sentencing a burglar, gave a momentous warning to the burglarious profession generally. He said that a person found in a house for burglarious purposes was liable to indictment and conviction for intent to do murder if necessary, and under that head could be made to suffer twenty years' imprisonment at hard labor. This warning is timely. Murder is, of course, the very last resort of the burglar, and he is not likely to resort to it except when he is detected and assailed; but he still counts it among the probabilities of every burglary, and is consequently ready to commit it if occasion requires. Every burglar, then, is a murderer in intent, and if he does not actually commit murder it is because some better and less dangerous mode of perfecting the crime of burglary presents itself.

WORKINGMEN'S GRATEFULNESS.

Interesting Meeting of the Workingmen of the Sixth Senatorial District.

At the corner of Twelfth street and Third avenue quite an interesting conference was held last evening of the workingmen of the Sixth Senatorial district. Mr. John R. Hennessey, late member of the Assembly for the Fourteenth district, was in the chair. Mr. H. E. Fitzsimmons acted as secretary. Mr. James R. Purdy made the first address, the pith of which was in opposition to coolie contract labor and forced Chinese emigration, his remarks evidently coinciding with the views of his hearers.

Mr. Nelson W. Young spoke next, and after touching upon the general questions of the labor movement he turned to Mr. Hennessey, stating that on entering the hall he had been requested to publicly tender him the thanks of the workingmen for the able manner in which he represented them last winter in the Assembly. Extolling the honesty, perseverance and zeal of Mr. Hennessey, he, in the name of the workingmen of the Sixth Senatorial district, presented him a gold watch and chain. It is a heavy hunting case, railway timekeeper, full jewelled, with an extraordinarily heavy chain, and bears the following inscription:—

> Presented by the workingmen of New York city to Hon. John R. Hennessey, for his noble exertions in battling for our rights in the Legislature of 1870. The Eight Hour law, abolishing the Conspiracy law and other measures, we will cherish with grateful remembrance.

The price of the gift is said to have been $450. Mr. Hennessey responded feelingly, announcing himself a candidate for re-election, which announcement was received with applause. Messrs. John Ennis, Patrick Welch, Theodore Banks and others of the Workingmen's Union made appropriate remarks, resolutions complimentary to the course of the workingmen's candidate were passed, and the meeting adjourned.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Two Persons Injured—Singular Freak of an Electric Spark.

During the brief but severe storm which prevailed yesterday afternoon the residence of Mr. James Stillman, in Washington avenue, Morrisania, Westchester county, was struck by lightning, which, after demolishing a chimney, darted into the basement, where it struck and partially paralyzed a lady member of the family, named Armstrong. At the same instant the electric current entered through a rear window of the printing office owned by Mr. Stillman, and distant about forty feet from his house, striking a compositor named William Duane, throwing him to the floor, inflicting a ghastly wound on his head and completely paralyzing the left side of his body. Four type cases were hurled from their places, two of them being almost completely destroyed, while the contents of all four were scattered over the office. The subtle fluid disappeared through a brick wall, leaving an aperture about an inch in diameter, through which daylight was plainly visible. Both of the sufferers had immediate medical aid, when their injuries, although serious, were found to be not necessarily of a fatal nature.

A Council of War at the Front—MacMahon Viewing the Rhine—A Forward Movement of the French Probably at Hand—How It Will be Conducted and Its Effect.

PARIS, August 4—7 P. M.

Telegrams from the army at Strasburg report that yesterday, after a French council of war had been held, Marshal MacMahon, attended by his Chief of Staff, General Coulson, surveyed (viewed) the Rhine river from Kehl bridge upwards.

The Marshal afterwards visited Brumath, twenty miles north, where a cavalry division, with a portion of the First division of French infantry, are encamped.

From these movements on the part of the French commander it is conjectured here, and by the army, that MacMahon, with the contingents from the Algerian army of Africans and French turcos, is about to cross the Rhine, dashing rapidly by way of Carlsruhe and Heidelberg to Frankfort, and that thence he will endeavor to cut off the railroad communication between Berlin and the Rhine, leaving Mayence on his left.

While this operation is being conducted by MacMahon the main army of France will, it is thought, push on through the lower Rhine provinces to Mayence and Coblentz.

These forward movements of the French are, it is rumored, fixed to take place on Saturday, 6th inst.

General de Ganjal commands the second division of this corps, rendered vacant by the death of General Douay, who dropped dead of apoplexy on the 1st inst.

Value of the Saarbrucken Victory—Prussian Prisoners and Wounded—Duke De Grammont Against Bismarck.

PARIS, August 4, 1870.

The heights taken by the French at Saarbruck form a key to the railway approaches to Treves—hence the importance of the conquest.

Fourteen Prussian soldiers captured at the attack on Saarbruck passed through Metz late yesterday afternoon. Part of them were on their way to Belfort and part to Thionville, where they will be imprisoned.

The Prussian wounded at Metz have been cared for the same as the French.

The Duke de Grammont has issued a circular, reaffirming that aggressive propositions originated in Berlin. "France made none; on the contrary she commenced her disarmament. Count Bismarck bases his proposals on his anxiety about the plans of Russia," giving the details, which the Duke de Grammont temporarily withholds. The Duke concludes that, "owing to the falsehoods Bismarck has already uttered through fear, he has lost all claim to be believed hereafter."

The Journal Officiel publishes the circular of the Duke de Grammont on the disarmament. The document, after refuting the statements of Count Bismarck, as above, terminates thus:—

If Europe remains armed, if a million of men are on the eve of the shock of battle, it cannot be denied that the responsibility is Prussia's, as she repulsed all idea of disarmament when we caused the proposal to be made and began by giving the example. Her conduct is explained by the fact that at that hour when France confidingly reduced her military contingent the Cabinet at Berlin was secretly organizing the candidature of a Prussian Prince for the throne of Spain, so provocative of mischief. Whatever calumnies the Federal Chancellor may invent we fear not; he has lost the right to be believed. The conscience of Europe and history will say Prussia sought this war by inflicting upon France, preoccupied with the development of her political institutions, an outrage no nation could accept without incurring contempt.

The Constitutionnel says that the agent of Prince Charles, of Roumania, in Paris, took an active part in procuring the renunciation of the throne of Spain by his brother Prince Leopold. The Berlin government, irritated at the conduct of the agent, have demanded his dismissal; but Prince Charles refuses to yield to the demand.

The Empress came to the Tuileries to-day and presided at a Council of Ministers.

The Gaulois says the Emperor will issue a decree making the "Marseillaise" henceforth the national air of France. During the fight at Saarbruck it was played by the bands.

The French hospital service have 24,000 beds ready for the wounded.

Prussian Advance on French Soil—Severe Fighting—French Outposts Driven In and a Railroad Destroyed—Marshal MacMahon Anticipated.

CARLSRUHE, August 4—4:30 P. M.

There has been severe fighting between the Prussians and French at Weissemburg both yesterday and to-day.

A large force of Prussian troops advanced between Weissemburg and Lauterburg into the territory of France, marching a distance of ten miles on French soil.

This force succeeded in driving in the advanced posts of the French ("enemy") and destroying the railroad between Strasburg and Lauterburg, along which it was supposed that Marshal MacMahon was preparing to advance on the Prussian army.

The French loss in this affair is heavy.

The Prussians took many prisoners.

Prussian Assault on a Division of MacMahon's Corps—The Crown Prince of Prussia in Action—A Bayonet Charge and Prussian Victory—A French General and Two Staff Officers Killed—A French Camp and Many Prisoners Taken.

CARLSRUHE, August 4—Night.

The latest despatches from the army state that the Prussian victory over the French in the engagement reported to-day was a very decisive one.

The Prussian troops which were engaged in it were regiments of the Fifth and Eleventh army corps, with the Second army corps of Bavaria, commanded by the Crown Prince of Prussia in person.

On the French side was General Douay's division of MacMahon's army corps, stationed at Weissemburg.

Geis Hill, in the rear of Weissemburg, was carried by storm at the point of the bayonet by the Prussians after an obstinate resistance.

The general in command of the French, in the absence of Douay by death, was killed, with two officers of his staff.

The French encampment was taken. One piece of artillery was captured. Five hundred wounded men, including many of the French turcos, fell into the hands of the Prussians.

On the German side General Kirchbach was wounded.

The Prussian Grenadier Guards, with the Fiftieth regiment of the (Prussian) line, suffered severely.

Prussian Army Guard of Berlin—The French Threat of Entry—Battle Details from Saarbruck.

BERLIN, August 4, 1870.

The officers of the Union Club, of this city, have accepted a large wager, offered by M. Thomas, of Paris, that the French will be in Berlin on the 15th of August.

A Prussian reserve of one hundred thousand men is encamped in front of Berlin.

Forage is scarce in the Rhine provinces, and the Prussian horse is suffering severely.

The Prussian government furnishes the following account, more in detail, of the affair at Saarbruck:—

A feeble garrison held Saarbruck until the French deployed and advanced in three columns. The Prussians then retired to a position north of the town to observe the enemy. In spite of the free use by the French of mitrailleuses, artillery and Chassepots, our losses were only two officers and seventy men. The loss of the French appeared to be more serious. Our troops were admirably cool.

PORTUGAL.

Promulgation of Neutrality.

LISBON, August 4, 1870.

The Gazette, of this city, officially publishes the decree of neutrality on the part of Portugal in the Franco-Prussian war.

HUNGARY.

PESTH, August 4, 1870.

The Diet of Hungary yesterday emphatically declared in favor of Austrian neutrality in the Franco-Prussian war.

DENMARK.

Cabinet Neutrality—The People for France.

COPENHAGEN, August 4, 1870.

The Danish government still struggles hard to preserve neutrality, but the popular excitement is intense, and perhaps ungovernable. The sympathy for France among all classes is very marked.

ENGLAND.

Rumor of a Special Mission from France—Shelter in German Vessels—Financial Consequences—A French War Song by a German.

LONDON, August 4, 1870.

It is rumored that the Count de Caumont la Force has arrived in London as a special messenger from the Duke de Grammont to assure the government that France will respect the neutrality of Belgium, and it is added that he has met with a cool reception.

LONDON, August 4, 1870.

The ports of England are rapidly filling up with North German vessels anxious to escape the French cruisers.

A circular has been received from Señor Agasta, defending Spain as innocent of the cause of the trouble between France and Prussia. The document is well received.

The officers of the Bank of England have announced a still further advance in the rate of discount of one per cent. The minimum rate is now six per cent.

The official report of the Bank of England, made public to-day, shows that the amount of specie in vault has decreased £490,000 since the last report.

It is asserted that the bank rate was raised for political effect, not from financial necessity.

Offenbach, the Opéra Bouffe composer, though a German, has published a French war song, entitled "God Speed the Emperor."

THE DEATH OF GENERAL DOUAY.

A special telegram reports the sudden death by apoplexy of General Douay, of the French army. A similar report was telegraphed from London some days ago, but was subsequently denied. There are two generals of the name of Douay in the French army, one of whom has until recently been an aide-de-camp on the staff of the Emperor (F. Douay), while the other (C. Douay) has been in command of the Seventh Territorial division, with headquarters at Besançon. Neither of these officers has particularly distinguished himself in war.

THE NORTH GERMAN MARINE.

Effects of the Franco-Prussian War—Nine Steamships and Twenty-Seven Sailing Vessels Blockaded in Our Waters—$13,000 Expenses per Day—American Registers Desired—Mistake of Congress.

The war now being waged in Europe is having a disastrous effect on our commerce with North Germany, and as the Prussian navy, though yet in a state of infancy, is not to be despised, a suspension of ocean travel between the United States and France may take place any day, as it has already done between this port and Germany. There are at present in this port awaiting orders from Europe nine steamers and twenty-seven sailing vessels, who may neither pursue their homeward course nor go into the coasting trade. The following embraces the entire list:—

STEAMSHIPS.

Hammonia, Hamburg Co.	Hannover, Bremen Co.
Cimbria, Hamburg Co.	Weser, Bremen Co.
Westphalia, Hamburg Co.	Frankfort, Bremen Co.
Union, Bremen Co.	Hermann, Bremen Co.
America, Bremen Co.

Musca, brig, Elsfurth.	Jenny, bark, Bremen.
Capella, bark, Bremen.	Herschel, ship, Hamburg.
Johann, ship, Bremen.	Grafin Knyphausen, bark, Prussia.
Johannes, bark, Bremen.	Sirene, bark, Prussia.
Louise, bark, Aucham.	Cedar, bark, Bremen.
Catsow Stesow, brig, Wismar.	Lovine, brig, Blumenthal.
Marco Polo, bark, Bremen.	Arcturus, bark, Prussia.
Everhard Delius, bark, Bremen.	Neptune, ship, Bremen.
Everhard, bark, Bremen.	Kolga, bark, Hamburg.
Charlotte, ship, Bremen.	Betty, ship, Bremen.
Cecrops, bark, Prussia.	Harzberg, bark, Bremen.
Frederick Scalla, bark, Prussia.	Gutenberg, ship, Hamburg.
Shakspeare, ship, Hamburg.	Elwine Krepelin, bark, Prussia.
Brazilaira, bark, Bremen.

These vessels and their crews are, of course, giving their owners much anxiety and involve a great expense. For instance, the six steamers of the Bremen Company, averaging 3,000 tons each, cost about $5,000 per day, and the three belonging to the Hamburg line about $2,500, while the twenty-seven sailing vessels may be aggregated at $6,000. The agents of the companies, according to marine international law, cannot dismiss the crews in this or any other foreign port. They, however, can send them back by other vessels and pay the expenses; but as it is expected that the war will not be of long duration some reluctance is felt in dismissing a body of able seamen, speaking German, whose places may not easily be supplied. There were some hopes during the hesitancy evinced to open hostilities that trade might be resumed, and both France and Prussia would mutually agree not to molest the merchantmen of their respective antagonists; but this hope has died away, as it is evidently the policy of the French Emperor to maintain a strict blockade of all the North German ports, and thus destroy a commerce which has hitherto been annually increasing at a most satisfactory rate.

NO INSTRUCTION.

have been received by the North German Consul General from the home government respecting the policy to be pursued, nor have any efforts been made to induce Congress to pass the bill to admit foreign ships to American register. The owners would now be only too anxious to dispose of a valuable property which is comparatively useless. A surreptitious coasting trade might be done by sending vessels to New Orleans via Havana and evading our laws by clearing for the latter port and from there taking out new papers for New Orleans. But this, however, is not the season for either the cotton or sugar trade, and the crews of these German vessels would object to go to ports infected with yellow fever; besides, the steamers are too expensive to run to make such a trade lucrative.

THE MISTAKE OF CONGRESS

in not passing the bill to admit foreign ships to American register is daily becoming more apparent to the community, and though trade with North German ports may be suspended a splendid opportunity presents itself for the admission of a very fine class of vessels. One large shipping house informs the writer that it would add a great deal to our wealth if Congress had been influenced to pass such a bill as will admit the ships, steamers and vessels of all nations that desire to avail themselves of our flag, under which, when once registered, they cannot change to another. Mr. Nathaniel McKay, the shipbuilder, says in a recent letter to the HERALD, referring to the foregoing:—

This clause would only cover the class that ply regularly between European and American ports. If an owner of one ship desires to sell his ship to a party to go under another flag he should be allowed; but I think a bill to admit those ships for the present emergency should not be allowed. They might want to transfer again immediately after the war closes in Europe. The shipbuilders may talk and importune Congress and do all they can; they will not build a ship, nor can they. I have abandoned the business, or, rather, the business has abandoned me. They all have to try something else for a living. I received a letter to-day from Quebec from a ship-owner stating that if Congress passes the bill to admit foreign ships he will come immediately and transfer his ships under the American flag.

A number of the agents of German shipowners expressed the willingness of their principals to transfer their ships under the American flag as more protection will be given them and not so many difficulties experienced in obtaining crews, besides the facilities given to American vessels in all foreign ports are greater than those extended to an infant maritime Power such as that of Prussia. The $2,500,000 worth of shipping now lying idle in our harbor is a grievous eyesore to our German citizens, and the interruption in trade, especially of petroleum, of which Germany consumed immense quantities, will cause some heavy failures.

Arrival of the Leipzig at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, August 4, 1870.

The North German steamship Leipzig, from Bremen via Southampton, arrived here at a quarter past ten o'clock this morning.

BROOKLYN CITY.

Miscellaneous Local Paragraphs of Interest.

There are 2,251 workmen now actively employed in fitting out ships-of-war at the Navy Yard.

Frank Selict was arrested on suspicion of burglariously entering the grocery store of George Self, at Bay Ridge, L. I. He was committed.

An elderly female, Mary Brown, was arraigned before Justice Lynch yesterday, charged with having kidnapped the child of Charles McLaughlin, of Jamaica. She was committed for examination.

Three young fellows who were caught in the act of breaking into No. 100 Greene avenue were arraigned yesterday before Justice Riely. They will be examined on Wednesday next.

Ellen Thompson, an inebriated prisoner in one of the cells of the Eighth precinct, was cut down by the doorman yesterday from a hanging situation. She fastened a portion of her dress around her neck and made fast the other end to the grating of the cell door. Life was almost extinct when she was discovered.

At an early hour yesterday morning the barge Atlantic, Captain Henry Hand, lying at the dock near the Fulton ferry, was, during the temporary absence of the "skipper," boarded by river pirates. The latter broke into the cabin and burst open Captain Hand's trunk, from which they helped themselves and then made off.

The Inspector of Boilers, Thomas F. Powers, reports having examined 300 boilers during the past quarter. There were 235 applicants for permits to take charge of boilers, of which number 182 were found qualified. The certificates of two engineers have been revoked, and one proprietor was fined fifty dollars for employing an unlicensed engineer.

It is proposed by several of the depositors of the Central Bank to obtain a counter order from the Supreme Court removing Mr. John B. Spader as receiver and placing the matter in the hands of the Board of Directors. There appears, however, to be a confidence felt in the assertion that the depositors will all be paid in full; but it will be several days, perhaps weeks, before such a settlement can be made.

Mr. James Luckey was aroused from his slumbers on Wednesday night, at his residence, No. 409 Cumberland street, by the loud barking of a dog which he kept in the yard. Arming himself with a pistol, he proceeded to the lower part of the house to investigate the cause of the alarm. He was somewhat startled upon descending the basement stairway at beholding two men leisurely making their exit through the open door. He did not pursue them. It was subsequently ascertained that the housebreakers, for such the fellows were, had effected an entrance by sawing a piece out of the panel of the door, through which, by thrusting the hand, they were enabled to shove back the bolts and unlock the door, the key being in the lock upon the inside. There was nothing missed by Mr. Luckey.

George W. Baker, Jr., was arrested yesterday afternoon and locked up in the Sixth precinct station house to answer a charge of assault and battery preferred by his father, ex-Alderman Baker, of No. 229 Ewen street, E. D. The arrest of young Baker, who is known to be rather fast, gave rise to alarming reports, one of which was that he had attempted to murder his father while the latter was in the act of rebuking him for having stolen property in his possession. Nothing of the kind occurred, according to the statements of both son and father. The latter says that he caused the arrest of the young man because he abused his sister, and the young man retorts that his father does not know what he says, as he is nearly always under the influence of whiskey and chloroform.

A RAILROAD OUTRAGE.

About eight o'clock yesterday morning a German named Hermann Pietzner presented himself at the police station at Trenton, N. J., with his head and face terribly disfigured. Dr. Rogers was immediately sent for, and, on the wounds being properly cared for, the following sad story was elicited from the patient:—It appears that Pietzner left Omaha, Neb., some day last week, with a view of reaching New York, where he expected to receive a free passage to Europe as a recruit for the Prussian army. On reaching Philadelphia his money was all spent, and not being able to purchase a ticket he went aboard of the freight train, hiding himself between two cars. About three o'clock yesterday morning he was discovered by the conductor on nearing Trenton, N. J., and pitched overboard while the cars were moving at the rate of six or eight miles an hour. Fortunately he sustained no injury beyond a severe cut in the head, from which he is likely to recover.

THE SALESWOMEN.

The saleswomen's early closing movement made another step forward last evening. A meeting was held at Plimpton Hall. In the absence of the Plymouth church hero divine, Mr. Beecher, who has been honored by being elected as president, Mr. Houghton was chosen to preside. Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull, the female banker and prospective Presidential candidate for 1872, expressed her approval of the movement and promised her aid to insure its success. Miss "Netta" made a lengthy address to the twenty-five young ladies present, urging united action, and assuring them of the support of the press. Mrs. Batty spoke in a similar strain. A gentleman, member of the Dry Goods Clerks' Early Closing Association, promised them all needed help, and so did Mr. Houghton and another gentleman present. Miss "Netta" again "mounted the rostrum"—using a phrase of the old Romans—and called for subscriptions of funds in the shape of initiation fees, but was rather unsuccessful. A Mr. Drury, well known among workingmen as a "public speaker," then obtained the floor and made one of his usual harangues, after which the meeting adjourned.

The ceremony was performed by a colored minister. The couple left immediately for Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. Morgan's former home, via Louisville. The affair naturally creates a sensation in the community. Morgan is a lawyer of some ability, is of temperate habits and was colonel of a Michigan regiment of the federal army. The bride is of a decidedly dusky hue.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The Election Progressing Quietly—Colored Repeaters—A Congressional Candidate Floored.

RALEIGH, August 4, 1870.

With the exception of an attempt by radical negroes to intimidate a conservative negro named Williams, whose face was slapped, the election here progresses quietly, though excitement is great. A large number of negroes of the Second regiment of State troops are in a crowd at the polls wearing their side arms. It is charged that negroes vote the radical ticket here and then depart to vote under other names at other precincts in the county. Both parties are sanguine of success, but it is impossible to conjecture the result. Harris, colored candidate for Congress in this district, will probably be defeated. Governor Holden made his appearance at the polls this morning to intimidate conservatives.

An altercation took place this afternoon between an Englishman and Harris, the colored candidate for Congress, during which the latter was knocked down by the former for calling him a European convict. Considerable excitement ensued, but it was soon quieted by the Mayor.

Conservative Congressman Elected in the Raleigh District—The Legislature Claimed by the Conservatives.

RALEIGH, August 4, 1870.

Election returns are exceedingly meagre so far; only the precincts on the telegraph lines have been heard from, mostly indicating reduced republican majorities. The conservative candidate for the district claims his election by one thousand majority. In Alamance, one of the alleged insurrectionary districts, the election passed off quietly, and was conducted in the usual manner.

The prisoners, about forty in number, were removed to Yanceyville yesterday, where the others are thus depriving them of their vote in Alamance, which has gone republican by a reduced majority. Owing to the lack of telegraph communication with the western portion of the State it will be several days before the result of the election is ascertained; but so far as heard from the conservatives claim three of the Congressmen, an increase of two, and a majority in both branches of the Legislature. There are increased majorities in all the former conservative counties, with a corresponding reduction in the republican counties. The Congressional vote in the district where the insurrectionary counties are is closer and the result doubtful.

It is stated that $265,000 of the accumulated special tax fund levied to pay the interest on the repudiated railroad bonds has been paid out of the treasury for the equipment, subsistence and pay of the two regiments of State troops now operating in Caswell and Alamance counties.

MARYLAND.

Overissue of Stock of the Northwestern Virginia Railroad Company.

BALTIMORE, August 4, 1870.

There were rumors yesterday of an over issue of the stock of the Northwestern Virginia Railroad Company, commonly known as the Parkersburg Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which is leased and worked by the latter company. The overissue is stated in the morning papers to amount to $300,000, made by the secretary of the company, John L. Crawford, who has resigned his office. The amount at which the overissue is fixed is a supposition merely, as no statement has been made by Mr. Crawford, and the directors of the road have not concluded their examination. The overissue is all hypothecated in Baltimore at about fifteen dollars on the share, the par value of which is fifty dollars. Crawford, the secretary of the company, was the confidential clerk of the banking house of Alexander Brown & Sons for many years. Ex-Senator Van Winkle, of West Virginia, president of the company, it is stated, entrusted to the secretary blank certificates of stock bearing his signature.

WESTERN RAILWAYS.

Election of Directors of the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad—Rock Island and St. Louis Railroad Bonds.

CHICAGO, August 4, 1870.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Sioux City and Pacific Railroad Company was held at Cedar Rapids yesterday and the following gentlemen were elected directors:—J. J. Blair and D. C. Blair, New Jersey; W. F. Glidden, Oakes Ames and F. Nickerson, of Boston; W. W. Walker, Charles E. Walker and George Douglass, of Cedar Rapids, and H. S. Cremton, of Pennsylvania. The report of the earnings of the road for the year ending June 30 foots up $3,342,108.

Judge Porter to-day, at Monmouth, Ill., granted a preliminary injunction restraining the issue of Warren county bonds to the Rockford, Rock Island and St. Louis Railroad to the amount of $200,000. This causes much excitement among the friends of the road.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Congressional Nominations—Declinations and Speculations.

ILLINOIS.

The Republican Congressional Convention of the Eighth Illinois district nominated Colonel Jonathan Merriam, of Tazewell county, on the 186th ballot. The district is republican and is now represented by John Beatty, republican.

The Democratic Congressional Convention of the Tenth Illinois district met at Corbinville on the 3d, and on the seventh ballot nominated Judge E. F. Rice, of Montgomery county. The district is democratic and is now represented by Truman H. Hoag, democrat.

OHIO.

The Republican Congressional Convention at Monroeville, Ohio, on the 3d inst., nominated Charles Foster, of Seneca county, from the Ninth Ohio district. The district is democratic, and is now represented by Edward F. Dickinson, democrat.

NEW YORK.

Hon. A. H. Laflin (rep.), representative from the New York Twentieth district, declines a renomination in a letter, in which he says:—

My service in Congress has compelled me to forego all pursuits of profit, and those acquainted, as you are, with my personal affairs need not be told of the necessity which forbids longer neglect of obligations to those dependent upon me. Without my going further, you will see that party duty and personal interest coincide in suggesting my withdrawal from the canvass.

VIRGINIA.

At a republican convention held on the 3d inst. in Portsmouth, Va., James H. Pratt, Jr., present member of Congress from the Second district, was nominated by nearly a unanimous vote for re-election.

Judge Alexander Rives is proposed as the radical candidate for Congress from the Lynchburg district.

General William Terry, of Wythe county, is the conservative candidate for Congress from the Virginia Eighth district. He succeeded Stonewall Jackson in the command of his famous brigade, and is universally esteemed as a high toned and honorable gentleman and a strong friend of the Union.

WYOMING TERRITORY.

The republicans held a meeting Monday, 1st inst., at Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, to select delegates to a territorial convention to be held at Laramie City soon for the purpose of nominating a delegate to Congress. The session was stormy and the result was unsatisfactory to many republicans, who declare their intention of voting the democratic ticket. The Territory is now represented by S. F. Nuckolls, democrat.

Politics in California.

The Sacramento Record thinks that Romualdo Pacheco, native Californian or Mexican, and Eugene L. Sullivan, who does no credit to a good Irish name, are the two most prominent radical candidates for Governor. Pacheco can throw a riata, ride a bucking horse and pick a guitar. He is mentioned in order to catch the Greaser vote in the lower counties. Sullivan has money, and he might possibly catch a few of those enemies to themselves and foes to their adopted country, radical Irishmen. But luckily the breed is scarce.

THE MORMON HARVEST.

It would seem that Mormonism has not yet lost its influence on the credulous. Converts are still to be found in Christendom; but it is proper to say the harvest is gathered among the most ignorant classes in Europe. Happening to visit Castle Garden yesterday a HERALD reporter was kindly shown over that large establishment, and received at the hands of Superintendent Casserly and the officers under his direction every attention. It so occurred that a large number of Mormons who arrived on the Minnesota Monday last were just on the eve of leaving for their promised land. They were principally composed of Scandinavians; but there was also a considerable number of English and Welsh. There were about 350 of Latter Day Saints. The total number of immigrants on board was 740. These people left yesterday by the Pennsylvania Railroad for Salt Lake. They presented no different appearance than ordinary immigrants, and as they passed through Castle Garden, under the direction of leaders, evidently natives of the United States, they seemed anxious to proceed, with as little delay as possible, to their journey's end. The proportion of females did not differ from what is generally to be observed on passenger vessels arriving from Europe.

Paton, of 341 Broadway, was held to trial on a charge of stealing from his employers $132 worth of "Donna Marias." Britt sold the property to Julius Metzer, a pawnbroker in East Houston street, who has been arrested.

Last evening, as a Third avenue car was passing through the Bowery and when near Grand street, a row occurred between two gentlemen, one of whom accidentally ran against the other. The party run against, instead of accepting the apology offered by the other, commenced cursing him in a good round style, whereat the party of the first part knocked the party of the second part down, and, but for the interference of some of the passengers and the conductor, would have, as he remarked, "kicked his head off."

At half-past two o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in a shed in Eighty-first street, near Third avenue, which is used by William Fischer as a storage for lumber. It was entirely destroyed, together with its contents, valued at $2,000. The fire communicated to the two story and attic building adjoining, occupied by Christian Kerns as a boarding house. This, too, was completely consumed. Kerns' loss is $2,000, fully covered, as also is Fischer's, in the Germania Insurance Company. The building, owned by Thomas H. Ferris, was worth $5,000.

The Executive Committee appointed at the mass meeting held at Delmonico's on the last Monday of July for collecting funds to relieve the sufferings of the French soldiers who shall be wounded in the Franco-Prussian war, held a regular weekly meeting last night at No. 23 West Houston street. Mr. P. A. Gerdy presided. Mr. Leon Meunier acted as secretary. The object of the meeting was to receive the money which had been collected during the week by the officers of the Aid Society appointed for that purpose. Mr. Vetable, the treasurer, announced at the opening of the meeting that the funds now raised were not far short of $8,000, and that if they were as successful in their mission in the future as they had been the past three weeks they would be in a position to carry out the intentions of the society.

The Michael Norton Association held their second annual excursion yesterday at Excelsior Park, opposite Yonkers. They started from this city with a steamer and three large barges, filled with a jolly company, and enjoyed themselves hugely. The rain in the afternoon somewhat dampened the affair, but did not materially interfere with the fun. Mr. John Kelly acted as floor manager, and seemed to impart to the company his chronic smile, and thus gave a cheerful phase to the affair. The Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. George H. Mitchell, Peter Mitchell, James Fay, Judge John Cox and Thomas Nelligan conducted all these matters admirably, and Grafulla's Seventh Regiment Band kept the light hearts and heels tripping to fine melodies.

The applause which a courteous action almost invariably wins from the popular heart and tongue greeted Captain Holton, of the steamer Stanford, on Wednesday, when he put the vessel out of her course to land a young girl at Whitestone who had mistaken the vessel and was being carried to Greenwich, Conn. She was travelling alone, and but for the kindness of the captain would have been compelled to return from Greenwich to New York, at which point she would arrive in the night. Her first tears and distress changed to smiles and joy at being landed at home, and the passengers signified their approbation of Captain Holton's course by three hearty cheers. Other conductors and captains would do well to imitate Captain Holton's example.

At twenty-five minutes after three o'clock yesterday afternoon, William Jacobs, a boy of nine years, of 183 Wooster street, while riding on a Hudson River freight train, was thrown or fell from the car to the track, the train passing over him. A finger on his right hand was broken, the left arm was badly cut and he received several scalp wounds. Officer Trainer, of the Twenty-eighth precinct, on post corner of West and Clarkson streets, where the accident occurred, took the boy to Bellevue Hospital. This should be a warning to the numerous boys, large and small, and men, who make it a point to purloin a ride from the railroad company in this way. Scarcely a train passes up or down without being crowded from front to rear with male humanity, mostly working people going to their homes, and the wonder is that more accidents do not occur. The company are blameless, as they have made every effort to prevent people, especially youngsters, from riding on their cars.

THE NATHAN MURDER.

The Inquest Before Coroner Rollins.

Testimony of Officer Mangan, Officer Evans and the Two Carpenters.

Which of the Nathan Brothers Had On the Bloody Shirt?

A Little Light That May Grow Greater.

The inquest in the Twenty-third street murder case was commenced yesterday by Coroner Rollins. It was expected that there would be an immense crowd at the Thirtieth street police station in anticipation of the proceedings, but up to eleven o'clock there were not more than fifty persons present, every one of whom was more or less intimately acquainted with the deceased Mr. Nathan or his family. The officials, however, imagined that there would be a crush. It was deemed advisable, therefore, so as to obtain as much comfort under the circumstances as possible, not to hold the inquisition at the station house, where the accommodations were very limited, and shortly after the reporters had taken their seats at the only available table in the police sitting room it was announced that the Eighth District Civil Court room, corner of Twenty-second street and Seventh avenue, had been decided on as the best place to

OPEN THE PROCEEDINGS.

The members of the press and the few members of the jury who had come together, along with the small number of spectators already on hand, thereupon proceeded to the place designated.

THE NATHANS IN COURT.

Shortly after eleven o'clock Coroner Rollins put in an appearance and was followed by the remaining members of the jury, and very soon afterwards Washington Nathan, with his brother Frederick, accompanied by Emanuel B. Hart, entered the court room and took seats within the space enclosed by the iron railing which shuts out the common herd of spectators from the privileged few. Of course the Nathan brothers were the observed of all observers, and as they sat down those seated in the back part of the court room went so far as to stand upon the benches in their eagerness to get a good view of them. They were both attired in deep mourning, and bore evident traces of the great grief which has overwhelmed them during the past few days. Washington, to those who were acquainted with his general appearance before the sad calamity which deprived him of his kind-hearted father, looked in an especial manner changed, and certainly did not in anywise appear like one who could, even in the most indirect manner, have aided or abetted in a deed which certain heartless and inconsiderate persons have—by inuendo, if not openly—accused him of having committed.

A GOOD WITNESS.

The first witness called was officer Mangan, who was on the Twenty-third street post the morning of the murder. He seemed to be above the ordinary calibre of policemen in point of intelligence, and gave his answers to the questions put to him by District Attorney Fellows, who represented the people, and to the jurors, who examined him at great length, in a quiet, confident way, that gave general satisfaction. Police officers, as a general thing, when they are in any way officially connected with an important case, make desperate attempts to show their own wonderful smartness by making mountains out of mole hills of incidents that may to a certain degree, by the way they are stretched out, lend an influence for or against suspected parties. Mangan was not of this stamp, and the consequence was his testimony in all points remained unshaken by the severest cross-examination.

WHO OPENED THE DOOR FIRST BEFORE SIX O'CLOCK.

The only really valuable portions of his evidence were that relative to his hearing the alarm of murder, what he saw when he entered the house, and when he "tried" and saw the hall door shut last during his term of duty. The latter was probably the most important point of all. If a point of evidence in a case like this can be called important which throws the murder in deeper mystery than ever; for if the officer's statement be true, it were utterly impossible for any one to have left the house by the front way between the time he "tried" the door, or rather saw the door shut the last time, and the time when the Nathan sons appeared on the stoop to give the alarm. One very important fact elicited by his testimony showed how unsafe a thing it is for sensation newspapers to jump too suddenly at conclusions in a case where a man's life may be at stake before they have good foundation to spring from.

WHOSE NIGHT GOWN WAS STAINED WITH BLOOD?

It will be remembered by all who have made themselves familiar with the details of this terrible murder and every incident connected with it and its surroundings what a stress was put upon the fact that Washington Nathan's night gown was besmeared with blood when he came out on the stoop to give the alarm, yet Mangan testified that it was Frederick Nathan's night gown and socks which had the blood stains, and that no sign of blood was visible about the other son. These stains Frederick accounts for by his having knelt down and leaned over the dead body of his father when he found the corpse first, and by his having stood in the pool of blood which surrounded it. Thus it will be seen that General Blair did not see so blindly after all. In his statement as to what he saw on the morning of the murder from his window in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, which overlooked the Nathan mansion, it will be recollected that he persisted that the young man with the side whiskers he had seen sitting at the third story window at half-past five o'clock was the same one he saw a half hour afterwards on the stoop with his nightshirt stained with blood. This, to all the reporters, who had been informed that Washington Nathan, who does not wear side whiskers, was the one whose night gown had been found stained with blood, appeared very much like a contradiction; but it will be seen by Mangan's evidence that the General was correct in his statement as to the identity of the two brothers. How it was possible for nearly every newspaper in the city to get so muddled about this little incident of the case (for the result of the inquest will show that it is little in its bearing on the guilt or innocence of any person in the house) is a mystery. It may be that, owing to the restrictions put upon the investigations of the reporters the detectives had a hand in the misinformation. It may have been accidental on their part, but for all that it was mischievous in the extreme, and might have been criminally so had any evil result flowed from it.

COULD A LOUD NOISE BE HEARD FROM ROOM TO ROOM?

The testimony of the carpenters did not amount to much as a whole, and, although they were very rigidly examined by two of the jurors nothing but one fact that could tend to throw any great light on the case was elicited. This fact was simply this:—They stated that to the best of their belief it was impossible for a person sleeping on one of the floors above that occupied by old Mr. Nathan to hear any extraordinary noise below them in the house, but that they did believe a person sleeping on the same floor could be awakened by a loud noise in the room. This, taken in connection with the fact that they also swore that there was only one sliding door between old Mr. Nathan's room and that of the rear sleeping apartment, becomes a very important feature in the case.

AN OUTSIDE CONFEDERATE WITH THE MURDERER.

It will be seen, according to Mangan's testimony, as has already been mentioned, that no person could have left the house by the front door between the time when the officer saw it shut last and when the alarm was given without having been detected; and yet Washington Nathan states when he came down stairs he found it open. Now, the detectives have opened their eyes at this, and the result of the inquest will undoubtedly prove that they have opened them to the extraordinary part of the case with good purpose. Granting Mangan's statements about the door to be true, and Washington Nathan's also, says one of the detectives, they show just this:—Somebody in the house might have had a confederate who aided him in doing the murder. The inmate would have piloted him out by the back way after the deed was done, unlocked the stable door, passed through it to the Twenty-second street door, and let him out of that. Then it was an easy matter for him to lock all the doors behind him and for appearance sake pull the front door open and leave the "dog" beside it. The whole thing would be but the

WORK OF A MINUTE,

and then, when Washington Nathan came down stairs after discovering the murder, why the case would seem plain to him that the murderer had left by the front way, and then, when the detectives examined the back doors and found them all secure on the inside, they would naturally come to the same conclusion. This theory could easily reconcile the apparent clash between the officer's and Washington Nathan's statement about the door being open. The detective who formed it thoroughly believes in it; but then comes the question, who is the inmate of the house who piloted the outside confederate in and out of the house? Time alone can tell.

The Testimony.

The following is the testimony given in the case:—

TESTIMONY OF OFFICER MANGAN.

Officer John Mangan was the first witness examined, and in response to Coroner Rollins testified as follows:—

Q. Where do you reside? A. At 121 West Twenty-ninth street.

Q. What is your employment? A. I am a police officer, attached to the Twenty-ninth precinct.

Q. Were you out on the morning of the 29th of July? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, from Fourth to Seventh avenues.

Q. Where were you on that morning when the alarm was given? A. About one hundred feet from the door.

Q. You immediately then proceeded to the house? A. Yes.

Q. Go on and state what you know about the case. A. My attention was drawn by the alarm given by two gentlemen standing on the stoop of the house in their night shirts; I made an alarm and ran towards the stoop; one of the gentlemen beckoned me, saying, "Officer, come in;" I asked what the trouble was, and, said he, "My father has been murdered;" "Where is he," said I, and he replied, "Up in the room, murdered;" I asked whereabouts, and he said "Up stairs;" we started up stairs together; I saw the man lying on the floor, apparently dead, in the room between the study and the other room; then I started up stairs; the two sons of the man went up stairs with me and we searched the house; we went through the house to the top; I came down and put my hand on the old gentleman; he appeared to be warm; I told the son to

SEND FOR A DOCTOR;

he then sent for a doctor, and while he was gone I put my hand on Mr. Nathan; the doctor came from the Fifth Avenue Hotel; the doctor's name I do not know; he said he thought Mr. Nathan had been dead about three or four hours; I went into the study; the window over the other study appeared to be hoisted from about twelve to fourteen inches; I went from there down stairs, and commenced the search down stairs; in the meantime I sent for another officer to Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street; by the time I got down stairs the other officer arrived, and I said, "There is a man murdered here;" I

STARTED DOWN STAIRS

down through the basement, I tried the front basement; the other officers tried the back door; I asked him if it was all secure; he said, "Some one has opened one of the back doors;" the officer's name was Rawley; I proceeded up stairs again and staid with the body and sent the other officer to report to the station house; when I went down to the other door I saw this (the "dog" handed to witness); I do not know where it was when I first came in; the young man said, pointing down to this

"IRON DOG!"

"What is that;" I picked it up and I saw that it had blood upon it.

Foreman of the Jury—Which young man?

Witness—The young man whose name is Fred, I think.

The Coroner—Do you recognize him?

Witness—Yes, sir; that young man there. (Witness here pointed to Mr. Frederick Nathan.)

Examination continued—When I went to the stoop I saw that one of the young men had blood upon his shirt; there was also blood on his stockings up over his toes.

A Juror—Which of the young men was that?

Witness—The same young man I pointed out before.

The Coroner—What part of the shirt was covered with blood?

Witness—The front part;

THE STOCKINGS HAD BLOOD

on the bottom just as if a person stepped into a pool of blood; I did not take notice whether or not they had drawers on, but I think not; I think, they had only their nightshirts on and white stockings; only one gentleman had stockings.

Q. Which one was that? A. The same gentleman, Mr. Frederick Nathan.

Q. What else did you do? A. I stayed there until the captain came.

Q. What captain was that? A. Captain Burden, of the Twenty-ninth precinct; as I went along I took notice to the other door and I saw it was closed.

Q. Were you on post that evening? A. Yes, sir; from twelve P. M. to six A. M.

Q. During that time did you examine the doors of the houses on your beat? A. Yes, sir; once at half-past one and again at half-past four o'clock, and found them closed and secure.

Q. At what hour did you receive the alarm? A. At a quarter to six o'clock.

Q. What side of the street were you on when you heard the alarm? A. I was on the south side of the street.

Q. Did you hear any alarm that night before the time you saw this man? A. No, sir.

Q. No kind of whistle that would have attracted your attention? A. No, sir.

Q. You remember seeing the man Patrick Lorden, the porter of the Fifth Avenue Hotel? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he make any alarm? A. When I was called he was beckoning to come, after I heard the alarm; the first alarm I heard was from the young men.

Q. Did you hear him whistle? A. No, sir.

Q. You recognize one of the men that was on the stoop as Mr. Frederick Nathan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the other? A. I recognize the other as the one they call Washington.

Q. What inmates of the house did you see that morning besides the two sons? A. I don't think I saw anybody except the woman in the basement; I don't think I saw anybody else.

Q. At what hour

did you examine the house? A. At half-past four in the morning.

Q. Did you examine it by trying it? A. Yes, sir; I also examined it at a quarter to six o'clock, when I was going off my post; I always do so.

Q. Did you look at your watch? A. No, but I looked at the clock.

Q. What side of the street were you on? A. I was on the south side of the street; the same as that on which Mr. Nathan's residence was situated; it was within four or five minutes after I passed the house that I heard the alarm; I noticed every door on my way to Sixth avenue; I swear the at half-past four I took hold of the handle.

Q. At any time did you examine the windows and shutters of the second story—I speak of the apartment in which the murder was committed? A. I did not take notice; the two windows had screens up to them; the other window, where the writing desk was and other things, was up about twelve or fourteen inches; these windows had the regular wire screens.

Q. Did you notice whether any other windows were open? A. Yes, sir; one of the shutters was closed; there was only the screen between the room and the street.

Q. Were you the first person that entered the house, except the inmates? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In coming into the room in which the bed of Mr. Nathan was, did you notice whether there was any light burning? There was in the other room.

Q. Will you state the position of the light towards the window? A. It was turned in towards the wall near the window.

The witness was here directed by Assistant District Attorney Fellows to go to the window of the court room and show the jury how he found the light. He said it was turned in towards the wall.

Q. From the position of that light could it have been seen from the street? A. No, sir; no attention would be drawn to it.

Q. At any time during the night did you notice any light? A. No, sir.

Q. If a light had been burning against the window that was closed would you have been likely to see it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see it burning? A. No, sir; I did not take any notice of it.

Q. Did you notice when you entered the room what doors were open? A. Yes, sir; there was a door leading from the other room into the library open; Mr. Nathan's body was partly in this room and partly in the library.

Q. What other doors were open? A. I did not notice particularly; the door leading from Mr. Nathan's room was closed; I only the door in the back room was open; the room in which the housekeeper slept was open; the door of Mr. Nathan's room leading into the passage was closed.

OPENED ONE DOOR;

Q. You are confident that the door leading from Mr. Nathan's room into the passage was closed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time who were present in the room besides yourself? A. I think Mr. Nathan.

A juror—Which Mr. Nathan? A. The same gentleman, Mr. Frederick Nathan.

Q. Was he the only one? A. I think he was the only one; I think the other brother was out in the

Q. What portion of it was

STAINED WITH BLOOD?

A. The sharpend end of it.

Q. Was any portion of the round part of it

COVERED WITH BLOOD?

A. I did not take notice; there was blood upon it up to a certain distance.

Q. How long have you been on that post, officer? A. Well, I have been on that post for some time.

Q. How long? A. I cannot tell you how long; I have had it at different times; I have had it I think about two or three months; my regular post is Twenty-second street.

Q. Was this house unoccupied or usually occupied? A. Usually occupied.

Q. Who have been the occupants during the last month? A. I do not know; I have only seen these two gentlemen standing on the stoop at times.

Q. Had your attention been directed to the house or had any request been made of you to

WATCH THE HOUSE?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you not aware that Mr. Nathan was residing in the country? A. No, sir, I did not know it.

Q. Had you any special orders to look after the house? A. No, sir; I only looked after it the same as any other on my post.

Q. It had been your custom to examine the fastenings of that house? A. It is my regular custom to look after the fastenings of every house.

Q. And you know you examined this door and took hold of the handle at half-past four o'clock? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not notice anything wrong? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you seen during the night, at any time after twelve o'clock, any

CARRIAGES STANDING IN THAT STREET?

A. I saw a carriage standing down near Sixth avenue, on the south side, at No. 103.

Q. During the time you were on post, between twelve o'clock and six o'clock, did you meet many persons? A. Very few.

Q. Did you meet any person without a coat? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you meet any person after twelve o'clock whose actions were so singular as to attract your attention? A. No, sir.

By a Juror—How long have you been an officer? A. Two years.

Q. Your beat had been on Twenty-second street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long? A. I have been on that beat some time.

Q. How long? A. About four months; I tried the doors twice; the first time at half-past one o'clock; I tried every door on my beat.

Q. The last time you tried it was at half-past four? A. Yes, sir; it would take me

THREE HOURS TO GO OVER MY BEAT.

The rule is to try the doors twice; while in the house I heard some one speak of the door having been opened; it was one of the two Nathan boys; he said the door was open when he gave the alarm; I said it could not be so; he then said he could not swear it was closed; I think I did say we calculated the door was closed when the night latch was up; am sure the door was shut; had been by on the other side of the street once between half-past four and a quarter to six; I did not take notice of the windows as I was going by.

WENT UP WITH BOTH THE NATHANS.

I do not remember anybody else going up; the body was lying on its back, the chair was turned over backwards, noticed blood each side of the chair, the safe was open, did not notice the key; the drawer was on the bed; saw, as I entered from the hall, a bed of mattresses; I saw the corpse the other side of the bed; I looked over the bed.

To Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Should think I was about five feet, nine or ten inches.

To the foreman—The blood on the end of the "dog" was dry; saw prints of bloody feet on the stairs; the steps were all descending; I observed none ascending or pointing up; saw them in the hallway and on the stairs; saw similar footprints in the hall pointing in direction of the front door; when I entered I went directly from the front door to the corpse; saw no papers; saw some coppers and the old gentleman's clothing.

Q. Did you see any

BLOOD ON THE DOOR?

A. No, sir; I went directly from the door to the corpse.

Q. Was there any blood on the bed? A. I did not see any; Mr. Nathan picked up the waistcoat; it was opposite the bed and next to the wall, about eight feet off; Mr. Frederick Nathan examined the pants, and had a pocketbook in his hand; don't know whether he got it out of the pantaloons; they were dark; the vest was white; he picked up the shirt; the pantaloons were lying in the middle of the room next the wall.

Q. How far from the bed? A. Opposite the bed next to the wall; the shirt was lying on the floor; Mr. Nathan

KICKED HIS FOOT AGAINST THE SLEEVE;

I took notice to the shirt afterwards.

Q. Were there any studs in it? A. There were not; there was a gold button in the neck of the shirt; there were sleeve buttons in the wrist.

Q. Did you observe whether they were fastened as if the sleeves had been drawn over the hands? A. I think they were fastened; there was blood on the sleeve; saw no blood anywhere except in the neighborhood of the corpse, but saw blood on the wall between the window and door; the blood was about four feet from the floor; looked as if something bloody had rubbed against it; did not notice the seat of the chair; noticed a bloody footmark south of the chair; saw only three tools—a saw, screwdriver and a hammer; they were lying in an orderly way; found the housekeeper in the kitchen; the alarm had awoke her; I said nothing to her; the other officer said a rear door had been opened; I think it was the rear hall door; I examined the basement doors and windows next day.

The Coroner—Was there any blood on the shirt of Mr. Washington Nathan? A. No, sir; I did not notice any; when I met Mr. Frederick Nathan there was blood on the front and skirt of his shirt; it looked as if he had been leaning over something bloody; was about 100 feet from the door when I heard the alarm.

To Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Housekeeper told me afterward the excitement had roused her; she said that young Mr. Nathan came hallooing; they spoke very loud on the steps, and appeared very much excited; they said, "Come in, officer; come in, my father's been murdered;" had my meals down stairs, and then conversed with Mrs. Kelly; did not see her till a day or two afterward; am sure I only opened one door between Mr. Nathan's and Mrs. Kelly's room.

To a Juror—I did not notice the door, I opened it so quickly; I think it was

A SLIDING DOOR.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Before you entered the house did you make any alarm? A. I rapped once.

Q. When you went up stairs there was nobody with you but the Messrs. Nathan? A. No, sir.

Q. And you recognize both of those gentlemen now? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you quite sure Mr. Washington Nathan had no stockings? A. I did not take any notice; I cannot swear whether he had or not.

Q. You say the

on the marble tiles were made by Mr. Fred. Nathan's bloody stockings? A. That was my impression; the blood looked as if it might be fresh, and as if the marks had just been placed there; there were no bloody traces going back.

To a Juror—I saw what looked to be finger marks up on the wall; they might have been finger marks.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows—There was no difficulty in seeing the body over the bed from the place where I stood after entering the room.

The Coroner—How much of the body could you see? A. I saw the hip part of the body first, and afterwards went over and saw it all.

A Juror—The first time you entered the house, who went up stairs first, you or Mr. Nathan? A. I think one of them went ahead; I think Mr. Fred. Nathan went ahead or alongside of me.

Q. Was it after that that you made the observation in relation to the bloody footprints? A. I saw them as I was going in.

Q. Did you look afterwards to see if there were any? A. Yes, sir; but they were made as if descending; if there had been bloody footprints up stairs they might have escaped me.

Q. You have spoken of a conversation with Mrs. Kelly? A. I saw her in the basement; she was dressed.

Q. Did you see Mrs. Kelly's son? A. I did not see him then.

Q. When did you first see Mrs. Kelly's son? A. I saw him two days afterwards; but I did not take any notice of him on the day of the murder.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows—Those footprints you saw on the marble tiles—were they so far apart that they looked like those of a man running or walking? A. They were not so far apart that they looked like the footprints of a man who had been running; I remained in the house until Captain Kelso and Superintendent Jourdan arrived; I saw them in the room with other gentlemen sitting there; they came before I left.

Q. How long were you there before other officers or other persons came? A. I was there about fifteen minutes.

Q. Whom did you take up to the room, if anybody? A. When the officer came he came up.

Q. Did the porter of the hotel go up with you? A. I do not recollect; I saw several persons come into the hall, but I did not take notice how far they came in.

Q. When you first entered the house you did not see this instrument known as a "dog?" A. My attention was called to the "dog" by Mr. Frederick Nathan, who picked it up. (The witness here identified the instrument spoken of.) Witness was asked to tell all he knew in connection with the case.

The witness—In the small study or room the safe was open; I saw the chair back down; I saw two bundles of papers; a box was between the window and the chair; the lid was up; papers were lying on the table.

Q. Where was

THE KEY OF THE SAFE?

A. I did not take any notice of it; I did not see it.

TESTIMONY OF OFFICER EVANS.

Detective officer Evans was the next witness examined by Assistant District Attorney Fellows. He testified that on the morning of the 29th of July he was at the station house, and at five minutes past two o'clock went down Sixth avenue and through Seventeenth street to Broadway. He looked up Twenty-third street as he passed it going down on Sixth avenue and again on coming up Broadway to Twenty-third street, looked down the latter thoroughfare and noted nothing unusual. He could not have seen a light in No. 12 from his position if he had looked towards the windows.

William F. Smith was then examined, and in response to Assistant District Attorney Fellows deposed:—

Q. Where do you reside? A. At No. 256 West Fortieth street.

Q. What is your employment? A. I am a carpenter; I work for Mr. McKenzie; worked 28th July at Mr. Nathan's; on Thursday got there about seven; put my hand in the gate, drew back the latch and walked in; went up to attic; the masons came up stairs and spoke to me; on the stairs I met Mrs. Kelly; she said, "Is that you, Washington?" I said, "No, it's a carpenter;" she said, "Why, that young man has been waiting all the morning for you;" she asked me to fix the fastenings in Mr. Nathan's room; we fastened the windows before we went to dinner; got Mr. Nathan's room done by eleven. The witness here gave similar testimony as the previous witness as to looking for the hammer. He continued:—I have been working for Mr. McKenzie for eight years.

Q. During the day in question you were nearly in every room in the house? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your impression from the manner in which you went through the house as to the possibility of any person coming in and concealing themselves? A. I don't know.

K. Where did you go from the shop? A. Straight home.

Q. Did you go out? A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you sleep that night? A. At home, and did not go out until next morning, when the detective called for me.

LE MAISTRE RECALLED.

Le Maistre was recalled—He said that he went from Philip Nathan's house on Thursday evening to the shop and then home; walked out, and exchanged words with a Mr. Murray, who keeps a tea store; and others; said nothing to any one regarding Mr. Nathan's house; spent the evening with a Mr. and Mrs. Wright, and went home at half-past ten; sat up there with a Mr. Gardner during the thunder storm.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Coroner, at this stage of the proceedings, observed that a commencement had been made, and he would leave it to the jury to determine an early day for adjournment.

Assistant District Attorney Fellows said he would be obliged to consult District Attorney Garvin, who was now ill at Saratoga Springs, and he asked that the inquest be adjourned till Monday.

The investigation was accordingly adjourned till ten o'clock on Monday morning.

The Little Light That Breaks.

At a little past five o'clock yesterday evening a HERALD reporter inquired at the residence of the late Mr. Nathan, in Fifth avenue, for "a Mr. Isaac." A little explanation ensued, after which he left for the residence of Mr. Lyon in Nineteenth street. Here he met the two brothers Lyon, nephews of Mr. Nathan, and explained his business—viz., that he had met a Mr. Isaac, a relative of the murdered man, on Sunday evening, with whom he had conversed, and that he wished to ascertain if Mr. Nathan when living had in his employ a clerk or secretary who would be apt to know anything in regard to deceased's business papers. The reporter was invited into the drawing room, when the following conversation ensued:—

REPORTER—Did Mr. Nathan have a clerk or secretary in his employ?

Mr. JULIUS J. LYON—No, sir.

REPORTER—Is there any one living who knows the character of the papers in his safe; whether he had in his possession any bonds, mortgages or other security for moneys loaned, that would cover, perhaps, the entire estate of the mortgagor or debtor?

Mr. J. J. LYON—I am acquainted with the character of the papers, and Mr. Nathan had no such ones.

REPORTER—You are positive, then, that no man, young or old, was sufficiently indebted to Mr. Nathan to make such debts an incentive for such action as ended in the murder?

Mr. J. J. LYON—I am quite so.

FACTS IN RELATION TO THE MURDER?

Mr. J. J. LYON—Oh! yes, sir. The sensational reports are all incorrect in their statements treating of facts, and a large share of their matter is imaginative and theoretical. For instance, in regard to the statement that Washington went down to his father's safe, and, opening it, procured the will and other papers, showing a suspicious knowledge of the combination. Washington never went there, and knew nothing about it, nor does he know it now. I went with Harmon Nathan, the eldest son of deceased, to Mr. Nathan's safe at the office of the Board of Brokers, and we took with us sent down for the purpose from Morristown by a railway conductor, which contained a memorandum of the combination. By aid of this memorandum, but partly by guess work, we opened the safe and brought the will to the house. Our only object in getting the will was to learn any directions which Mr. Nathan might have made in the instrument in regard to his burial, &c. Statements have also been made about the key and certain signals between the boys, which it seems are not made understandingly. It was a house that when they came home at night the first one in should place the key on the hall table; the second finding it there knew that one brother was in and one out, and would place the key in the lock, so that the third, coming home, finding it in the lock, knew both the others were in and locked and bolted the door. Some of the papers suggested that Washington might have entered his father's room to ascertain the character of the papers in the chest—to search for a will, &c. Now "Wash" knew all about the papers in the chest, and if he had wanted to examine or carry away any of them he might have done so during the six months past, when he has had access to them daily, his father being in the country and he in sole immediate charge of the house.

MR. NATHAN'S NOTE BOOK

THE WOMAN AT THE HOFFMAN HOUSE

would make one laugh but for the sad thoughts of the terrible murder. The story only originated in the fact that one night last week "Wash." was locked out and went to the Hoffman House, where he had a room alone, as the hotel register will show. Wash. never had anything to do with a diamond robbery or any woman alluded to in the malicious paragraph concerning it, as the records of Jefferson Market Police Court will also bear evidence. And so far from being very extravagant, though his father was worth perhaps

TWO OR THREE MILLIONS,

"Wash." never spent more than $2,500 a year, and he was in a respectably-paying business, though a young house, in which he was a partner. The marks of blood which have been alluded to as upon the staircase and staining the marble tiles were spoken of at the inquest to-day as all pointing in one direction—viz., downward and towards the door, with no traces of returning. The fact was overlooked that a narrow strip of carpet extended the entire length of the hall, through the centre, some seventy-five or eighty feet, and that with which Frederick Nathan's socks were drabbled was wiped by this in passing back over it while Washington Nathan, who wore slippers, and had no traces of blood upon his person could leave no marks.

The family express the greatest indebtedness to Mr. Emanuel B. Hart for his kindness and attention to them under their trying circumstances. They also state that of condolence and regret are received by them daily, some coming from distant parts of the country. One which was received yesterday was from a distinguished lawyer of Washington, who tendered to them his counsel and advice. All speak in terms of the greatest indignation of the reports published in the Sunday sensational paper, and certain ill-advised and unthinking ones offer their services to heat a certain newspaper office in this city "red hot."

THE POLICE INVESTIGATIONS.

In the investigations by the police there seems to have been no progress made worthy of especial note. To queries propounded to Superintendent Jourdan and Captain Kelso the answer is still the same.

"We have no clue upon which to ground a suspicion or make an arrest." "Still we will not relax our efforts in the least."

Persons were yesterday at the headquarters in Mulberry street with information that, on being sifted, amounted to nothing. The detectives are still as active as ever, and, indeed, yesterday and Wednesday were more so. A number of ward specials have been also detailed to assist in clearing up the mystery. With thirty or forty men scouring the city and sifting every report, it is devoutly to be hoped some tangible result will follow their labors. The Coroner's inquest will largely aid them in the work and getting at the circumstances surrounding the tragedy.

A VISIT FROM H. NATHAN.

About two o'clock Mr. Herman Nathan, accompanied by his brother-in-law, drove up to 300 Mulberry street, and was closeted with the Superintendent a few minutes. It is believed that he conveyed to him some important information, as the Superintendent, with one of his detectives, left hurriedly and was absent some hours. The members of the family, it is said, are doing all in their power to aid the police in clearing up the mystery in which the murder is shrouded.

DEPARTMENT OF DOCKS.

Report of the Superintendent on Needed Repairs—Financial Exhibit of the Board—A Grand Plan for Uniting Brooklyn and New York Submitted to the Board.

The Commissioners of the Department of Docks assembled yesterday afternoon in stated session, with the president, Mr. John T. Agnew, in the chair. After the usual preliminaries had been disposed of reported that the Long Island Steamboat Company had replied to the note sent in relation to pier 27, stating that the Harlem Navigation Company used and encumbered the pier more than the Long Island folks did, yet that the latter was willing to aid in placing the dock in proper repair. The committee reported in relation to the Forty-ninth and Fifty-seventh streets piers that it was deemed inadvisable to rebuild those piers, and suggested that the superintendent be required to inform the Board what should be done to the outer portions, so as to provide for the safety of vessels passing up and down. The committee reported unfavorably on the application of the Washington Ice Company in relation to being released from the expense of the pier, now partly used by the free bath at the foot of Charles street, and reported favorably on the application of Andrew Johnson for permission to erect a platform at the foot of Forty-eighth street, and to pay therefor $100 per annum. The recommendation of the Commissioners were concurred in by unanimous vote. The report of for docks and wharves was submitted by Mr. G. W. Don, of the Chamber of Commerce. This plan contemplates joining New York and Brooklyn by means of three grand causeways, with gates or dykes, thus forming two enclosed basins, and on those causeways to have built the warehouses.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

THE ADVANTAGES CLAIMED

for this plan are many—among others that it need not cost the city anything—while it would increase the value of taxable property some $50,000,000, would lessen the taxes by making one city with but one government. Mr. Don gave as the reason the want of easy and free transit between New York and Long Island and want of necessary wharves and docks. The ferries are attended by fears, and suspension bridges claim still less confidence; solid stone and earth should be used for lasting footings. He asserted that of the water which comes in from the ocean by way of Sandy Hook 22,600,000 cubic feet goes out by way of Hell Gate and Long Island Sound and that but little of the water and ice which come down the Hudson go out by the Narrows. He entered at length into the discussion of the subject and the explanation of experiments made by him on the waters of the East river as far up as Sand's Point and traced the flow from the North river up to that point.

His communication was received and filed, after which the Board adjourned.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Opening of Proposals.

Commissioner Tweed and Comptroller Connolly yesterday, opened a large number of contracts for sewers, regulating, grading and paving in various parts of the city. Owing to the extensive computations necessary to be made, the final awards of contracts could not be announced until to-day. The proposals for sewer in Fortieth street, and for regulating and grading New Worth street, Seventy-second street, from Third avenue to East river, and Tenth avenue, from Manhattan street to 155th street, were withdrawn. The first, because a sewer in that street was deemed unnecessary; the second because of a proposed alteration in the grade; the third because the property could not stand the assessment, and the fourth because of interference with the Croton Aqueduct. The contract for was awarded to John Hogan, for $23,000. The other bidders for this work were J. J. Mooney, $30,000, and J. L. Brown, Jr., $37,100.

A STONE BRIDGE OVER SPUYTEN DUYVIL CREEK,

WHO IS KING OF THE PORT?

Arrest for Violation of the Quarantine Laws—A Flagrant Case—What the Law Says.

Captain John F. Scott, of the bark Contest, was arrested and taken to the Tombs yesterday morning under a warrant issued by Justice Shandley, for violation of the quarantine laws. The Contest, as was shown by the affidavit of the Deputy Health Officer, arrived from Rio Janeiro in the latter part of July and was detained at Lower Quarantine. Five of her crew had been in hospital at Rio with yellow fever, of whom one died. One man also died of yellow fever on the passage to this port, while the captain was attacked with the same disease, but was convalescent at the time of arrival. After remaining one day in the lower bay the vessel was removed from the quarantine anchorage, under pretense of going to sea, but was finally brought up to one of the Brooklyn docks by way of Perth Amboy. As an excuse for thus violating the law the captain alleged that he acted under orders from the consignees of the vessel, and that he ought not to be held responsible. In this respect, however, the quarantine law provides that every master of a vessel subject to visitation by the Health Officer, who shall refuse or neglect to remain at Quarantine during the period assigned by the Health Officer shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $2,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. In this case the captain was held in $1,000 bail to appear for trial.

CRIME IN PATERSON.

A man named Philip Smith was yesterday arrested at Paterson, N. J., for committing an assault upon his wife. The latter alleges that he came home beastly drunk the night before and pulled her from the bed, after which he assaulted her so severely that she was forced to run out of the house en dishabille and seek the assistance of the neighbors.

Another Smith, named James, was arrested and committed to answer for stabbing Mrs. J. Robinson, of Morton street, in the wrist. It seems the man had no place to sleep and no money, and being from the same part of the "old country" Mrs. Robinson took compassion on him and tendered him the hospitalities of her house. The ungrateful wretch, however, became involved in a quarrel with the good lady, during which he stabbed her, as before stated. Smith asserts that he has a family in poor circumstances living in Hudson City.

LONG BRANCH RACES.

Fourth Day of the Inaugural Meeting.

RACING IN A DELUGING RAIN.

Enquirer the Winner of the Robins' Stakes, Two Mile Heats; McKinney the Three-quarters of a Mile for Two-year Olds, R. B. Connolly the Selling Race, and Rapture the Gentleman's Cup.

Yesterday was the fourth day of the inaugural racing meeting at Monmouth Park, and had the weather been pleasant the same success that attended the previous days would have been the record of this, making it a day of genuine enjoyment, inasmuch as the several contests promised exceedingly well. Notwithstanding the weather, which was the meanest that could be imagined for the sport, there appeared an evident determination among the boarders of the hotels at the Branch, and among the Jerseyites in general, to be present, for they turned out in large numbers, male and female, young and old, and in a deluging rain went early to the track. There was a more promiscuous assemblage yesterday than at any of the previous days, for all classes of society had their representatives at the Park. There were the noted banker, the merchant, the professional man of high and low degree, the well-to-do farmer who has acquired a competency by raising garden truck for the markets of New York and Philadelphia, the gentleman of leisure, old sports and young sports, the staid and matronly farmer's wife with her daughters comely and beautiful, or plain and unpretending as the case may be, the young miss who is being fondly courted and the old one, who, forsooth to say has passed the age when courting is at all probable, and to whose faded charms men fail to pay their vows—all these were witnesses of the exciting sport of yesterday while the elements were in their worst humor. The courageous at Long Branch and the curious denizens of Jersey were supplemented in large numbers by Gothamites who came by boat and cars in the hours of the morning, men who "assist" at a racing meeting at all times and under all circumstances. Among these were the young and old, the gray and gaudy, politicians of influence and those of no note whatever, is all intent upon one purpose, the gratification of certain tastes in matters of speed and speculation. Of course the discussions on the way were all of one character, gravitating towards the contests of the day, and particularly towards the race of the day, the Robins' Stake, two mile heats. Concerning the races in the past and the races in the future, of the two important contestants in the race, bay colts Enquirer and Kingfisher, they ventured their opinions excitedly and bet their money. Thus, at one point the listener would have been informed that "Kingfisher was the best three year old in the world," and in another instance that "Enquirer had been tried and was a stayer." And in this strain they descanted until the arrival at the course.

DRENCHING SHOWERS.

The showers that had at times been threatening during the morning at last burst forth at noon, and the rain fell in torrents for half an hour or more. It deluged the track, filling the uneven places with an inch or two of water and on the backstretch forming little rivulets, making what turfmen term "a very heavy course." At one o'clock the little gods that sit aloft and hold the reins of the wind and weather in their hands checked the unwished for storm, and the clouds partially breaking away, glimpses of sunshine appeared and the hearts of the throng were gladdened. Soon thereafter the genial face of Jim Valentine, Clerk of the Course, appeared near the pool stand, and shouted, with extended arms—

"We run!"

"Who runs?" smilingly asked the auctioneer, Underwood.

"We do—to-day," persisted Valentine.

"Well, come up here and I'll sell a pool on you, old boy," shouted back the active little man when Valentine went to the stand and assured the assemblage that no postponement would occur by the inclemency of the weather.

The rifts of blue in the sky did not long remain a beacon of fair weather. Clouds soon again shot over the firmament, and again the rain descended, with but slight intermission, in copious showers, until the track when the third race was being run resembled a canal, the water being three and four inches deep. The lawn was like a river and everybody sought the stand. The riders of the horses were drenched before they started, and at the finish looked pitiable indeed. Accompanying the rain were frequent flashes of lightning, and the deep reverberations of thunder as it rolled over the mountains and settled in its intensity around the park, drowned the voice of the poolseller and frightened the ladies even more than it did the horses.

THE EXCITEMENT OVER THE ROBINS STAKES.

The first race on the programme of the day, the Robins Stakes, produced the greatest amount of speculation and excitement. It had been looked forward to with indescribable interest by turfmen, inasmuch as the contest would bring together those superior three year olds, Belmont's Kingfisher and General Buford's Enquirer. Here was the excitement, and seldom in the history of the turf during late years has it been so intense. Kingfisher, by recent performances at Saratoga, was the favorite at long odds, and many thousands of dollars were staked in this manner. Those who knew Enquirer, however, would not desert him, and took all the bets thus offered. They held that he had accomplished a good deal, and at this time expected him to sustain his reputation. When the first heat was run and Kingfisher came in the winner the excitement had not abated, but continued with renewed intensity. The friends of Enquirer stuck to the pool stand and took the large odds. Hundreds, thousands and tens of thousands were bet there and on the track. The rain again came down in a perfect deluge, clearing the timid to the Grand Stand from the lawn, but the betters cared not. Kingfisher's adherents sent him up to a high favorite, but old "Kentucky never tired," and the Enquirer "boys" stayed with them, and greenbacks in handfuls went into the "pool box." Side bets were made friends with friends, brothers with brothers and ladies with their mothers and daughters. The excitement ran high, and the twenty-five minutes allowed between the heats did not allay it. The rain still came down vehemently. Some wished it would continue and the track would, by becoming softer, be better than its "lumpy" condition during the first heat. The bell in time brought the coursers to the track, Enquirer being the first led in, closely blanketed. "How is he?" "Has he got over it?" "Oh, I wish he has," came from a hundred tongues, and scores of lorgnettes were levelled to ascertain his condition. At last his clothes were removed, and the little charcoal darkey, his rider, mounted, when he galloped up the track. "He is dry as a stick," "Don't he look well?" "There is a chance yet," were heard in hurried whispers when the attention of the masses was called to Kingfisher, who then had made his appearance. "Hasn't got well over it by ——," shouted one more enthusiastic individual; and certainly that seemed to be the case, but Enquirer did not appear at all to mind the exertions he had made, and was in a condition to run for a kingdom. There was no delay. The judges were anxious, the ladies were enthusiastic and the betters wild with excitement. The word was given and the horses got away excellently, and it seemed that the tap of the drum was quicker and more excitedly given than ever before. Away they went, Enquirer to the front, one-quarter, one-half, the mile, they run, and the mud flew in great clouds covering horses and gayly jacketed jockeys so that neither were hardly recognizable. The mile and a half was reached and the excitement grew more intense, when "Kingfisher is gone!" went ringing over field and stand, and, sure enough, such was the case. The whip was plied by his driver, but the fire had been expended and Enquirer galloped home an easy winner, amid an excitement unparalleled on the turf. The condition of Kingfisher was enough to excite the sympathy of the more tender hearted, as he appeared to be greatly distressed and had the "thumps." Another heat was to be run; but the race was already thought to be virtually decided, and so the third heat proved, as Enquirer came home an easy victor, filling the pockets of his adherents and almost breaking the heart of Kingfisher's owner at the same time.

THE GENTLEMAN'S CUP.

The fourth race, the Gentleman's Cup, excited considerable interest, notwithstanding the frightful condition of the track and its unpleasant surroundings. The "gentlemen jocks" had many friends present, and each was more or less stimulated by the good wishes of those intimately connected with them to strive for the victory. This was not alone the only incentive. The prize, an elegant silver punch bowl, valued at $600, was placed upon a pedestal in front of the grand stand, in full view of the audience, and elicited many commendations for its exquisite design and finish. It was worth taking home. The riders were gentlemen well known in social circles. This race was won by the favorite, but the riders presented a ludicrous sight when it was finished, their handsome costumes being transformed into suits darker than the dirtiest coal heaver. When Lord Wodehouse returned to the stand he was greeted with repeated cheers, but it was evidently not appreciated, as he hurried to change his soiled costume and not await the applause of the multitude.

The Racing.

Before the horses were called for the first race a deluging shower had flooded the track, making it extremely heavy and slow. Some talk of postponement was prevalent. The secretary, however, soon put all doubts to rest by announcing that the racing would come off, and at the appointed time the horses for the first race were called. Four races came off during the day, the first being two mile heats for three year olds, with 100 pounds up; the second a dash of three-quarters of a mile by two year olds: the third a dash of a mile and a quarter—a selling race—and the fourth a gentleman's race for a silver punch bowl, one mile.

Three horses started in the first race—Enquirer, Kingfisher and Major—the latter being little thought of in company with the other clippers. Betting was very large on Kingfisher and Enquirer, the former being the favorite in most of the pools. He won the first heat, Enquirer never making an effort for it, never being touched with whip or spur. Kingfisher was then an immense favorite, but when Enquirer won the second heat with the greatest ease he had the call over the others at long odds. Enquirer won the third heat just as easily as he had the second, and those who stuck to him won large amounts of money.

The second race was between five two year olds, but the start for it was the most miserable one that has been given at this meeting. McKinney had such a commanding lead at the beginning that the others were all beaten before they made a movement. The third race was better. It was run in a deluging shower, the lightning flashing and the thunder rattling enough to frighten the jockeys out of their saddles. This was won by R. B. Connolly in good style. He laid up half the distance and then went on and won.

The last event of the day was a race for a silver punch bowl, one mile, gentlemen riders. Rapture and St. Patrick came to the post, the former ridden by Mr. John Carter and the latter by Lord Wodehouse. Rapture won an easy race in very good time. The rain was pouring down frightfully during the running. The following are the details of the day's racing:—

Enquirer	55	55	60	55	65	120	60
Major	10	15	20	15	20	30	20

THE RACE.

First Heat.—The start was a good one. Enquirer then took the lead, Kingfisher second, Major third. Going around the turn Kingfisher fell in behind. At the quarter pole Enquirer led half a length, Major second, three lengths in advance of Kingfisher. On the backstretch Enquirer and Major ran locked, with Kingfisher three lengths behind. They ran in this way through the mud and slush all the way around, and as they passed under the string at the end of the mile Enquirer led one length, Major second, two lengths in front of Kingfisher. Going into the second mile, Major ran up to Enquirer's head, and at the quarter pole showed in front. Kingfisher had not yet made a movement to overtake the others, nor did he till he passed the half-mile pole, at which point Enquirer led one length, Major second. Getting into the lower turn, however, Kingfisher made his run, and in a moment was in the lead, there being no stop or delay in going past the others. Enquirer made no effort to overtake him, but came moderately up the homestretch. Kingfisher ran home a winner of the heat by a length and a half. Major was beaten half a dozen lengths. Time of the heat, 3 59¾.

Second Heat.—A heavy rain fell between heats, rendering the track excessively heavy. Enquirer took the lead at the start, Major second, Kingfisher trailing. Going around the turn Enquirer led one length, Major second, two lengths in front of Kingfisher. Enquirer kept the lead down the backstretch, keeping from a length to a length and a half in front, and when he got into the lower turn opened a gap of three lengths, Major second, Kingfisher close up. As they approached the three quarter pole Kingfisher passed the Major and took second place and lay there two lengths behind Enquirer. As they passed under the string at the end of the first mile Enquirer led two lengths, Kingfisher second, half a length in front of Major; but going around the upper turn Kingfisher again fell in the rear. The tall son of Leamington kept the gap open to the quarter pole, running well within himself, while Major was doing his best, and Kingfisher was not pulling so strong as he had done in the first heat at the same point. Going down the backstretch Kingfisher made his run, but Major would not resign his place to him. The two shut the gap up on Enquirer for a short time, and lay a little over a length behind, the latter running steadily and without the least urging. Kingfisher began to quit on the lower turn and as he came into the homestretch he was seen getting the whip, and Major then left him. Kingfisher was punished the greater part of the way up the stretch without a response, as he was hopelessly beaten by Major. Enquirer came on under a strong pull, clear of Major, and passed under the string four lengths in advance of him, the latter being three lengths in front of Kingfisher. The time of the heat was better than the first, being in 3:54¾. At the finish Enquirer did not seem much distressed, while the others were badly off.

Third Heat.—The greatest excitement was then manifested between the heats by the backers of Kingfisher, and every effort was made to hedge. Enquirer was the favorite at very long odds. He jumped away with the lead, Kingfisher second, Major close up. Going around the turn Major took second place and ran up close to Enquirer, the latter leading past the quarter-pole one length, Kingfisher five lengths behind. Enquirer was under a strong pull down the backstretch, leading one length and a half, Major second, three lengths ahead of Kingfisher. They ran in this way around the lower turn and up the homestretch, passing under the string at the end of the first mile nose and tail, Enquirer first, Major second and Kingfisher third. Major was laboring hard at this time, and Kingfisher was very little better off. Going around the turn Enquirer dashed away and was five lengths ahead in a moment. He was, however, taken in hand again, and led past the quarter pole three lengths ahead of Kingfisher, who had given Major the go-by. On the backstretch Kingfisher was forced and he closed up nearly all the daylight, but this was allowed as a favor by the jockey of Enquirer. The latter was under a strong pull and running as if at exercising work. Major now began to give it up badly. He had shot his bolt. Enquirer galloped around the lower turn one length ahead of Kingfisher and came home at his ease a winner by a length. Major was fifty yards behind Kingfisher. Time of the heat, 4:00.

THE RACE.

McKinney got a commanding lead at the start, Richards' filly second, Jerome's filly third, Rattan fourth, with Nelly Ransom far behind. The start was the worst that has been given during the meeting. McKinney had it all his own way to the end, although Richards' filly closed up some of the daylight on the homestretch. Nelly Ransom also ran well, landing a good third. She was at least 100 yards behind when McKinney passed the half-mile pole. McKinney won the heat by six lengths, Richards' filly second, about the same distance ahead of Nelly Ransom, Rattan fourth and Jerome's filly fifth. Time, 1:23.

THIRD RACE.

The horses were started at the three-quarter pole in a torrent of rain, Pennock getting away best, the Doneraile second, Connolly third. They came slashing up the stretch, and as they passed the stand the Doneraile colt was leading half a length, Pennock's colt second, two lengths ahead of R. B. Connolly. Going around the upper turn the Doneraile colt led one length, the Pennock second, four lengths ahead of Connolly. At the quarter pole the Doneraile was about half a length ahead of Pennock, who was five lengths in front of Connolly. Going down the backstretch Connolly made good running and closed finely, and on the lower turn took second place, the Doneraile colt being beaten there by Pennock. The latter kept the lead, however, until thirty yards from the stand, when Connolly passed him and won the race by half a length. Time, 2:30½.

THE FOURTH RACE.

GENTLEMEN'S CUP, for all ages, welter weights, gentlemen riders. The prize an elegant silver punch bowl; one mile.

THE RACE.

Mr. John Coster rode Rapture and Lord Wodehouse was on St. Patrick. The latter had a lead of half a dozen lengths when the drum was tapped for the start, but before he got around the turn Rapture had overtaken him and was leading. Rapture then went on with the race in hand and was never headed. She came in an easy winner of the race by four lengths, making the mile in 1:59.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Gunning S. Bedford, Jr., City Judge.

A PROFESSIONAL PICKPOCKET IN RAGGED CLOTHES—THE CITY JUDGE DETECTS THE TRICK.

Assistant District Attorney Tweed appeared for the prosecution and disposed of the calendar with unusual despatch.

The first case tried by a jury yesterday was an indictment against George McDougal, charged with petty larceny from the person. It appeared that on the 22d of July John O'Sullivan, a resident of Newark, fell asleep on a pile of lumber and was awakened by the prisoner, whom he caught in the act of taking his hand out of his pocket. The complainant lost twenty dollars and a pipe. He was arrested a few moments afterwards by the officer, who upon searching him found O'Sullivan's pipe. After the rendition of the verdict of guilty Judge Bedford, in passing sentence, said that he had no doubt but that McDougal (whom Mr. Blunt denominated a "bummer" in his summing up) was a dangerous member of society. Any man who would deliberately pick a man's pocket when asleep, and then pretend to be drunk, would commit more serious offences. It was a well known fact that professional pickpockets dress well when they go in cars, and when brought to the bar were often clothed in rags. His Honor, believing the prisoner to be a professional pickpocket, sent him to the State Prison for five years.

Abraham Hartt, who was charged with robbing Abraham Bible, a pedlar, on the 15th of July, pleaded guilty to assault and battery. The testimony showing that the accused only struck the pedlar, this plea was accepted, and a fine of twenty dollars was imposed.

Robert Reilly pleaded guilty to attempting to steal from an express wagon, on the 29th of July, a trunk containing wearing apparel valued at $800, the property of Llewellyn S. Woodward. He was sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

A NOTORIOUS YOUNG BURGLAR SENT TO THE STATE PRISON.

James Murtha, alias James Kane, alias James McIntyre, pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree. On the 10th of July he effected an entrance to the premises of Joseph D. Powers, 746 Broadway, and stole $300 worth of cloth. Judge Bedford, in passing sentence, observed that although the prisoner was only twenty years of age he had been informed by a captain of police that Murtha was an associate of burglars and had already served a term in prison for burglary. He was sentenced to the State Prison for four years and six months.

LARCENY FROM THE PERSON.

John Sheridan, indicted for robbery, pleaded guilty to petty larceny from the person. He was charged with stealing fourteen dollars from Joseph Davis, on the 24th of July, while passing through the street. He was sent to the State Prison for three years.

Thomas McLaughlin pleaded guilty to burglariously entering the store of Joseph E. Powers, corner of Broadway and Fourteenth street, on the 10th of July, and stealing $300 worth of cloth. He was sent to the Penitentiary for three years.

LARCENY IN A FARO BANK—A NEW ORLEANS GAMBLER LOSES HIS COAT—MR. HOWE ON THE SOUTHERN MULE QUESTION.

Florence Dempsey was tried upon a charge of grand larceny. The complainant, Thomas H. Lennox, who said, when cross-examined by Mr. Howe, that he was a resident of New Orleans and a mule dealer by occupation, testified that he went into a gambling saloon in Vesey street, and, the day being very hot, he took off his coat and sat upon it; while he was in the act of throwing off the copper from the bet he rose from his seat, and, while in the act of removing the bet, some person ran out of the room with his coat, which contained $700; a man who was on the sidewalk saw the prisoner in his shirt sleeves and have a coat with him; about three weeks afterwards an officer arrested the prisoner and found two pawn tickets for a coat and vest upon him, which, however, did not represent Mr. Lennox's coat. Dempsey voluntarily stated in the station house that he had the coat, that other parties were concerned in the matter and he got only $120. The prisoner, in testifying on his own behalf, said that he did not steal the coat, but admitted that he was gambling there and won $1.0. Mr. Lennox was not so fortunate, for he owned up that he lost $2,500 in gambling saloons in this city. Mr. Howe made an amusing speech, dwelling richly upon Mr Lennox's mule and horse proclivities. The City Judge, in his usual impartial and lucid manner, presented the facts to the jury, who, much to the astonishment of many of the lookers on, rendered a verdict of not guilty. They were evidently more influenced by Mr. Howe's speech than by the testimony.

The following is the calendar for to-day:—The People vs. Patrick Kearney, robbery; Same vs. John Anderson, robbery; Same vs. Frederick Segner, felonious assault and battery; Same vs. Thomas O'Brien, felonious assault and battery; Same vs. John Dugan, felonious assault and battery; Same vs. Edward Cooper, obtaining goods by false pretences; Same vs Joseph Gregory, grand larceny; Same vs. John Burke, grand larceny; Same vs. Simon Bernard, grand larceny; Same vs. Daniel McGrath, Thomas McGrath, William Brown, robbery; Same vs. James Conway, Michael Ward and others, grand larceny; Same vs. William Harney, larceny from the person; Same vs. Louis Best, larceny from the person; Same vs. Paul Kelly, rape; Same vs. Adam Lang, rape.

COURT CALENDAR—THIS DAY.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.—Held by Judge Barnard. Calendar called at twelve M. Nos. 106, 133.

A BOY MURDERED IN NEW JERSEY.

The Greenville Affray—Verdict of the Coroner's Jury—A Lad Ten Years Old Committed on a Charge of Manslaughter.

The inquest on the body of the boy Augustus Thau, of Greenville, was held by Coroner Burns on Wednesday night. The facts adduced in evidence are briefly these:—The deceased and John Butler, the latter ten and the former twelve years of age, played ball on Monday and the ball happened to roll in the mud. A dispute ensued as to which of the two should lift it, and Thau struck Butler. Soon after Butler was walking with his mother, when they met Thau. Mrs. Butler reprimanded Thau for striking her boy, and the latter, while she was speaking, slyly crept from behind and raising his ball bat felled Thau to the ground with a blow which fractured the skull.

The injured boy was carried to his home, where he died the following day. The jury rendered a verdict that Thau came to his death from the effects of a blow from a ball bat in the hands of John Butler. On this verdict Coroner Burns committed him to the county jail for trial. Mrs. Butler, who has been in custody as an abettor, was discharged, no evidence having been adduced to show her complicity in the affair. She left rather mortified at the unfortunate occurrence which culminated in a manner she least expected.

Thau belonged to one of the oldest families, not only in Greenville, but in Hudson county, and great sympathy is manifested for the family. At the same time it is conceded on all sides that the boy who is to answer for the crime had no intention whatever to inflict injuries which would endanger the life of his playmate. In this view of the case Coroner Burns will consider the question of bail within the within the ensuing three days.

DISGRACEFUL OCCURRENCE.

Attack on Town Officers by an Army of Women—The Former Beaten and Driven Off the Field.

Last Wednesday afternoon a novel and fierce mêlée, which might have terminated in bloodshed, occurred at Washingtonville, in the town of East Chester, Westchester county. The pound master of Mount Vernon, it appears, had empounded some cattle and geese belonging to several residents in the neighborhood, and it being alleged that he had shown partiality to other violators of the pound laws, a large force of German and Irish women, armed with various kinds of weapons, determined to attack the obnoxious poundmaster when he next visited their neighborhood. This warlike preparation on the part of the women having been brought to the notice of Justice Meeks, that official, having called to his assistance some half dozen constables and special officers, including the poundmaster, repaired to the pound and attempted to remove a post which had been put down to prevent the pound gate from being opened. Before their work was completed, however, they were attacked by the infuriated women, who, by a vigorous application of their weapons, drove the Justice and his posse off the field, and then tore down the enclosure amid yells and other equally disgraceful demonstrations of their victory over the officers. It is understood that warrants have been issued for the arrest of many of the guilty parties.

FIRE AT JERSEY CITY.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in Somers' oil factory, at the corner of Warren and South Eighth streets, Jersey City, and 130 barrels of gasoline were destroyed. The liquid belonged to Mr. Wheeler, of New York, whose loss is about $4,000. The damage to the building is over half that amount, but it is covered by insurance.

MIDSUMMER RETREATS.

Visit of President Grant to the West End Hotel—What Was Talked About and What Was Not Talked About—Mr. Frelinghuysen on Sea Sickness—An Evening Concert—The President Goes to Spend a Day in Washington.

LONG BRANCH, August 4, 1870.

This forenoon President Grant very quietly dropped in at the West End Hotel, having been driven down from his cottage with General Porter, his private secretary, and two ladies. Alighting from the carriage, the rest of the party continued their drive up the beach and he stepped upon the hotel porch. Governor Bowie, of Maryland, was the first to address him, and after a few moments' conversation others crowded around, some who knew him to speak to him, and others stimulated by that idle curiosity so characteristic of our American people, which, while meaning to be neither obtrusive nor obsequious, is certainly akin to both. Gradually he worked his way into the hotel, the throng still crowding about him, and through a cordon of handshakings and introductions made his way into the ladies' parlor. Here cordially greeting such ladies as he knew he was introduced to a host of others, and with the ladies doing the most of the talking, the conversation, as readily may be imagined, became exceedingly brisk and animated. However, he did not linger here long, but threading his way back again through the crowded hallway into the office, lit a cigar and engaging in conversation with several gentlemen, they talked of the weather, the races, how he liked Long Branch, the bathing, the drives—everything but politics. Even the European war was not touched. A column or two might be filled with these conversations; but as they were only for the most part commonplace observations about commonplace topics, and nothing of public interest said on either side, it is not worth while. It is well enough, perhaps, though, to put on record what the President, as a smoker, says of himself, so that the public may no longer be led astray to the extent it has been on this subject.

"I thought you were never without a cigar," said a gentleman to him as he began smoking.

"I am not the great smoker the papers make me out to be," he said, smiling. "I smoke, in fact, quite moderately."

Re entering his carriage as it again drove up, which was about an hour after his arrival, the President returned to his cottage, where he remained all the afternoon. Colonel Robert Campbell and Mr. Hugh Campbell, of St. Louis, and their families, who are at present at the Branch, dining with him.

DEPARTURE FOR WASHINGTON.

The President left to-day for Washington, as it was stated in my letter of yesterday he intended doing. He left in the twenty minutes past six P. M., train, however, instead of in the early morning train, as was his original purpose. He was accompanied by General Porter, Master Ulysses Grant and Miss Maggie Dent, his niece. His visit to the national capital will be very brief, continuing only through to-morrow, when, taking the night train, he will again return here, remaining over Sunday, and then starting on his trip for St. Louis, which he also designs to make as lively as possible, not being absent probably over a week. Of course his visit to Washington has given glow to speculation and excited a host of surmises on the subject. The prevailing assertion is that there is to be a Cabinet meeting; but the assertion certainly is grounded upon no reliable information on the subject.

MR. FRELINGHUYSEN AND THE ENGLISH MISSION.

The matter of the English mission and Mr. Frelinghuysen's acceptance or refusal of the same is still in abeyance. The reason of its continuing so was elicited, I am told, by a guest of the West End Hotel, whom Mr. Frelinghuysen was recently stopping, through a brief conversation the other day with the latter gentleman. I give the conversation as it was related to me:—

"I see it published," said the guest in question to Mr. Frelinghuysen, "that it is doubtful whether you accept the Ambassadorship to the Court of St. James."

"I have not decided yet," answered Mr. Frelinghuysen.

"No private business prevents your going?"

"No."

"No ambition for such high office?"

"Cannot say that."

"Are you willing to tell the reason?"

"I have a horror of crossing the ocean. I dread sea sickness."

CONCERT AT THE CONTINENTAL.

There was a very fine concert given last evening at the Continental Hotel by Harry Sanderson, of well known metropolitan musical memory. It was something more than a concert. In addition to Mr. Sanderson playing with his usual exquisite skill on the piano, and cornet, violin and trombone solos by other artists, there was the dramatic mixed in. Mr. Allerton and Miss Rawlinson gave something from "Romeo and Juliet" and a portion of "Hamlet." There was a numerous attendance and all were highly pleased.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Meeting of the Board of Aldermen—More Gas—The New Post Office Enclosure—Fire Extinguishing Job.

Pursuant to adjournment the Board of Aldermen met yesterday afternoon, with the President, Alderman Coman, in the chair. There was a full quorum of members present, including

ALDERMAN JEROME,

who made his first appearance as a municipal manager. He sat beside the indefatigable Irving and carried himself with becoming dignity. After the usual preliminaries had been disposed of a large number of resolutions were introduced relative to the laying of gas mains and the erection of gas lamps. Among these was one providing for the erection and lighting of extra lamps in front of St. Gabriel's church. Some time ago a resolution was adopted authorizing the erection of gas lamps in front of St. Gabriel's Academy. This extra light is not enough for the Rev. Mr. Clowrey's congregation, so extra lamps are needed to give the east side more light. The resolution in question was with others laid over in accordance with rule. A resolution was introduced directing that the temporary resolution granting more room for

THE NEW POST OFFICE

authorities to carry on their work be rescinded and repealed, and empowering the Department of Parks to take possession of the property belonging to the city and now enclosed by the Post Office fence. This resolution was also laid over. A petition was received from the Metropolitan Fire Extinguishing Company and accompanied by a resolution virtually to the above mentioned company by empowering the company to lay their mains and pipes in the streets and avenues and along the bulkheads of the city. On motion the matter was referred to a special committee appointed by the President, comprising Aldermen Woltman, Reilly and Irving.

A large number of papers were received from the Board of Assistant Aldermen, embracing the usual style of resolutions and ordinances, all of which were laid over.

Alderman WOLTMAN remarked that the Committee on the

REDISTRICTING OF THE CITY

would be ready and happy to receive any suggestions on the subject until the 10th inst. The usual eulogistic resolutions in relation to the demise of the late Assistant Alderman Henry Rogers were adopted, after which the Board adjourned.

A NEWARK SWINDLER CAPTURED.

Charles H. Seaton, of No. 17 Fair street, Newark, a young man twenty-three years of age, of excellent family and splendid opportunities, was arrested in Newark yesterday and committed to the Essex county jail to await trial on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences. A few days ago he chiselled Dr. George S. Ward out of six dollars, two journalists out of five dollars each, Dr. Haight, the police surgeon, twenty dollars, and a host of others in like amounts. Some time ago, after disbursing some $20,000 on the young man's behalf for debts and other matters, his father, Mr. Horace Seaton, turned him adrift and now refuses to do anything for his dishonored son. For a considerable time past the latter has been the associate of gamblers and other disreputable persons. His young and charming wife is nigh broken hearted at the infamy thus heaped upon her young life.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

WALL STREET, THURSDAY, August 4—6 P. M.

The directors of the Bank of England, at their usual weekly meeting this forenoon, further advanced the rate of discount, which is now six per cent. This action of a body of men who are credited with ever faithfully discerning the financial prospect, although generally anticipated in this country, has a significance and importance which point directly to the dread that England is about to be involved in the war of empires which seems to hang over the destiny of all Europe. A few weeks since the rate of discount was only three per cent. It was at first advanced but a half per cent, as much through an ignorance of the magnitude of the war then threatened as through a desire to prevent a financial panic and to bring the money rate gradually to a figure which should protect the interests of the Bank of England in the monetary movements to ensue upon a state of hostilities. The latest advance—the doubling of the original rate—and the prospect of a higher rate next week, which would not in the least surprise Wall street, are a tightening of the purse strings which denote an apprehension that the great "shopkeeper of nations" may be drawn into the war. To us in this country it is significant that in London to-day, despite this change in the discount rate, our five-twenties were firm and a shade higher while English consols were weak and lower. What is the inference? That the time has already passed when the first symptoms of war and the rush to sell depressed our securities below their intrinsic value, and that the reaction has set in which is to assign them their real place above every European national security dealt in at the London Stock Exchange. The speculative holders have lost their bonds and the capitalists and private investors now hold them. Had this intelligence reached us at any other season than the present, when Wall street is at the seaside and watering places, the dulness and inactivity of the hour would give place to buoyancy, activity and excitement.

MONEY EASY.

The money market showed a further relaxation, and the transactions on call at rates above five per cent were purely exceptional. The prevailing rates on all classes of collaterals were four and five per cent, the larger government dealers having balances left with them at three per cent.

Foreign exchange was lower, although nominally quoted 109¼ a 109¾ for sixty days sterling and 110½ a 110¾ for sight bills. The present demands of the market seem to be fully supplied by the bills drawn against the recent loan of the Baring Brothers.

GOVERNMENTS STRONG.

The government market was strong, but shared the general dulness of the day. Prices advanced on light transactions, and the undertone of the market was decidedly firm. The steadiness of our securities in the English market, the light offerings to-day at the Treasury purchase and the steadiness of gold, combined to occasion an advance of a quarter to three-eighths per cent in the more active issues. It should not be forgotten, however, that the foreign bankers, who were heavy purchasers at the recent low quotations, bought simply for a brief speculative turn and not for investment. Hence, if the present prices should bring out sales of the bonds so held it will not be at all surprising. Indeed, the street may be prepared to see these reactions; but if the telegrams concerning the London market state the truth it is extremely doubtful whether speculative sales at these prices will prove at all profitable. The government offer to purchase elicited proposals for the sale of only $1,793,200 bonds. The market was highest at the close, when the quotations on the street were as follows:—United States currency, sixes, 110¾ a 111; do., 1881, registered, 113¼ a 113½; do. do., coupon, 113¼ a 113½; do. five-twenties, registered, May and November, 110½ a 110¾; do. do., 1862, coupon, do., 111 a 111¼; do. do., 1864, do. do., 110⅛ a 110⅜; do. do., 1865, do. do., 110¼ a 110½; do. do., 1865, coupon, January and July, 109⅛ a 109¼; do. do., 1867, do. do., 109¼ a 109⅜; do. do., 1868, do. do., 109⅛ a 109¼; do. ten-forties, registered, 104 a 104¼; do. do., coupon, 107⅛ a 107¼.

GOLD STEADY—121¾ A 122.

The gold market opened on the street at 122, but declined to 121¾ on the firm prices for our bonds in London. As soon as the advance in the rate of discount was made known the price recovered to 122, but again went off to 121⅝ when it was found that the higher rate for money in London had not depressed American securities. Furthermore, although the specie shipment to-day was over a million and a half dollars, it is doubtful whether the shipments for the immediate future will be in proportion to the amounts sent since the inauguration of hostilities in Europe. The condition of the foreign exchanges is against any other presumption. The course of the market is shown in the table:—

10 A. M.	121¾	1:51 P. M.	121⅝
10.11 A. M.	122	2 P. M.	121¾
11 A. M.	121¾	2:27 P. M.	121⅝
12 M.	121⅞	3 P. M.	121¾
12.54 P. M.	122	4 P. M.	121⅝
1 P. M.	121⅞	5.30 P. M.	121¾ a 121⅝

In the gold loan market the rate ranged from four per cent for carrying to flat for borrowing. The Siberia, for Europe, took out $1,581,555 in specie, and the Morro Castle, for Havana, $31,105. The operations of the Gold Exchange Bank were as follows:—

Gold cleared	$34,646,000
Gold balances	972,028
Currency balances	1,193,905

STOCKS DULL AND STRONG.

The Stock Exchange was only thinly attended and dealings were barely sufficient to make prices. In the Long Room the transactions were also on a limited scale; but the tone of the market was more buoyant on the apparent reversal of speculative feeling concerning American securities in the English market. Should foreign capital thus come to our shores seeking a refuge from the dangers attending a grand financial revulsion in the Old World, instead of recalling what it has already invested with us, it would prove a godsend to the half stranded cliques who, loaded up with stocks, are now sailing in very shallow water. The only danger is that the near approach of the season for active, if not stringent, money may cheat them of a harbor wherein to market their stocks upon the community. A "short, sharp and decisive" bull movement at this hour might prove a brilliant victory, but woe to the stragglers whom the ides of September shall catch looking for still higher prices when all their companions have scrambled to get out at the top of the market.

The following were the closing prices at the last session of the Stock Exchange:—Canton Company, 62 a 67; Consolidation Coal, 30; Cumberland Iron, 40; Western Union, 34¼ a 34⅜; Quicksilver, 4½ bid; Mariposa, 5 a 5½; do., preferred, 9½ a 10; Boston Water Power, 15 a 18; Adams Express, 67½ a 67¾; Wells-Fargo Express, 13⅜ a 14½; do. scrip, 2¾ a 2⅞; American Express, 43 a 43½; United States Express, 43¾ a 44; Pacific Mail, 39¼ a 39⅜; New York Central consolidated, 91½ a 91¾; do. scrip, 87⅜ a 87¾; Erie, 20 bid; Harlem, 132 a 134; Reading, 95¼ a 95½; Michigan Central, 117½ bid; Lake Shore, 89⅝ a 89¾; Illinois Central, 131 bid; Cleveland and Pittsburg, 105 bid; Chicago and Northwestern, 80¾ a 81; do. preferred, 83¾ a 83⅞; Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, 77 a 79; New Jersey Central, 100¾ a 100⅞; Rock Island, 113¼ a 113½; Milwaukee and St. Paul, 58¾ a 58⅞; do. preferred, 75½ a 75¾; Toledo, Wabash and Western, 48 a 48¼; do. preferred, 72 bid; Fort Wayne, 92¼ bid; Chicago and Alton, 116 bid; Ohio and Mississippi, 32⅞ a 32⅞; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 104¾ a 105; Morris and Essex, 88¾ a 90; Boston, Hartford and Erie, 3⅜ a 3½; Hannibal and St. Joseph, 107; do. preferred, 108½ a 108¾; Cleveland, Columbus and Indiana Central, 17¼ a 17¾.

MOLASSES.—There was no change to note in the market, which was dull for all grades, the demand being light. Prices, however, were quite steady, especially for the grocery grades. The sales were unimportant. Annexed are the current quotations:—

NAVAL STORES.—There was rather more activity in the market for spirits turpentine, the demand being almost entirely from the trade, but the offerings were more than adequate to the demand, and prices receded ½c. per gallon, closing at 38½c., with, however, some holders demanding 39c. The sales were 2,0 bbls. at 38½c. a 39c. a 40c.—chiefly at the inside price. Rosin—Strained was steady, with a moderate demand, while the other grades were slow of sale but unchanged in value. A First Class Sensation in the Capital—Caning Match Between Ex-Congressmen — Reports from Indian Agencies—Important Tribes Peaceably Disposed.

WASHINGTON, August 4, 1870.

Causes of the Suicide of the Late French Minister—New Facts Elicited—His Insanity Established.

Since the desease of Prévost-Paradol many little facts have come to light tending to show that the lamented Minister did not, as a responsible being, put an end to his own existence, as at first very generally supposed, but that, on the contrary, his was a tolerably well ascertained case of self-destruction during a fit of insanity. The Marquis de Chambrun, one of the most intimate friends of the deceased, is well satisfied of the soundness of this theory, which, moreover, is the only one reconcilable with all the facts in the case. A few days ago the Marquis received a letter from M. Thiers, in which the latter says, substantially, that "poor Paradol was for a long time troubled with apprehensions of softening of the brain, and contemplated with horror the probability or possibility of having to live the life of one bereft of reason." According to M. Thiers Paradol had received medical attendance for his threatened malady while in France, and this fact, taken in connection with other little circumstances, would seem to establish with reasonable certainty that he was not sane at the time he put the pistol to his breast and discharged the contents into his heart. His letter to M. de Jardin and that to M. Berthemy are both consistent with this theory, so are his declarations to the Marquis de Chambrun and others, and his requests of them, in case anything should ever happen him, to take care of his children. It is believed now that when he made those declarations and wrote these letters the calamity that he anticipated was not suicide, but a loss of reason, which would unfit him to be any longer guardian of his own children. The act of purchasing the pistols also becomes cleared up consistently with the theory of insanity with the new light thrown upon it. In France he always kept pistols about his house as a measure of self-defence and protection against robbers. In the hurry of leaving that country he discovered he had neglected to bring with him his old favorite pistols. After being in this city a few days, and while suffering from the extreme heat and general debility, his cook came to him one morning and said:—

"Ah, Monsieur! this house is haunted. There are ghosts here, I am sure, for I hear strange noises every night."

M. Paradol answered, "Ah, yes! Marie, the house is haunted; but not with dead spirits. I am not afraid of the dead, but of the living."

The next day he bought the pistols and naturally enough told M. de Jardin that the reason he wanted them was because he was living alone and required them for protection against the possible attack of robbers. His daughter, who left this country under the impression that her father had died from natural causes, explained that he had been for some time in dread of insanity from softening of the brain, and also stated that it was his habit to keep pistols in his bedroom. This morbid dread of insanity, and the fact that his wife had died insane, weighed on his mind heavily, and, no doubt, hastened the terrible climax to his malady. The night preceding his death he had ordered his valet to rouse him early in the morning, so that he might take some medicine which had been prepared under his own instructions. From this it is inferred that when he retired to bed that night he had no thoughts of self-destruction; but he was unwell, and suffering greatly from the heat, and it is supposed that he woke up suddenly during the night with his head feverish and that in an instant the idea filled him that he was insane. That moment he took the pistol and shot himself through the heart. This is only a theory, to be sure, but it tallies with all the antecedent circumstances.

There is another little fact tending to show the condition of his mind. When he arrived here M. de Jardin asked him if he brought with him a court suit. He answered yes, but that he would not use it, because he felt himself too young in the diplomatic service to do any act that would make him appear so conspicuous. "Besides," said he, smiling, "you see the court dress is the same as that of the Cabinet costume, and when I return home and get elevated I will have this suit all ready." It is said, moreover, that he wrote a letter, addressed to M. Halevy, expressing a fear of approaching insanity, and begging him in that event to look after his children. I give these new points about the matter in justice to the memory of M. Paradol, which has been assailed.

A Speck of War at the Capital—Caning Match Between ex-Congressmen—A New Yorker Severely Punished.

The dulness of Washington was relieved somewhat to-day by the occurrence of a sensation nearly first class. There was a personal encounter between two live republican ex-Congressmen, and neither was killed. Neither experienced broken bones, though one of them got some smart whacks over the head and arms. The belligerents were Joseph Segar, of Virginia, and William S. Lincoln, of New York. Segar was chosen by the Old Dominion as Congressman at large, but was ruled out by the Committee on Elections and received two thousand dollars to soothe his wounded feelings. He is a Virginia gentleman, well up in years and wears gold spectacles, but he is full of fire and vigor and has the old Southern spirit that brooks not insult tamely. Lincoln was a Representative from New York in the Fortieth Congress; a little, dark-complexioned old gentleman, who sports a wig, and who, since his retirement from Congress, has become a very influential member of the lobby. He was quite active during the last session of Congress in working for several steamship enterprises, and was also interested in a railroad bill before the Virginia Legislature. It was his connection with the last mentioned affair that led to the unpleasant encounter with Segar the terrible. But of that further on. This morning Lincoln arrived at the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad depot in the regular train from New York. Little dreaming of the reception in store for him he jumped out of the car and was nimbly walking through the depot building when Segar, smoking all over with rage and indignation, suddenly appeared and interrupted his progress. Said Segar, "Now I've got you, you d—d scoundrel, at last!" Saying which Segar raised his cane and brought it down upon the wig of Lincoln with uncomfortable force. Segar followed up this hostile demonstration with sundry whacks upon the body of Lincoln, putting in one rather severe upon the forehead and another across the arm of the astounded little New Yorker. The latter promptly adopted the Fabian tactics, but it appears he retreated in very bad order, evidencing a high state of demoralization. As he ran he shouted out, "Hold him! hold him! secure him! He'll kill me if he's not stopped!" And thus he ran, followed closely by the irate Virginian, until some people, including a policeman, overtook the assailant and put an end to further demonstrations of a striking character. The policeman took Segar before a Justice of the Peace, and Lincoln was carried to his home, Ingle place, on Capitol Hill, and had his wounds dressed by Dr. Ford, who happened to be near by. The injuries of Lincoln prove to be not very serious.

Now, as to the cause of the affray. It is quite a long story, but may be told within a reasonably brief compass. Your correspondent endeavored to get statements from both the parties concerned, but though Segar very willingly gave his version, Lincoln declined to be interviewed at all, on the ground that he had got "hurt this morning." Only the side represented by Segar, therefore, can be given. According to Segar these are substantially the facts:—Some time last spring Segar was engaged by Colonel Joe Stewart to go to Richmond to secure the extension of the charter of the Fredericksburg and Alexandria Railroad Company, which had expired by limitation, and in which Stewart is said to have had a large, perhaps the controlling interest. Mr. Lincoln was also an agent or attorney of Mr. Stewart, and was found by Mr. Segar, on his arrival in Richmond, operating in the interest of Mr. Stewart and, seemingly of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company, which, in the event of the extension of the lapsed charter, was to build the road from Fredericksburg to the Potomac river. Stewart authorized Segar to unite with Lincoln to secure the desired legislation, and the two did for a time co-operate to that end. Segar stayed in Richmond some ten weeks explaining the merits of the proposed measure, and having been some twenty and more years a member of the Legislature and an ardent advocate of the internal improvements of his State, finally, by explanations to individual members and written and printed arguments, and by correspondence with Thomas A. Scott, President of the Pennsylvania Central Company, he succeeded in securing the passage of the bill. The general impression seems to be that his efforts chiefly secured the passage of the bill for the recharter. While Segar was operating for the success of the measure Lincoln accepted and acknowledged his efficient service in the premises. After it became apparent that the efforts of Segar had put the success of the measure beyond doubt, Lincoln became indifferent and set up on his own hook, along with a Mr. C. S. Bundy, of Richmond, for the purpose, it is said, of monopolizing to those two the whole of a fund which was in reserve to pay the fees of the agents and attorneys who might put the bill through. Segar thought he detected the purpose, and finding that a large amount of odium had gathered around the proposed measure on account of Lincoln and some of his associates, notified a leading member of the Senate that he had dissolved all connection with these parties, and regarded himself only in the light of a friend of his State in a matter of the utmost moment to her and her interests, so that his efforts in behalf of a great scheme of State interest might be separated from all sordid connection and be more likely to succeed. After Mr. Segar had given much time and earnest energy to the subject Mr. Lincoln addressed to Mr. Stewart many letters, not only depreciating his (Segar's) services, but grossly derogatory of his private character, styling him, in one of his letters, as "that villain Segar," and accusing him of drunkenness and falsehood. The affair has caused a good deal of excitement here, as both the parties are well known and have hosts of friends.

Indian Affairs—The Cheyennes Peaceably Disposed—Taking the Indian Census.

Acting Commissioner Cady has a report from agent Brenton Darlington, of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservations, saying that thirty-two lodges of the Cheyennes are at the agency. They are there voluntarily for the protection of life and property from depredations, and manifest a disposition to remain firm. Information has been received that Big Horse, the Cheyenne chief, with over twenty lodges, will be at the agency in a few days. Also, that Big Jake will soon follow with all he may induce to accompany him. There is an abundance of Indian testimony that Big Jake has been unremitting in his exertions to restrain Indian hostilities. There have been repeated invitations sent to the Cheyennes who are yet out to come in. They have been encamped on the south fork of Red river, some 300 miles from the agency. Little Raven is at the agency keeping a sharp lookout lest he be taken by surprise by hostile Indians, who, he says, are very wise and need close watching. He requested the agent to inform the Commissioner that it was unreasonable that he and his tribe should be deprived of arms while those tribes at war were able to obtain them in abundance. He also claims that the faith and promise pledged by the government in regard to mules stolen from his people by white men have not been fulfilled.

The Indian Commission will start for the Indian country in a few days. Brunot and Campbell will go to the Ogallala Sioux country to establish an Indian agency and trading post. Dodge and Stuart will aid the Commission before starting for the West by purchasing annuity goods in New York. Farwell, Lane and Collyer will visit the Osages, Pottawattamies and Creeks, and will consider the propriety of removing the Kansas Indians to some more suitable position.

General Sheridan's Visit to Europe.

It is stated at the War Department to-day that when Lieutenant General Sheridan heard of the declaration of war he applied for and obtained an indefinite leave of absence to visit Europe merely as an observer of events. It was only an individual arrangement.

The Alabama Swamp Lands Patents.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office on the 2d inst. transmitted to the Governor of the State of Alabama patents for swamp and overflowed lands enuring to said State under the provisions of the act of September 28, 1850, situated in the Mobile land district, and embracing 76,854 acres.

Ruling of the Internal Revenue Commissioner.

In the case of a distiller, whose bonded warehouse and contents was accidentally destroyed by fire, it is ruled that the destruction of the spirits is not such a removal as renders the tax due at its occurrence, but that in such cases the tax on the spirits destroyed is not due until one year from the date of the entry bond.

The Attorney General on Georgia Affairs.

Attorney General Akerman declines addressing the Southern Republican Club, because in doing so he would have to allude to the Georgia case, which may soon come before him for a legal opinion. It is understood that Mr. Akerman favors an election this fall in that State.

ESCULAPIUS IN TROUBLE.

Dr. Grindle Again Accused of Abortion or Malpractice—He Shows Fight.

The Board of Health on Wednesday notified Coroner Flynn that Dr. Henry D. Grindle, of 120 West Twenty-sixth street, had reported a still birth in his establishment. As the Doctor is notorious as the proprietor of a private lying-in asylum and has frequently been under surveillance the Coroner directed Dr. Shine to proceed to the house and make a preliminary examination, when he was assaulted by Dr. Grindle, who was arrested at the instance of Dr. Shine and locked up over night. Yesterday Coroner Flynn examined the mother, Mrs. Mary Mann, and ascertained that she is the wife of a William H. Mann, a lawyer, having an office at 34½ Pine street, and that she resided with a Mrs. Brown, at 130 East Sixteenth street, prior to the 16th ult., on which date she entered Dr. Grindle's house to await confinement. She stated that labor continued for over a day and a half, and as there was suspicion of either criminal carelessness, negligence or ignorance Dr. Grindle was notified that he must find bail in the sum of $5,000 to answer.

ANOTHER STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE.

Is it Another Etzold Case?

Mr. Julius Weil, a well known dry goods dealer in Jersey City, disappeared on Tuesday evening and has not since been seen by his family or friends. When he was leaving the store he sent a note to his family stating in a rather indefinite manner that they would hear from him. Mr. Weil's partner, on learning of his disappearance, took possession of the goods in the store, and the business is suspended. Mr. Weil was a man of steady, temperate habits, of good standing in the business world until recently, when he became pecuniarily embarrassed. Many of his friends believe he will soon return.

A DASH AT THE SERGEANT.

Late on Wednesday night one Thomas Brady, a notorious rowdy and ex-policeman, perpetrated an outrageous assault on Sergeant Benedict, of the Newark police force, while being arrested for drunkenness. Springing at the Sergeant he tore open the wound inflicted by Martin McLaughlin, the blacksmith, with a red hot poker, some weeks ago. But for the opportune arrival of constabulary assistance the Sergeant must have been killed. Brady was locked up over night and yesterday morning admitted to bail.

DEATH'S DAWNING.

John Real, the Condemned—Last Hours Upon Earth—Final Attempt to Gain a Respite—Real's Last Appeal.

The last day of the unhappy Real in this world has passed, and within a few hours after these lines are perused by the readers of the HERALD he will be summoned to the presence of his Creator, a victim to the inexorable dictum of the law. Two years and twelve days have elapsed since that midsummer night on First avenue when police officer John Smedick died by his hand, and over a year ago the memorable trial which lasted but one day took place. Yesterday morning the ominous scaffold was erected in the Tombs, within a few feet of the cell in which for many a weary day and night the condemned prisoner waited in vain for the word which would remove from him the dread shadow of the tree of death and give him a chance to spend the remainder of his life in solitude and repentance. Every effort that could be made by his counsel, ex-Judge Stuart; by his other friends, by the clergymen who attended him and by those who thought that imprisonment for life was a sufficient expiation for his crime, was tried; but all in vain. The last attempt was a telegram sent by two Catholic clergymen to Governor Hoffman at Newport to grant the unhappy prisoner even a week's respite to enable him to be better prepared for his awful doom. The answer to Judge Stuart and Sheriff O'Brien was a dignified but firm denial to interfere with the course of the law. The sound of the hammers putting together the timbers beneath which he is to stand this morning, and over which will pass the rope that will encircle his neck, awoke him yesterday morning and roused him to a sense of the short span of life allowed him. He was visited at an early hour by two clergymen from St. Peter's church and by the good Sisters of Charity, who have striven long and earnestly to prepare his soul for the last dread tribunal before which he must stand. All through the day his demeanor was that of one who was fully prepared for the great trial and whose soul was resigned to an inevitable fate. In order not to disturb this calm serenity of mind the prison officials mercifully spared him the infliction of Bohemian interviewers, who congregated outside the prison like a flock of vultures on the scent of death. He received the news of the failure of the last attempt to save him with unwonted resignation and only displayed emotion in his expressions of gratitude towards those who worked so earnestly and perseveringly in his behalf. Last evening he bade farewell—a tearful, sad, affectionate one—with those he loves and whose love for him was unchanged—his poor father and sisters—and the door of his cell clanged on him to be opened again this morning for the last time. Outside the Tombs, on the steps and beneath the massive Egyptian columns, groups of men, women and children were huddled, talking in hurried whispers of the dread tragedy of the coming day. The tenement houses of the neighborhood were emptied of their cosmopolitan, ragged inmates, and the moonlight fell in flickering rays upon awe-stricken faces, merry children unconscious of their proximity to death, and reckless, brutalized features, as some of the choice spirits of the "dangerous classes" passed by trolling out some Bacchanalian ditty. One or two of the "guardians" of the night paced on their beat, past the iron railings and granite walls, within which a fellow being was counting the sands of life fast running out. Midnight at the Tombs, with the shadow of the scaffold falling athwart the bleak corridor, its victim in his barred cell striving to shut out from his mind the terrible reality of his position, the never ceasing hum of metropolitan life without mingling with the anguished sobs of a father and sister, is a subject to reduce to seriousness the veriest scoffer that ever lived.

Real's Last Appeal to the Public.

John Real last night issued his last appeal to the public, as follows:—

TO THE PUBLIC:—Governor Hoffman has refused to reprieve me. I must die an ignominious death. I know this. I feel it; but my poor suffering sisters and my faithful father feel it far more than I. It is on this account, as well as on my own, that I feel it my duty to give the public the following facts:—

I killed Smedick, but I did not murder him. He had repeatedly beaten me and had repeatedly threatened my life. I killed him in self-defence. I shot him after he had struck me twice and was following up his attack. I am able to prove this by the testimony of unimpeachable witnesses, but the opportunity has been denied me. Governor Hoffman would not listen to these witnesses, but I am sure that the people will. Governor Hoffman would not go behind the record of the trial, but I firmly believe that the public will. A few words regarding the trial.

I was tried, convicted and sentenced within twelve hours. The public were excited over the Rogers murder and I was offered as the sacrifice. Now, when the question of my reprieve comes up the public are again excited over the Nathan murder, and I am again to be offered as a public sacrifice. These are harsh words, but the facts will bear them out. My counsel vainly asked for time to produce witnesses. Their testimony would have convinced the jury of my innocence of the crime of murder. They would have been in the court room if they had known the trial would have been finished on that day. But the Judge was inexorable. He refused to delay the trial. The record was made up without the testimony of the eye-witnesses who could have cleared me of murder, and I was doomed to death.

Who were the witnesses against me? They were officers Lambrecht and Mee, and men named Carpenter and Hyland. Lambrecht is now accused of perjury before Justice Coulter; Hyland has been held to bail for drawing a revolver on a citizen, and Carpenter has been found guilty of robbery and sent to the Penitentiary. I appeal to the sober sense of the people. Should a man be sent to his grave on the testimony of such men as these?

Officer Mee was allowed to give only just testimony enough to weigh heavily against me. He gave words spoken by me in the excitement caused by my arrest. He was not allowed to give further conversation with me, which would have destroyed the effect of those words. In his sworn affidavit before Commissioner White he says "He had another conversation with Real next morning, in which Real stated the reason why he shot Smedick was that he met him on the street and commenced to beat him, as he had done before, and that he could not stand his clubbing any longer. He said he was on his way to his vessel which he was watching when Smedick assaulted him."

John Mahony, an honest teamster, in a similar affidavit, says:—"I saw an officer strike a man twice on the head with a club, and then saw the man turn and give two shots, and then saw the officer fall." Philip Comisky, a glassblower, without a stain on his reputation, make affidavit that he "saw the officer in the act of using his club against Real, and saw him strike him or at him one or more times, and immediately after deponent heard two pistol shots."

All this is evidence that Governor Hoffman refused to consider, preferring the testimony of men who have since been sent to the penitentiary or brought before the courts for perjury and other crimes. Could the Governor have reflected that he was bringing shame and sorrow upon the gray head of my fond father, and rending the hearts of my four affectionate sisters with anguish, when he resolutely shut his eyes to the testimony, and resolved to go by the record of Judge Barnard's court.

But the Governor does not even heed the record of the Court. The jury, after duly weighing the evidence, unanimously recommended me to mercy. And this is not all. Three of the jurors have made affidavit before the Governor that "We would not have assented to such a verdict, except that we were assured that a recommendation to mercy would be sure to effect a commutation of the penalty to imprisonment for life in State Prison. That recommendation was agreed upon in the jury room, with the understanding and belief by all the jurors, so far as we know, that the prisoner would not be hanged, but would finally be sent to State Prison."

With these facts ever burning upon my mind I have not been without hopes of a commutation of my sentence. It has seemed impossible to me that such evidence should not have had its effect upon the mind of the Governor. What man in my position could have thought otherwise. The Governor offers the Nathan murder, and Judge Barnard held up the Rogers murder as an excuse for my death.

But what had I to do with those murders? I did not murder either Mr. Nathan or Mr. Rogers. I should have had justice without any reference to those murders. Should I, an innocent man, be sent to the gallows because the police failed to discover the man who did those bloody deeds?

But these are but mere excuses. I am sent to my grave for far different reasons. All my political friends in the Twenty-first ward were opposed to Mr. Hoffman's nomination for Governor. They gave all their support to Mr. Henry C. Murphy, of Brooklyn, who was a rival candidate. So long as my friends sustained Mr. Hoffman and the other Tammany nominees, so long I was undisturbed. My case was never called to trial until my friends supported Mr. Murphy as a candidate for Governor months and months after I was arrested. These facts are not only known to Governor Hoffman, but to nearly every politician in the city. The Tammany politicians took advantage of the excitement caused by the Rogers murder to punish my friends for their refusal to support Hoffman by bringing me to trial. Oakey Hall sat upon the bench with Judge Barnard, and the trial was rushed through without allowing me time to defend myself. Had my friends continued to uphold Tammany, I might now have been at liberty. Men are now at large through the influence of Tammany who have committed, unlike me, unprovoked murders.

Take the case of Donohue. He is charged with the murder of Florence Scannell. He is now out on bail. Why? Is it not because he is a member of the Tammany Hall General Committee, and because he has been made a member of the Americus Club since the murder? I feel confident that I, like him, would have escaped if my friends had followed Tammany's leadership. Before the trial one of my friends met Peter B. Sweeny in the Park. Sweeny said, "Real must be hanged. He has got to be hanged. The interests of Tammany Hall demand it."

Was it for the interests of Tammany Hall that Governor Hoffman refused to commute my sentence? Was it for this that he refused to grant a respite when implored by some good priests who asked for a few days in which to prepare my soul for eternity?

But the will of God be done. I feel that the Governor has acted willfully, but from the bottom of my soul I forgive him, and I pray that God may forgive him too, for I feel in my last moments that he needs the forgiveness of God. I die warmly thanking my friends for all they have done for me and they have done much. To the Sheriff and the warden and all the keepers I am indebted for the kindest sympathy and attention. God, I am sure, will reward the faithful priests and the good Sisters of Mercy, who have been unremitting in their kindness to me. I die guiltless of the stain of murder. Of this I am conscious. And I die in the hope that this fact will soften the bitterness, the pain and the anguish of my poor father, sisters and relatives while weeping over my grave.

BASE BALL NOTES.

For the game between the selected nines from New York and Brooklyn, to take place to-morrow on the Union Grounds hosts of volunteers have been found, and the committee have selected nines which, it is believed, will give a good exhibition of the beauties of the game. The principals in the late ocean yacht race have been invited and are expected to be present. At the conclusion of the base ball match the Knickerbocker La Crosse Club will give an exhibition of their skill, so that aside from the charitable object of the occasion there will be presented amusement enough to attract a large crowd. Should the weather be unfavorable the game will be postponed until the following Saturday.

The Forest City Club, of Rockford, Ill., on Wednesday defeated the Athletics, of Philadelphia, the score being—Forest City, 14; Athletics, 10.

NEW YORK STATE POLITICS.

Session of the Republican State Committee at Saratoga—A Convention Called for September 7—Contests Between New York City Factions—The Speeches Delivered Wednesday Night.

SARATOGA, August 4, 1870.

The Republican State Committee had a six hours' session at Congress Hall to-day. A State Convention is called to meet at Saratoga Springs on the 7th of September. Hamilton Harris was appointed to prepare an address to be published with the call, which is the same in terms as the one issued last year.

Regarding the contests between the Seventh, Ninth and Fifteenth districts in New York city, the committee heard arguments and decided to have a revision of the enrolment in the Seventh district. The Ninth district contestants compromised, and each side will have half of the committees. In the Fifteenth district no action is deemed necessary.

After hearing contestants the Fifteenth district committee voted. No action was needed on their part and the organization was recognized by the city committee as regular.

I am assured that the motive of this visit is personal in part. I hope it is in the unceasing round of politics; nothing is so good as the kindness and regard of those whose esteem we value. In return for your presence I offer my thanks and well wishes to you all. You are republicans—I am a republican. We were never more earnest republicans than now. Your presence is gratifying, because it means more than personal regard to any man. It means readiness to carry the old flag, with the old dash and determination, and to win the old victories. The unity of the republican party, concord and harmony among republicans everywhere, is the meaning of us all. The work of the republican party is not finished, nor is there any other party able or willing to finish it. The republican party has done much, indeed more than any political organization in history. It has rescued a great government from conspirators and traitors; it has conducted successfully the greatest and most costly war of the human race; it has administered government and finance in a period of transactions and events more complex, vast and novel than any one in the annals of recorded time. Beyond all this, it has emancipated four million slaves and placed them on their feet, clothed with the garment of American citizenship. It has recreated half a continent. It has established liberty and right everywhere and made the name of America respected, if not terrible, among the nations of the earth. War has gone from us; its bloody shadow falls on France; its tramp rocks thrones, and kings are sea sick now. Perhaps war has gone with avenging hand to smite the sick man who dominates the land of Lafayette; perhaps war strikes the hour for the Emperor who plotted and schemed against us in the day of our trial. However this may be, God grant that no harm may come to Germany. Germany sympathized with us, the sons of Germany fought for us, and cheers of victory went up in the German tongue from the burning battle fields of our rebellion. Germany's constitution is like ours, Prussia believes as we do, in education for all, and republicans everywhere join me in the hope that no harm is in store for Germany. Returning to our own land, war, as I said, has gone. America, blessed with the opportunities, and charged with the responsibilities of a dear-bought peace, is either to be crushed by the weight of her magnificent destiny, or to rise to a height of civilization and grandeur which the nationalities never reached and the centuries never knew.

In the career before us, as in every free system, government is to be directed by political organizations. The republican party is now directing national affairs, and it has never failed in the presence of emergencies or events. It cannot be spared; the nation needs it yet. It has a Congress of which it does not become me here to speak. It has a President who has never disappointed a just expectation, and who, as a patriot, a soldier, a President and a man, has earned the confidence and admiration of his countrymen. Turning from the greatest military command and of military successes, he assumed the most complex and commanding of civil trusts, and he has so borne himself in his great office that every reasonable expectation has been realized. Were we ever stronger abroad than now? In what has the administration failed at home? The revenue has been honestly collected—so honestly that for fifteen months, with sources of revenue curtailed by Congress, the receipts have exceeded by sixty-six millions the receipts for the corresponding period under the preceding administration. The public debt has been rapidly diminished, the public credit lifted up at home and abroad, and yet taxes have been dismissed until but few remain. Eighty millions of taxes have just been dispensed with—fifty-seven millions of internal taxes and twenty-three of customs duties. Is there more that men had a right to expect? Such stewardship deserves and will receive the public approbation. New York's great seal should attest the general approval, and with concord among members of the same household of faith, New York's great seal will attest it. We have at last an act of Congress under which an election may once more be held in the city of New York—a law seeking to substitute a fair election for that scandalous farce which has so often been enacted on election days. The provisions I speak of will call into being inspectors to watch the registry, the vote, and, above all, the count, and the Marshal is empowered to preserve order and safety at the polls. With a fair election and votes fairly counted, we need only conciliation and unity among ourselves, and then action, earnest action, and New York will pronounce for the republican party and the administration of General Grant. To this end let us all work. But I do not mean to make a speech, and, renewing my acknowledgements, bid you all good night.

After Senator Conkling had concluded, he was followed by Horace Greeley, who dwelt upon the constitutional amendments as the great work of the party. Both speakers were enthusiastically applauded and confirmed the inauguration of harmonious feelings. Greeley is named to-day as the probable candidate for Governor.

THE CLAM GOURMANDS.

The Great Annual Connecticut Clam Gorge—The Shellfish Fat Men—Ponderosity on Its Dignity—The Sceptre Departs from Fisk.

GREGORY'S POINT, ON THE SOUND, CONN., August 4, 1870.

The third annual clambake of this society took place this afternoon at this place, near Norwalk. The day opened fine, and a large crowd of the "heavy weights" and citizens from the surrounding country were in attendance. Dinner was served under the Fairfield County Agricultural Society's tent at two o'clock. Mr. Sanford Sholes, proprietor of the Gregory Point House, had provided liberally, as he thought, for all the hungry mouths that might offer; but before dinner was one-half over he found that he had missed his mark. Owing to the extreme dry weather or some other cause appetites were more than usually sharp, and a few more bushels had to be supplied. The oldest inhabitant never saw 125 bushels of round clams, fifty bushels oysters, twenty barrels sweet corn, 500 pounds fish, &c., demolished in so short a time. The City Band of Bridgeport, Conn., under the leadership of Mr. H. Blish, furnished fine music. In the midst of the eating, drinking and music a terrible thunder storm passed over, drenching the hungry souls to the skin, and the force of the wind burst in the tent, somewhat marring the enjoyment of those inside, although the rain itself was quite acceptable. Previous to dinner the election of officers took place, as follows:—

Andrew S. Hull, of Danbury, Conn., President; L. H. Copeland, of Bridgeport, Conn., Vice President, and B. W. Maples, of Westport, Conn., Secretary.

The great "cane" of the society, held for the past year by J. A. P. Fisk, of New York, was transferred to the new President. The weighing of the monsters then took place:—

THREE MEN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

During the prevalence of the storm yesterday three laborers, standing in the porch of the new Methodist church in Hoboken, were struck with lightning and fell senseless to the ground. They were not fatally injured, however, as they were partially resuscitated, by Doctor Elder, and conveyed home. One of them, named Nicholas, resides in Twenty-fifth street, New York. Another, named Andrew Banners, lives with his family in Meadow street, Hoboken. Two immense rafters were shattered, causing heavy damage to the church. It was probably the "returning shock" which affected the men.

YACHTING.

The Race for the Queen's Cup.

The most extensive preparations are being made for the great race on Monday next for the Queen's Cup. Should the elements prove favorable the display will undoubtedly be the finest ever witnessed in the bay. American yachtmen are confident that the much talked of prize will not pass from their hands; but the history of yachting shows that in such contests the victor cannot, with any degree of certainty, be pointed out before the struggle. Mr. Ashbury will courageously enter the list of competitors with the famous Cambria, and should he carry the honors he will have achieved a triumph that must elicit universal admiration. A large number of steamers will convey spectators over the course, and the race will be watched with the deepest interest.

The following official letter has been forwarded to Mr. Ashbury by the Secretary of the New York Yacht Club:—

JAMES ASHBURY:—

DEAR SIR—I am instructed by the judges of the contest for the "America" Cup to express to you their desire that you elect any position in the line formed for the start that you may feel disposed to take.

The club steamer will be on the ground and aid you in assuming such position on the morning of the race.

Yours, &c., H. MORTON, Secretary New York Yacht Club.

Notice to Mariners.

The Newport (RI) News of 2d inst says:—

The masts having been cut away from the wreck of bark Trojan, sunk back of Fort Walcott, there is nothing to mark her whereabouts except at low water, and she is likely to become an obstruction to navigation. She was sunk there against the protests of U S Engineer Houston, some 4 years ago, to extinguish a fire burning in her hold, and it was only finally consented to with the promise that she would be raised. It is not likely now that that promise will ever be fulfilled.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A—THE LIFE SUSTAINING PRINCIPLE.—THE VITAL and the muscular systems are entirely distinct from each other. A man may have the brawn of a Hercules, but if he is deficient in vital energy he will not wear as well or last as long, or be as healthy and happy while he does last, as the man of ordinary, or even slender build, who possesses a larger share of this animating principle. One of the greatest recommendations of that pure vegetable invigorant, HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, is that it increases the vital force of the system. No medicine can double the volume of a man's muscle, or thicken and vulcanize his thews and sinews; but Hostetter's Bitters has an effect much more important. Its use promotes constitutional vigor. It reinforces the life-power, of which bone and sinew and muscle are merely the instruments, holding the same relation to it that machinery does to steam. Let the slight and apparently fragile take heart, they may have more stamina, though far less physical strength, than the broad-shouldered athletes they regard with envy. To restore, to sustain, to increase this staminal principle which, when in full supply, is the source of health and the best guarantee of longevity, is a special property of the famous restorative. It is not only a specific for dyspepsia, biliousness, intermittent fevers, constipation, &c., and a preventive of all diseases of a malarious character, but the best of all medicines for strengthening the constitution and awakening the powers of nature, from whatever cause they may have become lethargic.
